NOW IS THE TIME.

Take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil now. Not next week or next month, but now. You need it to put fat on your bones and strength in your body to stand the cold and trying weather of the next few months.

Nine-tenths of the population would be benefited by taking Scott's Emulsion regularly three times a day for a month or more every fall to fortify and strengthen the system against the cold and constant changes that occur through the winter. The benefit is particularly marked with young, delicate children. No food that they can take begins to compare with Scott's Emulsion.

Pure cod liver oil is scarce but if you get Scott's Emulsion you'll be sure to get only the purest and best oil.

Bazaar Nets $70,000.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 1.—Ninety-two thousand rubles ($70,000) was the amount netted by the grand bazaar in Salle de la Noblesse, St. Petersburg, organized by the Grand Duchess Vladimir. Half of this sum was taken in by the Grand Duchess herself, and probably was the largest ever taken by one woman at any bazaar in the world. The Loteris Allegul Petus Chevaux la Roue also had large receipts.

Null and Void.

Caracas, Feb. 1.—The Federal High Court, sitting in full session, with ten judges on the bench, has finally handed down a decision in the long-drawn-out asphalt case. The court gives as its unanimous judgment the opinion that the claim of Messrs. Warner and Quinlan is null and void to the Felicidad mine.

BRITISH ARMY COUNCIL

Commander-in-Chief Abolished For Inspector-General.

Royal Commission Reports Urgent Need of Permanent Defence Committee—Military Men Should Be Chosen, Says the Report, Not Hitherto Closely Connected With Existing Methods, As New Measures Demand New Men.

London, Feb. 1.—The report of the Royal Commission, known as the Lord Esher Commission, which was appointed last November to advise the Government concerning the creation of a board for the administrative business of the War Office, has been issued.

With the approval of the King, and upon recommendation of the Commission, the Government has decided to appoint an army council similar to the admiralty; to abolish the office of commander-in-chief of the army, and to create a new post, that of Inspector-General, whose principal duty will be to inspect and report on the efficiency of the military forces.

Permanent Defence Committee.

The report points out the necessity of greater permanence in the Defence Committee, in order to insure a continuous policy, and it suggests the addition to the existing Defence Committee of a permanent secretary holding office for five years, two naval officers selected by the admiralty, two military officers chosen by the Viceroy of India, and, if possible, other colonial representatives holding office for two years.

With regard to the War Office, the Commission suggests that the Secretary of State for War be placed in the same position as the First Lord of the Admiralty, directly responsible to the Crown and to Parliament. The constitution of the army council aims at decentralization of the individual members of the council being entrusted with different branches, such as armament, supply, finance, etc.

New Men Wanted.

In this connection the report remarks significantly: "New measures demand new men; we therefore attach special importance to the appointment of military members not hitherto connected with existing methods, and who, therefore, are not likely to be embarrassed by the traditions of a system which is to be radically changed."

The commission consider the abolition of the post of Commander-in-Chief to be imperative, and it urges the divorce of the administrative from the executive department.

The Inspector-General is to be appointed for five years. He will report upon actual facts without expressing opinions on politics.

Constrasting the efficiency of the Admiralty with the inefficiency of the War Office, the report complains that the latter "has no thinking department."

Morning papers applaud the report and express the hope that the Government will execute the reforms with courage and promptitude.

Oil As Fuel For Navy.

London, Feb. 1.—The new British battleship Hibernia and sister ships, Britannia and Africa, are to be fitted for storage of oil as fuel in large quantities.

Wolseley's Hint to War Office.

London, Feb. 1.—Field Marshal Lord Wolseley, formerly commander-in-chief of the British army, has written again in reference to the decline in military recruiting in Great Britain. He reaffirms his belief in the superiority of the army of the United States, saying: "The American Government is wiser than ours. They pay their men well, with the result that the American army, so far as it goes in numbers, is the finest in the world. Until we adopt a similar method of obtaining recruits, our army never will be in a thoroughly satisfactory state."

30,000 Deserted Wives.

London, Feb. 1.—Another woman reported missing has awakened interest in the records of Scotland Yard, which show that London contains no less than 30,000 deserted wives.

Magistrate Dropped Dead.

Port Colborne, Feb. 1.—John P. McRae, police magistrate and owner of the American Hotel block in this village, dropped dead on the street Saturday evening.

Mother and Babe Burned.

Tonawanda, N.Y., Feb. 1.—Mrs. John Miller and her 8-day-old baby were so badly burned last night that both will die. A kerosene lamp exploded.

RUPTURE IS DELAYED

Russia's Latest Reply Is As Skillful and Astute As Ever.

Britain Throws the Weight of Her Influence For Peace, and Tokio Advices Indicate That Japan Will Respect Her Wishes—Meanwhile, Both Sides Are Making Prodigious Preparations For War.

London, Feb. 1.—Russian diplomacy has proved as skillful and astute as ever, and has succeeded in placing Japan in a difficult and embarrassing position. Although the reply made to Japan's last note includes the draft of a treaty substantially conceding Japan's demands as regards Corea, the effect of it on Manchuria is by no means so satisfactory. It nominally concedes China's sovereignty over the northern province, but also contains a detailed statement of Russia's claims and interests so stated that a recognition of them would practically concede to Russia a similar control over Manchuria to that which England now exercises over Egypt. Should this treaty be ratified it, in fact, gives Corea to Japan and Manchuria to Russia.

Britain For Peace.

The question that now confronts Japanese statesmen is, Whether or not the position is such as to justify a declaration of war? Great Britain has thrown the weight of her influence on the side of peace, and the latest advices from Tokio indicate that her wishes are likely to be respected by the Japanese Government. It is felt, however, that the rupture is only postponed, and that the arrangement now proposed does not contain material for a permanent treaty of peace. But to avert the immediate outbreak of war will relieve the present tension and affords time for future negotiations and developments. This in present circumstances is a great gain, and seems to be pretty well assured.

Baron Hayashi on the Situation.

Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister to Great Britain, informed the Associated Press last night that his Government did not know what Russia's answer would be, and that it was, therefore, impossible to say whether war was probable or not.

A despatch received here from Tien Tsin says Russia is purchasing large quantities of Kaiping coal for immediate delivery at Port Arthur, where the stocks of coal are believed to be rapidly running low.

Japan Is Secretly Mobilizing.

The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Chee Foo cables he has learned that the Japanese naval reserve was mobilized last week, and that the first army reserve was partly mobilized with great secrecy, the troops arriving at their destinations disguised as coolies. Over 100 transports have been requisitioned, the correspondent continues, and twenty-eight transports and thirty-eight warships are lying at Sascho. Forty transports filled with the Kumanato division are lying in Takeshiki harbor, in Tsu Shima, ready for invasion. The destination of these latter vessels is believed to be Chung Yu, whence the isolation could be easily effected.

The Argun Incident.

"The Russian and Japanese authorities," the same correspondent continues, "profess ignorance of the Argun incident, but I learn that the Japanese cruiser Chiyoda signalled the Argun to stop, and as no notice of this was taken, fired across the bows of the Argun, whereupon the Russian steamer, which was beyond neutral waters, stopped, and the Chiyoda sent a search party on board."

The correspondent of The Morning Post at Chee Foo cables that a British vessel and some others engaged in a regular service to Port Arthur had been stopped when about to enter that port.

Competent judges, The Post's correspondent goes on, predict the total failure of the Russian commissariat in the event of prolonged hostilities.

Japan Orders Biggest Yet.

London, Feb. 1.—Vickers, Maxim & Armstrong yesterday received formal orders to expediate the construction of two new battleships for Japan. These vessels are to be not only the most powerful afloat, but are ordered ready on the shortest time on record for ships of such dimensions. Each will be of 16,400 tons displacement, 19 knots speed and be able to discharge eleven tons of projectiles per minute in the main artillery.

Orono, Feb. 1.—Geo. Smith died at the residence of his [illegible]-in-law, Wm. Bradley, just five miles north of here, Saturday. If he had lived until the 4th of next May he would have been one hundred and four years old.

Sir Wilfrid Will Speak.

Montreal, Feb. 1.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier will address a meeting Saturday evening next in the Monument National in connection with the St. James division election.

Embro Church Burned.

Embro, Feb. 1.—The Congregational Church in this place was destroyed by fire at an early hour yesterday morning.

ABOLITION OF SALOONS.

MANITOBA WILL REFUSE TO GRANT SALOON LICENSES IN FUTURE.

A telegram from Winnipeg on the 27th inst. says: Attorney-General Campbell at last night's session of the Legislature outlined the proposed changes in the liquor law of Manitoba. The main planks of the Government platform are:

1. A good license law properly enforced.
2. Total abolition of all saloon licenses.
3. Abolition of wholesale licenses in rural municipalities.
4. Stringent legislation dealing with interdicts.
5. Improvement of condition of bona fide hotels.
6. Elimination of undesirables as license holders.

This is further evidence that when any practical legislation is offered it comes from a Conservative Government.

Rear-Admiral Charles S. Cotton sat one evening at a dinner party beside the Bishop of Durham, noted for his wit. Near the Bishop there was a millionaire manufacturer, a stout man with a coarse laugh, who every little while cracked a stupid joke. I had always said that if I ever had a stupid son I'd make a parson of him."

The millionaire roared out his discordant laugh, and the Bishop of Durham said to him, with a quiet smile:

Bishop Willard Francis Mallalieu of the Methodist Episcopal Church is opposed to the diminutive salaries that congregations, able to do better, sometimes pay their pastors. "I once knew an excellent young man" said Bishop Mallalieu one day in Boston. "He was in the church just married, small salary, but contented and happy. Some twelve or fifteen years went by. I had lost sight of this young minister—forgotten him, as we will sometimes—when suddenly I met him on Tremont street, dressed well, but not all clerically. We shook hands. He said he was doing excellently.

"What church," said I.

"Oh," said he, "no church — the wholesale hat business."

"But why did you leave the church?"

Walter Camp, the athletic adviser of Yale University, was recently entertaining a gathering of his undergraduate friends with experiences of his own. He told of a dinner where a charming young woman was seated next to an exceedingly deaf old man. She had done her best to interest him, but had found it necessary to shout out each remark unto the third and fourth narration before the old man could catch the point. So the time dragged along, till the dinner was waning and the fruit was passed. The young woman determined to make a final effort at being agreeable, so she threw her voice into saying:

"Do you like bananas?"

"How's that?" asked her neighbor in a surprised tone.

"Do you like bananas?" she repeated.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

FRIDAY MORNING SESSION.

Council resumed at 10 o'clock, Warden Faulkner presiding.

A communication was read from Mr. Jas. Waytock, of Madoc, calling the Council's attention to the dangerous condition of the bridge over Deer Creek.

Some By-laws Read.

The following by-laws were read a first time and referred to a Committee of the Whole on By-laws, namely, to borrow certain sums from the Merchants' Bank; to appoint a member of the Board of Audit and High School Trustees; to appoint a Board of Examiners of Teachers; to fix the allowance per travelling expenses of Public School Inspectors.

On motion the Committee of the Whole on communications resumed, Mr Hanley in the chair.

Communications Considered.

The communication from the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry was read. It was in effect to the opinion that the number of jurors selected for the various courts could well be reduced.

Mr. McFarlane thought the communication was on the right line. He moved, seconded by the Warden, that the Council concur in the memorial.

Mr. Denyes spoke in support of the memorial, as did also Mr. Thompson.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

The Bancroft Petition.

A petition was read from the ratepayers of Bancroft Village, asking that this place be made an incorporated village.

Mr. McFarlane considered that it would be folly to oppose the petition, and he moved that the Council concur in the petition, and that the necessary steps be taken to incorporate the village.

On motion Messrs. D. Fuller and T. Kavanagh were appointed to take the census of the village, the County to bear half the expense.

The Committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

In By-laws Again.

On motion the Council went into Committee of the Whole on bylaws, Mr. G. Nicholson in the chair.

The blank in the by-law re loan from Merchants' Bank was filled in with the sum of $15,000.

Mr. W. R. Aylsworth was appointed a member of the audit for the Administration of Justice accounts. The following were appointed as High School Trustees: Stirling High School, Dr. G. Faulkner; Madoc High School, W. J. Allan; Deseronto High School, S. Russell; Trenton High School, W. W. Simmonds.

Messrs. John Johnston, William Macintosh and F. E. Seymour were appointed as a Board of Examiners to grant third-class certificates.

The travelling expenses of Mr. John Johnston, the Inspector for South Hastings, were fixed at $234 per annum, according to the amended statute made in that behalf, and $15 for postage.

The travelling expenses of Mr. Wm. Mackintosh, School Inspector for North Hastings, were fixed at $259.50, and $30 for postage.

The Committee rose and reported. The report was adopted.

It being the hour of noon the Warden left the chair.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

Mr. Mallory moved, seconded by Mr. McFarlane that the Executive Committee be composed of the Warden, Messrs. McFarlane, G. Nicholson, Fleming and Mallory. —Carried.

On motion the Committee of the Whole on roads and bridges resumed, Mr. A. Nicholson in the chair.

The Special Committee's report re complaints about certain foremen of the County was taken up and considered. Messrs. S. Tumman, W. Wickett and T. Farnham were present, and occupied seats within the bar.

Mr. Tumman was heard and said that he and his gang worked at Bush's bridge, near Stirling, as rapidly as the material could be secured. He contended that the men did not waste any time whilst at work on the bridge in question. He was not three weeks at work upon the bridge, but spent seven days at a bridge on the boundary between this and Northumberland County.

In answer to an enquiry Mr. Tumman said that when he went to repair a bridge there was often no material for him to go on with.

Mr. McFarlane thought that someone was to blame in not having material on hand when the gang went to make repairs.

Mr. Clarke asked Mr. Tumman if he considered that he did faithful work for they County whilst fixing up Bush's bridge.

Mr. Tumman—"I think I and my men did work faithfully for the County."

Mr. Clarke asked Mr. Tumman if there was not not considerable waste time in repairing the bridge at Glen Ross.

Mr. Tumman said there was some lost time on account of lack of material.

Mr. McFarlane said that there were complaints made and it was necessary to have an investigation. There might be an improvement in the manner of laying out the work. Mr. Tumman was an excellent man, and his explanations had been given in a fair way.

Mr. Thompson thought that there was no blame attached to Mr. Tumman. Evidently there should be some new method adopted in the future as to work on the bridges.

The clause in the report in reference to Mr. T. Farnham was next considered. It was that Mr. Farnham was credited with 21 1-2 days during one month, while his gang was only credited with 18 days. The report also showed that whereas he had only taken out 400 yards of gravel from two pits, he credited himself with spreading 591 yards.

Mr. Farnham stated that he often took 50 or 60 yards of gravel out of a pit before he got to the place of the pit where there is good gravel. He usually took 1 1-4 yards as a load and gave the County credit for this amount, and by reason of this more gravel is placed on the road than he is credited with taking out of a pit. He also put some gravel on which was banked on the road. As to his extra time, he could account for that by having to meet the Superintendent.

Mr. Clarke did not consider it right that the foremen should take out 1 1-4 yards of gravel from a pit and give the proprietor credit for only 1 yard.

Mr. McFarlane thought that the foremen should not be asked to come and meet the Superintendent once every month in reference to his report.

Mr. Farnham said he had never met the Superintendent unless he had been notified to do so.

Mr. Clarke did not think that Mr. Farnham took out of any pit 1 1-4 yards of gravel, as his waggon box was but 9 feet long, 3 feet wide and 12 inches high. This box would only hold one yard.

When Trees Go to Sleep.

Trees and plants have their regular times for going to sleep, as well as boys and girls. They need the same chance to rest from the work of growing and to repair and oil the machinery of life. Some plants do all their sleeping in the winter while the ground is frozen and the limbs are bare of leaves. In tropical countries, where the snow never falls, and it is always growing weather, the trees repose during the rainy season or during the period of drought. They always choose the most unfavorable working time for doing their sleep, just as man chooses the night when he cannot see to work.

Seed Sprouting Device.

A simple germinating apparatus can be made from two ordinary plates and a piece of flannel cloth. Fold the cloth and lay it on one plate, placing the seeds between folds of the cloth, which should be moist, but not dripping. Cover the whole with another plate inverted and stand in a warm place. If the test is made during cold weather, care must be taken to stand the plates where the temperature will not fall much below 50 degrees F. at night, and will be about 65 or 70 degrees during the daytime.

VERMILYEA & SON.

A Goddess of Africa

A Story of the Golden Fleece.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Come on—haste to the wedding. Once in there we will fire the pan, and you can scrtach away to your heart's content while I crawl into the stomach of the grand-daddy of all the idols and remove the booty."

Thus he artfully lured them on. Even the little Frenchman was shivering, not with fear, but excitement. Though he had seen these monstrosities before he was not averse to gazing upon them again, for strange to say they seemed to exercise a peculiar charm, as hideous objects generally do.

Another passage was traversed. It was no longer a tunnel. The work of man could be seen in the blocks of stone that shaped the walls and even the raof. When one remembered how this temple had for many hundreds of years been a ruin, it was almost like unearthing the relics of Babylon and Nineveh.

Upon these blocks of stone strange pictures had been cut, which no doubt formed stories recording the achievements of this remarkable people in bygone days when old Krokato was hardly cool after the last paroxysm. Many nations thus wrote their history by means of crude pictures, and in both Egypt and Amerca the reading of these stories has given the world much valuable information regarding the past. Suddenly the passage ceased, and another opening yawned before them. Rex kept the light almost at their feet as they advanced, so the others could see next to nothing, although they were impressed with a consciousness that fearful shapes hung out near them.

"Have you the pan ready with the flash-light powder?" asked Hastings.

The sturdy Briton assured him all was in readiness for a plunge.

"Then touch it off, and remember—silence!"

Instantly there was a "click," and the dreadful darkness was shot into shreds by myriad flashes of dazzling light.

Eager eyes were turned around so as to take in the entire circuit, and in truth, such an amazing spectacle has seldom if ever before greeted human eyes.

No one uttered a sound—indeed, they were almost paralyzed with the sensation of awe that swept over them, and could only stand and gape and turn their eyes from one colossal figure to another, as though the power of speech had been temporarily placed under a ban by a magician's wand.

As suddenly almost as it had flashed into being, the light died down leaving them in blackness again; but Lord Brmo had prepared for that, and a succession of charges was touched off, which promised to turn night into day so long as they lasted.

As they looked again it seemed to their excited imagination that the idols moved their heads, and a sensation of horror came over the venturesome intruders, who had dared the vengeance of gods in their quest of gain; but a closer examination disclosed the fact that a multitude of hideous bats, no doubt recognizing some affinity of the awful shapes that formed the circle, had attached themselves to ears and noses and chins in countless numbers and hung there, heads down, like brown stalactites.

The sudden flash of the sunlight, in the chamber where gloom had held sway, lo, these many hundreds of years, had startled the creatures of darkness, and there was a constant migration, as in clouds they sought various exits in the way of crevices.

The artist stood transfixed before the chief of all the idols, a monster with three heads and four arms, a fetish that if but glanced at a single time was hideous enough to give one the nightmare for a month.

"Well?" asked Rex, smiling.

"I say, isn't he just a beauty now? Did you ever in all your life dream there could be such a monstrosity? Ye gods! I wouldn't miss catching his royal highness triple mug for the Shah of Persia's biggest diamond. Go on with your infernal robbery Rex, my boy, and leave me alone until I've transferred this treasure to paper, and then I'm with you heart and soul. Duty first and play afterward you know, old chap."

Jove! he was already at it, and the way his pencil dashed over the paper spoke of aroused genius. Indeed, under ordinary conditions it would be something of a job to drag the excited artist out of the ancient temple until he had drawn the more remarkable among that collection of deities, since they excelled any he had ever run across in India or China, in temple, pagoda or mosque.

Rex left him to his idols, Rex who had something on the carpet that was of much more importance to him than all the ugly images the world ever knew, Rex who was quivering with eagerness to know whether he would, as on the previous occasion, be interrupted just when about to possess himself of the treasure of the crater temple.

CHAPTER XI.

PARADISE.

Hastings knew what lay before him, and was also aware of the value of time in a case where tremendous perils hung like a pall over their heads.

He advanced full upon the colossus with the three heads. The exceeding brightness of the flash-light powder penetrated every niche and corner of the dusty and musty old chamber, revealing an accumulation of horrible atrocities in the line of idols that might have staggered even a cool customer like Jim Bludsoe; and while the cowboy gave no evidence of alarm, no doubt his flesh experienced that peculiar prickling sensation as if red ants were creeping over the surface of his body.

As for the professor, he was wildly exuberant, and poured forth a jargon of French and English, regardless of the fact that no one paid the slightest attention to his rhapsody, each being concerned in his own affairs.

It seemed to Rex that the triple headed squatting monster glared at him with the eyes of a demon, and the stone arms appeared ready to clasp him in their cold embrace; but Rex had looked upon this monster before and was not at all alarmed.

He passed between the king idol and the one on his left, which resembled a carved Buddha he had seen in an Indian city. As he stood there, the three heads were fully six feet above his shoulders. The shadows behind the great image were clean cut and intense, just what might have been expected when a white flash illuminated the centre of the apartment.

Rex knew what to do. He had been posted even on his first visit, thanks to the explicit directions given him in advance. His hand touched the cold stone, slipped along it carefully until a certain projection reached when the proper pressure caused a portion of the pedestal to give way, revealing an inky black cavity.

Strange colored fires seemed to gleam above—lances of green and blood red and golden yellow flashed across each other. Rex knew the origin of these—that they came through the eyes belonging to the three heads of the heathen image, eyes formed of great jewels perhaps, rubies, emeralds and topaz, through which Lord Bruno's photographic flash-light shone with the power of an electric flood.

Another instant and Rex had drawn a match along the cold stone, and as the flame burst forth he applied it to a small candle which he had taken from his pocket, which in turn was fastened to the flag that formed the base of the idol's interior, using a little melted wax to secure it there.

He gave but a single glance of curiosity upward, and smiled at what he saw, comprehending the use to which the stone steps must have been put in the time when this idol was worshipped by the people who had their habitation in the ancient crater of Krokato, ages before the Zulus appeared upon the scene.

Undoubtedly crafty priests were wont to secrete themselves within the hollow god, and in various ways suited to their unscrupulous ingenuity work upon the credulity of the prostrate worshippers who cast themselves before the stone image.

Rex knew that such impositions were not altogether unknown in the present day, although perhaps they might not be so openly practiced—still, the abject devotees were just as blind with regard to the fearful deceptions practiced upon them.

After that one cynical survey of the empty space above his head, Rex turned his attention to another quarter, in which he had more reason to be interested.

The dust of ages had settled upon everything—a fine impalpable dust that upon the slightest movement filled the air, almost causing strangulation. When centuries roll on such an accumulation assumes generous proportions even in the most air tight repositories as the pyramids of Egypt—grain by grain it gathers, growing slowly but surely as the years creep on toward eternity.

As Rex Hastings knelt there, with his remnant of a wax candle serving as a torch, his eyes fell upon what appeared to be little more than an irregular heap of stones, lying at the foot of the rude steps, and covered with dust to such an extent that its nature could only be vaguely guessed at.

A second look might arouse still greater curiosity, for it would disclose the fact that something had recently occurred to disturb one end of the dust strewn ridge. Rex could no doubt have explained that to the queen's taste, since his hand had been the prime cause of it all.

Even now he lost no time in speculation, but reached out a hand that trembled in spite of his remarkable nerve.

Another instant and the decoration had been accomplished—the eyes of a latter day argonaut had fallen upon the treasure of the ancient gods.

The little pile semmed to be covered with a parchment like fabric that had resisted the ravages of time, and at the same time served to protect from the encroaching dust the precious collection which it shadowed.

When this cloth had been cautiously dragged aside, disturbing as little as possible the accretion of ages, Rex gasped for breath, and surely with cause, for certainly the eyes of adventurer never before were ravished with a more wonderful sight since the famous conquistadors of old, Pizarro and Cortez scoured Peru and Mexico, unearthing the treasures of the sun-worshippers and the ancient Aztecs, and gathering rooms full of gold and silver.

Heaped upon each other, in a confused mass, just as they had been tossed into this sacred and secret hiding place ages ago, perhaps by the last priest of the oracle, were scores of golden images and vessels of the most amazing and grotesque shape imaginable, such as would fill the soul of an antiquarian with the most stupendous delight.

Many of these were possibly idols, others may have had some connection with the temple. One must admire the delicate workmanship shown in their construction, and it was very evident that this ancient people who lived in the heart of southern Africa, even before the blacks held undisputed sway, must have brought their knowledge of working in the precious metals either from far away India or from Egypt.

Little Rex cared at that particular moment what the origin of this exquisite gold filigree work upon several of the vases might be—his whole soul was wrapped up in contemplation of the collection, and the thought that by right of discovery it was his almost overpowered him, for at this moment of exaltation scruples were not apt to arise within his mind regarding his prerogative as claimant.

He again stretched out his hands and allowed his eager fingers to close about a vase that stood almost eight inches high. It was bound over the top with parchment tied with several ligatures, and as he raised the whole Rex found it necessary to exert considerable strength.

To snatch out his knife and score away the parchment was but the work of a second, when out poured a handful of small stones that glittered and glowed even in the feeble candle-light.

They were gems of the purest water, precious stones, rudely cut it is true, but many of them in such a prismatic way as to bring out astonishing beauty—rubies that may once have adorned the brow of a Cleopatra, dazzling diamonds that in the cycles of time passed since they were torn from their original lodgment in the dark mines of the earth, possibly glittered in the crown of some mighty rajah of ancient India, or the coronet of a Chinese Mogul. In mystery was their story wrapped, and in impenetrable gloom must it ever remain.

After lying here in the ruins of the Temple of Azor these centuries, when the world had made such progress, with the Anglo-Saxon race dominating its arteries of trade and seeking adventure and conquest in every land upon which the sun shone, behold, in due time one of this same venturesome people, fated to tear away the barrier that had so long prevented these princely gems taking their rightful place among the coveted treasures of a world's admiration, and once more casting them forth to become an object of barter among the nations.

Rex was a practical man after all, and he sternly crushed down those feelings of awe and veneration which he must naturally experience upon gazing upon such a remarkable treasure trove.

There would be a better time and opportunity to consider these things in the future, when danger no longer hovered about them.

That he had anticipated this very pleasant moment became evident, for what should he do but haul out from a pocket several stout little canvas bags, such as are used by banks all over the world when transporting the gold coin of the realm.

Snatching up a handful of the gems he thrust them into the yawning mouth of a small bag.

As he did so, from the idol above came a rusty sound very like a dismal groan, and which naturally thrilled the adventurer, such was the strain upon his nerves.

Springing to his feet he dashed out of the cavity and sprang around the base of the idol, half expecting to have one of those many arms swoop down and thrust him through with a poisoned blade.

A cheery laugh greeted his appearance and did much to restore his equanimity, especially when his eyes also reassured him that all was well.

The man who laughed was of course Lord Bruno, still squatting on the head of a broken idol which Red Eric had rolled out for his benefit, and evidently making remarkable sketches of the assembled deities, which in due process of time would ravish the eyes of those who patronized the enterprising London magazine for which the artist travelled.

"Don't wonder it set your nerves in a tremble, my boy. It's only Jim,

A man whose cardinal goal in life is to make money will steal. To such a man stealing is a fine art, upon the possession of which talent he congratulates himself. Getting more than belongs to him he considers thrift; causing one man to fail that he may rise he considers self preservation. He is not exactly a highwayman—no, he lacks the criminal chivalry and physical daring of that class of robber. He prefers to be a genteel scoundrel and so works the wax of his egotism into a being whom he esteems to be exempt from the Ten Commandments and immune from criticism. He is encouraged in this hallucination by his fellow townsmen, and as his wealth expands he rises to a loftier plane in society, in commerce, in politics and in religion.—Schoolmaster.

AFTER BREAKFAST CHAT.

Containing Some Suggestive Reflections For the New Year.

A new year of neatness and order brings harmony and proportion, for one must have both. Some persons are personally neat, but their belongings are never in order, and, then, per contra. Yet in housekeeping many elements are involved in harmony in spite of the assertion that "better is a dinner of herbs where love is than a stalled ox and hatred therewith." He who wrote it must have been a fervent lover, for most men like Chicago beef even to the accompaniment of discord. The chemical basis in us demands good food.

Said a sister once, "My brother did so enjoy his dinner that I determined he should have a good one every day in the year, and he did."

"It cost money," I objected.

"Don't you ever have a fresh whole dinner just for yourselves?" I asked.

"Oh no. We are just women and do not need it."

Depreciation of sex and annihilation of stomach and cheer were alike contained in her words.

On the other hand, one has a proud respect for the maid of all work and for the solitary inmate of an apartment or the overburdened mother of a large family who sets the table in order before she eats. Still is it worth while, I often ponder, to have so much fuss just for oneself or one's family? "Fingers were made before spoons," etc., and then I try disorder for a few days and am beset with weariness and hunger, reasoning, however, that, having saved time and money, I can afford to have dyspepsia. But my family can't even if I can. So I begin again to set the table with grace and to loiter over my meals, and, lo, the family are jolly, and I am no longer blue or ill.

Each new year should be the happiest one of all our lives, for experience lays up its accumulating treasures, and we find that "self help is God's help."—Kate Gannett Wells in Boston Cooking School Magazine.

There is only one place in the world where the sun sets twice daily, and that is at Leek, in Staffordshire, England. The reason of this is that a jagged mountain is situated to the west of the town, and in the evening the sun sets behind it and darkness comes on. Then the first sunset occurs, the gas-lamps are lit, and apparently night has set in. But it has not, for in the space of an hour or so the sun reappears again through the opening at the side of the mountain and daylight again appears. Artificial lights are extinguished and daylight again prevails, until the sun descends below the opening and the second sunset occurs and night comes to stay.

TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

Governor of the Cape.

Sir Walter Hely-Hutchinson, Governor of the Cape, was educated at Harrow and Cambridge, and called to the Bar at the Inner Temple. He went out to Australia as private secretary to Sir Hercules Robinson (afterwards Lord Rosmead), then Governor of New South Wales. One of his first duties was to accompany Sir Hercules to Fiji, whose ruler, the ex-cannibal King Thakombau, had decided to cede that Pacific group to Queen Victoria. Sir Hercules added the islands to the British dominions in her Majesty's name, but all the details and correspondence were carried out by his private secretary. After this Australian apprenticeship, Sir Walter was promoted to the West Indies, afterwards to Malta, and ten years ago to South Africa as Governor of Natal. That was a post of difficulty and danger at the outset of the late war, and if the Boers had not stopped to besiege Ladysmith, there is no telling what might have happened to Natal and its Governor. Two years ago, when Lord Milner decided to concentrate his energies on the work of administration and reorganization in the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony, Sir Walter was promoted from Natal to the Cape.

Antarctic Eccentricities.

Some of the seamen returned to New Zealand from the Discovery, who have had experienced of both the Arctic and Antarctic, say that the cold in the latter is less severe, and the atmosphere drier. A curious phenomenon they did not expect, and cannot explain, is the fact that the cold winds in the Antarctic were usually north, while the comparatively warm winds were southerly. They saw icebergs of the most fantastic shapes, resembling houses, churches, and steamers. The sledge dogs struck work repeatedly, and the men had to do quite as much pulling as the animals. In the western sledge journey an ice-slide was descended in one minute, ten seconds. It took three days to ascend the same slide on the return journey, the sledges being hauled up by block and pulley.

Farmers and New Ideas.

Farmers are generally accused of being slow to adopt new ideas. This is not because of the fact that they till the soil and milk the cows, but because they live farther apart than other people and do not enjoy the social relations open to other classes. New ideas do not meet with the advertising which they do among

POINTS ON FEEDING.

Keeping more cows than can be fed profitably is one of the most common errors in dairying, says a writer in the Practical Farmer. Very often the feed which goes to nine cows could be fed to six with better results. In fact, six will in many instances give as much as the nine would. We have a neighbor who is a careful manager, but every summer his pastures get short, and his cows give little more than half what they should. During the past summer he milked more cows than we did and would have needed to keep several more in order to get as much milk as we did, while no doubt his cows are fully as good as ours. I have noticed that when cows are well and regularly fed they do not go dry so long as otherwise. Scant feeding for a few weeks even is a great mistake, for it can be only partially made up when feed is flush. Then many farmers pay no attention to a balanced ration, feeding most of that which they have in abundance, and hence results are not always satisfactory. Clover, either as pasture or hay, is among the best all around feeds; also nicely cured corn fodder and millet hay are good. For a grain ration corn and oats ground and mixed with wheat bran and oil meal in proper proportions give excellent results. Most farmers prefer to feed only what they raise and have on hand. This is frequently a mistake.

Feeding Separator Milk.

Somebody writes to American Cultivator to complain of the effect of separator milk on young calves, causing scours or indigestion. The trouble was not with the milk, but its condition. Being heated at the creamery and remaining warm for several hours, it quickly sours, and sour milk produces trouble sooner or later, besides which the calf will not drink enough of the bad tasting stuff to keep him growing at full speed. The milk should be fed as soon as it comes from the creamery and should be fed warm. Big feeds of cold milk ruin a calf's digestion. If the milk is put in a cool place in a pail that is washed clean every day, it will usually keep sweet till the second feeding. If only slightly acid, its taste can be restored by adding a teaspoonful of cooking soda to the gallon. Separator milk is as good as any milk with the cream taken out, but to fatten veal calves a little flour or some other starchy food must be added, and the milk must be warm and sweet. Owners of separators have an advantage here, being able to feed the milk fresh from the machine.

Hay For Cows.

It is poor policy to scrimp the cows, losing more in milk than will be saved in hay. Fortunately in the year of high prices for hay it is possible to buy something a good deal cheaper than the top grades, which will make the best of cattle feed. Clover, alfalfa and clover mixed are all three good values for the prices which they bring in wholesale markets. One leading Massachusetts dairyman buys alfalfa hay in car load lots. It comes well cured, bright, clean and fragrant, and he finds it far better for milk production than the best timothy, but costing one-third less. Much of the clover hay is poorly cured this year, but with care it may be fed to farm horses as well as cows with good results. It is so likely, however, to reach the horses in a dusty condition that it is safer to give it all to the cows. In general, the more clover in the hay bought the better value for cattle.

When Cows Lack Lime.

When the cattle chew leather, wood or old bones, it indicates a lack of phosphate of lime in their food, which is required to supply bone material.

A teaspoonful of bone meal given daily with their grain will correct the habit and supply the deficiency which induces it. If the disposition to eat bones is indulged in when cows are in grass, the deficiency then evidently exists in the soil, and the pasture will be greatly benefited by a top dressing of bone dust. Two or three hundred pounds to the acre, sown broadcast, will repay attending expenses in a better yield and in quality of milk and butter.—Midland Farmer.

The Cows Were Starving.

The following incident recorded by the Ohio Farmer may have its counterpart in some other herds:

"Our veterinary editor was recently called to see a herd near this city (Cleveland, O.) that was running down without any apparent cause. At last he requested to be shown the food that was given them. The secret was there. It was commercial feed stuff, composed largely of ground corncob, oat hulls, etc. The cows were starving. He ordered a change of food, and the cows at once began to pick up and increase the milk flow."

Cement and Gravel Silo.

It is quite practicable to build a silo from cement and gravel. Indeed this style of construction is becoming quite popular in Canada, where the English practice of building once for all is more prevalent than on this side the line. Of course there will be some freezing, but this objection is not given much weight at the present time. It is not necessary to put such a roof on a silo as one would put on a barn or a house, but there should be roof enough to keep out the greater part of the snow in winter, and in practice nearly every silo is provided with a substantial roof.

When Alfalfa Fails.

The Oklahoma experiment station has been investigating the pasturing of alfalfa, and it finds that one of the chief reasons of failure is due to pasturing it with cattle or horses.

YULETIDE DECORATIONS.

There is nothing more delightful in housekeeping than decorating the table, and already the dainty housewife is pondering the matter of appropriate floral display for the time honored festival. The foundation of all artistic results lies in the pure white damask, on which every bit of color will stand forth as only a perfect background can make it.

Red is unquestionably the true color for Christmas decorations, if we would make them distinctive, and this bright color gives always a suggestion of warmth and cheeriness.

A most charming centerpiece is in the form of a star. Directly under the chandelier, bedecked with laurel and holly, place the table draped with white linen. In the middle put a tall and graceful crystal or silver candelabrum, trimmed with greenery and holly berries, each of its lights shaded with gauze or fluffy paper shades of a bright scarlet. At the base a large flat star radiates from the candelabrum in five points. A tin form serves as a foundation. This is packed with damp moss and then filled with scarlet geraniums, offset with a fringe of feathery green. The little flowerets of the geranium must be divided from the parent stem and packed quite compactly.

Placed about this centerpiece are four small, flat dishes containing alternately little mounds of ruby jellies and candied chestnuts piled cannon ball fashion. As far as is practicable the table service should be china ornamented with narrow red bands, supplemented by the usual cut glass and silver. The star may be filled also with holly berries, with a deep border of laurel leaves, or another variation of this idea is to form the star of heavily frosted evergreens, bordered with holly berries.

While holly and mistletoe for many decades held almost undisputed sway as Christmas decorations, their substitutes are now numerous. Lycopodium, familiarly known as ground (or running) pine, has a light, feathery effect and is lovely for festooning and drapery, or it can be made into flat wreaths and tied with smart bows of broad red ribbon. These wreaths may be placed at the four corners of the table or laid around the candelabrum placed in the center.

At each place a bunch of holly, tied with narrow green ribbons, and the name card are placed. These cards are easily made round, with a wreath of holly leaves on the edge, painted in green and outlined in silver, with silver lettering.—Boston Cooking School Magazine.

Potted Plants as Presents.

The last weeks before the holidays are crowded with belated shopping trips and half finished homemade gifts. Why work so hard to make "something that will answer" and yet that in all probability will meet no want and therefore receive little welcome? Why not save one's nerves and give more pleasure by buying a few blooming bulbs in pots or selecting some thrifty plants of oxalis, abutilon, ivy or geranium from one's own window garden, making the pots pretty with paper and ribbon after the fashion of the florists, if you like?

For Rough Hands.

When the hands look rough and red, an ointment rubbed in will generally make them more attractive. Mix together one dram of powdered borax, five ounces of rosewater and one-fourth ounce of glycerin. After washing the hands and drying them well rub this lotion in. Put on only a little, and if it fails to be taken up by the skin wipe it off and put less on the next time.

Coat For Motoring and Driving.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be too oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

Holloway's Corn Cure is the medicine to remove all kinds of corns and warts, and only costs the small sum of twenty-five cents.

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes; "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one-half, the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done, it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using 3 bottles of the Vegetable Discovery, the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 68 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer

THE PUBLIC should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure, deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure and really efficacious—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, and sores or hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

These two desirable qualifications, pleasant to the taste and at the same time effectual, are to be found in Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. Children like it.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will please you.

A long portage makes a heavy canoe.

They make one feel as though life was worth living. Take one of Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia, aid digestion, give tone and vigor to the system.

Lost chances never leave any trail.

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

Much talk, many lies.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state, tural.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

FOODS AND MILK.

Experiments Made by British Dairy Farmers' Association.

The effects of different foods on the quality of milk is one of the most important questions of interest to dairymen. If we expect a rich flow of milk, common sense will teach us to feed that which will produce milk. The journal of the British Dairy Farmers' association gives the following review of the results of experiments:

That when a cow is in full milk and full flesh she will give her normal quality of milk for at least a limited time even though the quality and quantity of food be very deficient.

That when in good condition a cow will take off her body whatever is deficient in food in order to give her normal quality of milk.

That an extra supply of nutritious food at all times increases the quality of milk, but the percentage of fat is not in any way improved by it, if anything the tendency being rather the other way.

That an extra supply of nutritious food almost invariably very slightly increases the solids, not fat, of the milk.

That a ration poor in food ingredients has a very slight tendency to reduce the solids, not fat, in the milk, but has little appreciable effect on the fat.

That with a poor ration a cow in full weight will lose carcass weight, while on a rich diet she will gain weight.

That, although the percentage of fat in a cow's milk may vary daily, we at present seem unable to control these variations or to account for them.

That for limited periods up to one month or thereabouts all ordinary quantities and qualities of foods seem to have no material effect on the quality of the milk.

That the only food which seems to have had any material effect on the percentage of butter in the milk is an excess of brewers' grains.

That very succulent grass has had only a very trifling effect in altering the percentage of fat.

That most foods convey some flavor to the butter, but scarcely any of them will alter its percentage in the milk.

That some foods exercise a material effect in raising the melting point of butter.

That the aim of all producers of milk, butter or cheese should be to feed what will give quantity in moderate amount and of a mixed nature, and the produce will be the best that the cow can give.

That extra quality must be looked for by improving the breeds and judicious selection rather than by any special foods or methods of feeding.

That the variations in the percentage of fat in a cow's milk are caused by something, but what that something is we at present do not know, though if we did we might be able to influence the quality.

Dairy and Creamery

Cold storage and process butter have done more toward fixing the price of butter than we perhaps thought while confronted with the oleo fraud, says Creamery Journal. That oleo has been a mighty competitor we all know to our sorrow. It has hurt us in hurting the butter market, and it has hurt our feelings sorely because its competition was one of fraud. But there is a legitimate competition or a legitimate factor in leveling prices in cold storage butter. When fresh creamery butter made in the winter had no competitor, but held butter from the farms, things were all favorable to the creamery, and forty cent butter in winter was accepted as a legitimate thing.

Farm butter, which was a drug at 6 to 9 cents a pound in summer, went with a rush in winter at 25 cents. Farm butter is worth more when made and less when held, but this is again modified by the demand from the process butter men. More than half the butter is still made on the farm, but the comprehensive scale upon which it is now processed, cleaned, made attractive to sight and to palate is a prominent element in modifying the market for all butter, creamery included. This is why we cannot figure out the effect of antioleo legislation to decimal fractions or even within a few cents.

Cold storage and process factories are with us to stay. Winter dairying is here to stay, but the profits of winter dairying are cut down and the business partially held in check by these two legitimate rivals, these levelers of prices. Well for us all is it that we have the oleo crowd by the hip. It is also well—yes, imperative—that we keep them within legitimate bounds.

Good Advice.

"Buy no 'preservatives' to use in milk, in cream, in cider, in canned or conserved fruits or in anything else that is to be used for food," very appropriately remarks the New York Farmer. "'Preservatives' prevent digestion at the same time they prevent the bacterial transformations that constitute souring or putrefaction. What is 'preservatived' is poisoned so far as its food value is concerned. Milk and cider and cream and butter and cheese and meat and fruit that cannot 'spoil' under exposure to the air at the ordinary temperature cannot be digested, and therefore all such 'doctored' things are utterly unfit for food. No farmer should invest in 'preservatives' of any kind. The laws of most of the states are against the use of preservatives, and it is right that they are Obey the laws."

THE GROWERS of BEEF CATTLE

In a country of such magnitude as this all prophecies in regard to future markets are liable to fail, even if based on apparently sound reasoning. And so they have failed thus far in the cattle market. Expectations of improved markets after the range cattle were out of the way have been disappointed by liberal marketing of farm cattle held back to be clear of range competition or kept in the country because of the fine fall weather, which permitted them to utilize pastures longer than usual. But now that the bulk of the heavy corn fed cattle and the grassers from ranges and farms are out of the way poultry and game are in the market to a large degree, and pork is comparatively cheap and always popular when cheap. But after December the poultry will no longer compete to an unusual extent. What are the prospects for cattle? During the late summer and early fall months not so many cattle as usual were put on feed, and there should not be a burdensome supply of fat cattle for midwinter. There are plenty of cattle on feed, but most of them will be ready later than usual because they started later. This is assuming that feeders have generally purchased the thinner and cheaper steers to feed and that the kinds that require a short feed are not a larger proportion than usual. It seems that conditions justify expectations of some improvement after this month, but there is no cattle famine in sight, as some of our hopeful friends believe. There are too many cattle and too much corn in sight to hope for really high prices for fat cattle.—Stockman and Farmer.

Percival.

Texas state fair in Dallas, 1903. His weight at the fair was 2,400 pounds, age four years. Percival heads the herd of Colonel B. C. Rhome, Fort Worth, Tex.

Mistakes In Feeding.

Professor Henry of the Wisconsin station claims that American cattle feeders are giving their stock too much grain. He says in part:

"I have spent considerable time in going through literature on the subject and am surprised that the British feeder gives to his fattening beeves but a small grain allowance. You all know that the turnip, or rutabaga, as we call it, is extensively used in feeding operations in Great Britain. On searching authentic sources of information I find that the usual grain allowance for the fattening steer in England and Scotland ranges from six to eight pounds per head daily. In a few cases it reaches ten pounds, and in only one case out of a score or more of reports have I found it stated that so much as twelve pounds of grain were fed to a steer in a single day, and this amount only at the close of the feeding period.

"The grains used in Great Britain consist usually of barley, corn meal, cottonseed meal and linseed meal. With the small grain ration are fed from fifty to a hundred pounds of sliced turnips, four or five pounds of cut straw and five to ten pounds of hay, either cut or long. On this ration the steer of England and Scotland usually makes a gain of between one and three-quarters to two pounds daily, or, say, from fifty to sixty pounds per month. There is no need of saying that the English stockman does not fatten his bullocks or that they are inferior to ours when they are sold for the block. The English stockman, as a rule, has good cattle, and he puts them on the market usually in a finished condition."

The Most Successful Farmers.

Every person who has enough judgment to go in when it rains knows either from experience or observation that our most successful farmers of staples are our live stock farmers, says Farm and Ranch. That doesn't mean hogs alone, cattle alone or sheep alone, but a judicious selection of different kinds of stock adapted to the farm and the farmer. In some cases hogs alone will work out all right. In other cases cattle or horses or sheep will do better for the farmer than any one kind. But on most farms several different kinds will prove more profitable than any one kind. Hogs may be kept, and in addition as many sheep as if no hogs were kept. There is on the average farm a place for hogs, a place for cattle, a place for sheep, etc., and one kind will not interfere with another, and properly managed all will be found profitable. It is an easy matter with a dozen sows to raise, feed and ship a car load of fat hogs, worth $800 to [illegible]000. At the same time a lot of fat mutton sheep may be sold for, say, $200 to $300 and nearly as much for wool. Then a few fat steers for the local butcher will easily run the total up to $1,500 or $2,000. The manure from this stock will pay for all the labor of feeding and marketing, and the feed, all grown at home, costs less than the same could be bought for by a feeder.

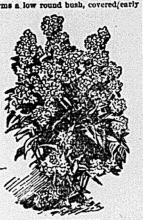
FRUIT & FLOWERS

FAVORITE DEUTZIAS.

Useful For Outdoor Planting, For Forcing and Easter Decorations.

The deutzias, both the tall and the low growing ones, are hardy, vigorous shrubs, remarkable for grace, beauty and prodigal bloom.

The dwarf deutzia (gracilis) has been called the beauty of the deutzia family and is one of the best of shrubs. It forms a low round bush, covered early in the summer with most graceful of single white flowers, and is very useful also for forcing, pot culture and Easter decoration.



DEUTZIA LEMOINEI.

Deutzia lemoinei is an elegant cross from gracilis, is dwarf and free flowering, but said to be even finer for forcing and more hardy for outdoor planting.

Shade For Evergreens In Winter.

A consideration of the effect of winter sunshine on trees and shrubs has led a Country Gentleman writer to remark how much better evergreens get through a winter if sheltered from the sun. He says: I have seen gardeners erect board fences on the north side of rhododendron beds to keep off the blustering winds. This is all right, but it would be better to put them up on the southern side. I am sure they would do more good there. Rhododendron leaves have the power of curling up in cold weather, lessening their surface of foliage, a wise provision of nature to prevent the loss of moisture. Bright sunlight causes them to unfold, which is against their well doing. I strongly advise the shading of shrubs and trees which have been injured in former winters or which are suspected of being tender.

The evergreen magnolia, rhododendrons, kalmias and evergreens of a coniferous character, even if usually hardy, will have much brighter looking foliage when winter is over if they can be kept shaded, partially at least. When in beds, as many of these subjects often are, it is not hard to shade them by placing evergreen boughs over them, and even single specimens on a lawn can often be benefited in the same way.

Care of House Plants.

Colder weather means increased fire heat, the latter also meaning an increased aridity or dryness of the atmosphere. The latter condition will probably induce a visit from insect pests on house plants unless precautions are taken to prevent their appearance. Green fly and red spider are most to be feared, especially the latter, as their appearance is not as easily detected as that of the aphis, or green fly. Copious sprinkling and syringing with cold water is the best preventive for the attacks of the so called red spider. Salvias, fuchsias, roses and carnations are first favorites with this little pest. When first attacked the leaves of these plants present a whitish, dusty looking appearance, especially on the underside, and the leaves will soon commence dropping. Tobacco water is the best remedy for green fly, although tobacco leaf or stems or even a cigar thoroughly dried and rubbed into a fine powder and sprinkled on the plants infested with green fly will generally rid the plant of them. The latter application is best made after the plants have been recently sprinkled or syringed, as the tobacco dust adheres better when the foliage of the plant is moist.—Cor. American Cultivator.

Oregon Evergreen Blackberry.

The Oregon evergreen blackberry is an excellent one for the Pacific coast, especially in Oregon and Washington, where it grows and bears most successfully, but in the central and eastern states it is a failure. I have seen the vines in the two former states and in California so large that one plant covered a fence or trellis almost fifty feet long, and I was told by reliable people that such plants would yield a bushel or two of berries, says H. E. V. D. in Rural New Yorker.

Rearranging the Hardy Beds.

It rarely happens that the first planting of beds of hardy flowers is exactly right. The first year of growth a close watch should be kept and notes made of undesirable features that can be corrected at the proper season. The colors may not harmonize in some parts of the beds, or the distribution of flowers to keep a good general display at all times all over the beds may not be good.

Teak Wood.

It is stated that some of the Philippine Islands abound in forests of that noble and interesting tree Tectona grandis, or teak. It is, therefore, probable that before many years we shall all become familiar with its wood.

RATIONS FOR DAIRY COWS.

Feeding the dairy cow would be a comparatively easy matter were it not for the difficulty experienced in securing a sufficient amount of protein to supply the heavy demands made on her system in the production of milk, says Professor A. M. Soule of the Tennessee experiment station. Cheap and abundant fodder crops can be grown with comparative ease to supply the more bulky part of her ration, but the protein needed is much harder to provide in a desirable form at a price within the reach of the average dairyman.

The abundance of cotton seed meal in the south should offer a happy solution of the difficulty, but there are many places where freight rates make cotton seed meal quite as expensive as in the states of the far northwest, and then it frequently happens that the dairyman does not see his way clear to pay out a large amount of money for cotton seed meal; for, as the old axiom puts it, "a penny saved is a penny made." So it is to his interest to discover if possible a means by which he can produce the needed protein on his farm and thus save the heavy drain on his resources required by the purchase of cotton seed meal or some other concentrate rich in protein.

Cotton seed meal has now been fed long enough to establish its virtue as a feed for dairy cows, but it has also been shown that it is unwise to employ it exclusively for that purpose, as it is so rich, not only in protein, but in fat and other constituents as well, that it has a tendency to produce various derangements of the cow's system, entailing serious losses that can easily be avoided if the meal were employed in a rational manner.

Fortunately our soils are adapted to the culture of several of the most important legumes known to mankind. Among these the one that stands out pre-eminently is the cowpea. It is well adapted to an immense territory and can be utilized to advantage in more ways than any other legume, and besides making a most excellent hay, rich in protein, it has the power of materially improving the mechanical condition and the crop producing power of the land, an item of the most profound concern to the farmer who has been somewhat careless with regard to such matters and has sold his cotton seed to the oil mill because of its ready cash value, though failing to return to the soil in some other form the equivalent of the plant food thus removed. As a result the fertility of much of our land has been seriously impaired, and so it is a particularly happy coincidence that the cowpea can be employed to rehabilitate the soil, produce a hay rich in protein which combines most happily with cotton seed meal as a feed for dairy cows and can even be used to advantage as a substitute for wheat bran or cotton seed meal under certain conditions

According to the experiments recently completed at the Tennessee station, the dairyman can employ cotton seed, meal and cowpea hay as grain feeds for his dairy cows and thus grow all the concentrates needed on his farm, a matter of the gravest importance.

Dairy Buildings

Some time ago our station published a bulletin and gave many illustrations of model and otherwise dairy barns in our state, and in the number shown I did not see one that had windows enough in it. The same thing occurs in the Dairyman's illustrations of cow barns. Why is it? The fellows who have covered pails with cotton, etc., are among the number who seem to think daylight and sunshine are detriments to a cow's comfort while confined in the stable. My rule for windows in a cow barn is to make out your bill for twice as many windows as you think you need, and then when your team has gone to town after them telephone your lumber dealer to double the bill at his end.

Now, there are windows and windows. The Dairyman showed what was called a model dairy barn, and the windows looked more like knot holes or woodpecker holes than windows. Get good, big double sash, 10 by 12 lights, six lights to a sash, and have them not more than eight feet apart along walls north, south, west and east. Then put in skylights. It will pay big. Now you have windows. Make all doors double—that is, to open bottom and top—and never shut top door unless low temperature or storms make it necessary.

When you have light buy a barrel of lime and have a whitewashing machine and let your boys work it rainy days. Whitewash walls and ceiling and floor if they want to. More light will be the result. A fly in our cow barn looks like a black bear on the walls that are white as—let me see—oh, yes, the cotton that is used to cover pails to keep out dirt that can't be seen in the windowless cow barns.—Buff Jersey in Hoard's Dairyman.

Keep Out the Flies.

It pays to protect good cows from flies. This may be done with darkened stables or sheds so constructed that the breeze blows through readily, says Tennessee Farmer. They may be closed at the north and south sides and open at the east and west ends. It is important to hang burlap curtains at the ends, and the cows soon learn to brush under them, and they show their appreciation of such attentions. The best and cheapest covering for such sheds is hay or straw, as the heat cannot penetrate a foot thickness of such material.

MRS. MAYBRICK FREE.

London, Feb. 1.—Mrs. Maybrick has been released after serving fourteen and a half years' imprisonment. She left the Aylesbury Female Convict Prison at 6.45 o'clock last Monday morning, and since then has been recuperating in a private institution near London. The utmost secrecy was observed regarding her release and her departure from prison was carried out in the quietest possible manner.

At the United States embassy it was most emphatically declared that she had not been pardoned, and that she was still a prisoner. Reports from Aylesbury are to the effect that she has been removed to some institution at Cornwall.

The Home Office and the Governor of Aylesbury Prison refuse to make any kind of a statement on the subject.

The Daily Mail this morning says that Mrs. Maybrick is now in Liverpool, and that the following conditions attach to her release from prison: That she will not appear on the public stage or write a book of her experiences, and shall in no way endeavor to attract public attention to herself.

The newspapers this morning announce that the removal of Mrs. Maybrick from Aylesbury prison express the belief that she will be released within two or three months.

BLOW FOR TARIFF REFORM.

Liberal Wins Ayr Seat Held By Conservatives Since 1890.

London, Feb. 1.—(C.A.P.)—The bye-election in the Ayr district of Burghs, which included various small towns in Ayrshire and Argyllshire, Scotland, resulted in the return of Joseph Dobbie, the Liberal candidate, by a majority of 41. He received 3,221 votes against 3,177 cast for George Younger, his Conservative opponent. The figures at the last general election showed 3,101 votes for the Conservative candidate and 2,511 for the Liberal, thus giving the Government a majority of 590. This is a Liberal gain, and as the bye-election turned largely on the fiscal question is a distinct rebuke to Joseph Chamberlain.

The Liberal press treat the Ayr Burghs return as another blow to protection. The seat has been Tory since 1890.

The London Standard says the election was avowedly fought on the fiscal question, and it is perfectly clear tariff reform has not strengthened the Unionist position.

The Times, referring to the Ayr Burghs' election, says this scattered Scottish constituency is proverbially fickle in distributing its favors.

Scandal at the Soo.

Sault Ste. Marie, Feb. 1.—The Michigan Soo appears to be on the eve of the uncovering of scandals in connection with municipal affairs that will rival those of other American cities. The police, it is claimed, have been accepting blackmail from gambling houses and sporting houses which have been operating on a wholesale scale. The matter came to a head last week when the Board of Police Commissioners began investigating definite charges against the police, and as a result the resignation of Chief of Police Nelson A. Burdick was received Saturday and Capt. Frank B. Stevens was suspended, pending an investigation of the charges against him.

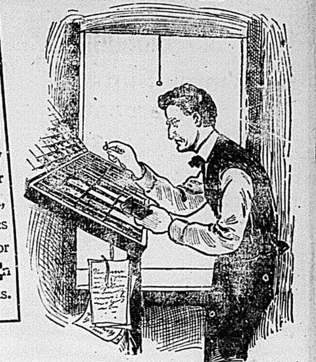
Air injected under the skin is said to relieve neuralgia, sciatica and lumbago. It is known that these diseases are affections of the ends of the nerves, which lie just under the skin. The injection of air causes the nerves to lengthen, and thus the pain is mitigated. When the bubble of air is pressed by the finger the air moves along the nerves, giving relief in all parts of the affected region.

"OUT OF SORTS"

That's the Way You Feel When Your Digestion is Out of Order.

Th▮s pr▮nter ▮s "out of sorts." He ▮s out of some of the letters needed to set th▮s paragraph and ▮t has been necessary for h▮m to turn other letters ups▮de down, to take the▮r places wh▮ch accounts for the black spaces ▮n some of the words.



A Message of Interest and Value to All Who Are "Out of Sorts"

When one's stomach gets "out of sorts" and digestion is faulty it mars temper, comfort and health, makes life seem incomplete, imperfect and unsatisfactory as a printer's "out of sorts" proof sheet.

The stomach is a laboratory wherein is prepared elements suitable for the nourishment and renewal of every structure of the body. If it is "out of sorts" and gives down poorly prepared material instead of nutritious chyle the imperfect material will correspond to the letters that the printer has placed upside down and appear as blotches and defacements on the page of life.

If to think ugly things is partly as bad as to say or act them, and the Recording Angel keeps tab on one's thoughts, what a "dirty" page must appear in the "book of life" against the one whose stomach is frequnetly "out of sorts" and whose type of nutrition thus necessarily becomes such as to keep mind and body irritable and upset.

The efforts of the skin to excrete, or throw out of the system, unripe or ill-prepared nutritional elements furnished by a stomach that is "out of sorts" frequently results in crops of pimples and blotches fully as unsightly as the impress of the upside down letters of the "out of sorts" print.

The best remedy medical science has been able to devise to keep the stomach from getting "out of sorts" or to right it when it has been allowed to get that way, is Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They give tone and vigor to the digestive organs so they will sort the material offered them and prepare from it a type of chyle that will build up tissues fair and clean as a perfect print from one whose case is never "out of sorts."

Chyle is digested food ready to be converted into blood. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets insure good digestion; good food and vigorous digestion provide perfect chyle; good chyle makes pure rich blood; good nutritious blood builds bodily tissues that are firm, sound and free from defects as the full case printer's perfect proof.

Diseases are blotches on the fair page of life. A very large share of diseases can be traced to the stomach being "out of sorts." "Nine-tenths of all diseases" said Abernathy, the great English physician, "come from the stomach." Dr. Fothergill, another English physician of world-wide repute, once declared: "Of every ten men you meet on the street, seven have stomach trouble of some kind." There are many cases of ill-health of which imperfect digestion is the unsuspected cause. Often there are none of the more prominent symptoms of dyspepsia, such as distress after eating, heartburn, waterbrash, belching of gas, etc., but there are other symptoms that may be really due to dyspepsia but are not usually attributed to it by the sufferer, among which may be mentioned general nervousness and depression; tired, run-down, played-out, "out of sorts" feelings that cannot be accounted for; headaches; oppression about the heart; bad complexion, pimples, blotches, boils; dizzy spells; specks before the eyes, etc. Let the sufferer take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and these symptoms all disappear, showing plainly being "out of sorts."

Mr. Thos. Seale, Mayfield, Cal., says: "Have used and recommend Stuart's Tablets because there is nothing like them to keep the stomach right."

Mr. E. H. Davis, of Hampton, Va., says: "I doctored five years for dyspepsia, but in two months I got more benefit from Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets than in five years of the doctors' treatment."

Mrs. E. M. Faith, of Byrd's Creek, Wis., says: "I have taken all the Tablets I got of you and they have done their work well in my case, for I feel like a different person altogether. I doubt doubt if I had not got them I should have been at rest by this time."

Phil Brooks, Detroit, Mich., says: "Your dyspepsia cure has worked wonders in my case. I suffered for years from dyspepsia but am now entirely cured and enjoy life as I never have before. I gladly recommend them."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets cure all kinds of dyspepsia, therefore they bring relief from all the varied symptoms that are manifestations of dyspepsia. To try them is to be convinced of their merits. They can be bought at any drug store for fifty cents a box.

HOCKEY.

A Waterloo for the Marlboros.

That Belleville will win the third round by a handsome margin seems now reasonably certain, as last night the Red and White Boys beat the Dukes on their own ice by the jug-handled score of 14 to 3. The Mutual St. rink has always been a hoodoo to Belleville, but the luck changed for fair yesterday. A good deal of interest was felt in the game in this city, and the Quinte held a great crowd last night, which had assembled to hear the returns. When half-time came with the score 4-2 it was believed that the final score would be close, but in the last half the Belleville boys made a runaway race of it, scoring 10 goals to the Marlboros' 1. Our lads played a great game, their combination being gilt-edged. Time and again the Red and White forwards would break away with the puck and go down the ice four abreast. The Marlboros were outclassed, though it is only fair to say that two of their strongest players were off. All the locals played in their usual form, McGuire in particular putting up "a horse of a game." It was a clean, enjoyable game, especially to the few Belleville people present. Only a fair-sized crowd was in attendance, and they repeatedly cheered the clever work of the Belleville team. Mr. "Pick" Lillie, of Toronto, was referee, and he gave both teams an even break.

The scoring was done in the following order:

1.—Belleville—McGuire.
2.—Belleville—Marks.
3.—Marlboro—Simpson.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE'S DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

Bridge Street.

"A Brave Man" was the subject discussed last evening by the Rev. Dr. Crothers to a large congregation. His text was from Daniel, 1st chapter and 8th verse:

"But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the King's meat, nor with the wine which he drank; therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself."

Baptist.

The special services being conducted in this church by Rev. T. Shields, evangelist, are increasing in interest and attendance. Last evening the church was filled and the discourse by the evangelist was not only an able effort, but pointed and practical. Previous to the sermon Mr. J. M. Whyte sang a number of appropriate hymns, which were feelingly rendered. Mr. Shields' text was from Ecclesiastes, 8th chapter and 10th verse:

"And so I saw the wicked buried, who had come and gone from the place of the holy, and they were forgotten in the city where they had so done."

In his opening remarks the Rev. gentleman spoke of death as a mournful thing, but something that would befall all. Death was the offspring of sin, but its sting had been greatly removed by the Son of God, who died to redeem mankind. The man who dies in sin is buried in sin, but with the Christian it is different. He made an earnest and pathetic appeal to all to forsake sin and accept the teachings of Christ, who, when we pass away, will receive us in glory.

Christian Science.

First Church of Christ Scientist was well attended yesterday, the subject being "Spirit." The Golden Text is a wonderful promise from God to us: "My spirit that is upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever."—Isaiah, 59, 21.

St. Thomas'

Both services were conducted by the Rector, Rev. G. R. Beamish, and were well attended. The text for the sermon at the morning service was from Gen. 1., 1 and 26.

Tabernacle.

Anniversary services were conducted in this church yesterday and sermons appropriate to the occasion were preached by the Rev. S. J. Shorey, of Picton, ex-president of the Conference. The discourses were able efforts and were listened to by large congregations. In the morning the Rev. gentleman's text was from 1st Corinthians, 10th chapter, 31st, 32nd and 33rd verses. His theme was that whatsoever we did should be done to the glory of God. We should not simply develop the spiritual side of our lives, but the intellectual part should also be developed to God's glory. In the minds of the young people comes the thought that they must administer their lives after some certain ideal. It is God putting that divine ideal before them and they will learn to say "Thy will not mine, O Lord, be done." When they learn to say that it will not be the giving up of certain things, but the coming in of God's love. Whether ye eat or drink or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God. This is and should be the true standard of womanhood and manhood. During the service Miss F. Manning sang a solo entitled, "There is a Green Hill Far Away," and the choir gave the anthem "O Come All Ye Faithful."

Christ Church.

There were good congregations at yesterday's services. In the morning Rev. A. L. Geen preached, and in the evening the Rector, Rev. W. B. Heeney. The latter's text was from Hebrews, 4th chapter, 14th and 15th verses.

John Street.

The sermons yesterday by the Pastor, Rev. A. H. Drumm, were both thoughtful and helpful. In the evening his text was St. Luke, 5th chapter, 8th, 10th and 11th verses. During the service Mrs. A. G. Burrows rendered a solo, and a quartette composed of Misses Wilson and Sutherland, Messrs. Ashley and Wrightmyer sang "Rock of Ages."

Bethel Hall.

A very interesting subject was commenced last night, namely:—"Four views of Christ as seen in the Gospels," each writer viewing the Lord Jesus from a different stand-point; Mathew asking Mark as servant, Luke as son of man, and John as son of God, hence the differences and omissions in each gospel, all designed by the spirit of God and not by chance many of the differences and omissions being most marked and instructive, especially to the Lord's people. The speaker announced a continuance of the subject for next Sunday evening.

IT'S WHEN YOU HAVE TOOTHACHE

That the power of Nerviline quickly makes itself felt. Any aching tooth can be relieved by Nerviline in a few moments by filling the cavity with batting soaked in Nerviline. A good plan is to rub the gums with Nerviline also. There isn't a single remedy that has one-fourth the pain-relieving power of Nerviline, which acts like magic. Nerviline kills the pain outright and prevents it from returning. You can't beat Nerviline for toothache or neuralgia; it's the best pain cure made. Price 25c.

An Old-Time Editor Dead.

Ottawa, Feb. 1.—Many Canadian newspaper men will be sorry to hear of the death of Molyneux St. John, usher of the Black Rod, which occurred here on Saturday evening. Mr. St. John was educated for the British army, and served as a lieutenant at the storming of Canton. In 1868 he joined the staff of The Toronto Globe, and accompanied the Wolseley expedition as special correspondent. He afterwards filled several offices in the Northwest, including that of sheriff of the Territories. Returning to newspaper work, he became editor of The Montreal Herald, and afterwards of The Winnipeg Free Press. In the Commons he was one of the most popular members of the press gallery, and was president of that body in 1888. Journalism lost an able and honorable man when he retired.

Aged Son of Founder of Rice Lewis & Son Commits Suicide.

George W. Lewis, Reported to Be Worth About $1,000,000, Takes His Own Life at Niagara Falls, Ont.—Act Was Done in the Presence of the Bartender of the Hotel Savoy in the Most Deliberate Fashion.

Niagara Falls, Feb. 1.—George W. Lewis, a prominent club man and wealthy resident of Toronto, committed suicide at the Hotel Savoy here Saturday afternoon, shortly after 2 o'clock. Mr. Lewis arrived here Friday afternoon and took a room at the Savoy. It was observed by Proprietor Dickinson and attendants at the hotel that the man was acting queerly. He asked Dickinson if the bridge across the gorge was open all night, and when the hotel man replied that he could see nothing at night, Mr. Lewis said: "I can see all I want to see at any time."

He retired fairly early and was up at a reasonable hour Saturday morning. He announced that he would go to Toronto on the 10 o'clock train and paid his bill. He remained, however, about the hotel, acting in a very strange manner. He sat brooding, and shortly before 2 o'clock asked Landlord Dickinson for some paper, sealed it hurriedly and gave it to Dickinson to mail.

Poured Poison Into Whiskey.

He then walked into the bar, asked Bartender Ingles for a drink of whiskey, took a small paper from his pocket, poured a white powder into his glass, mixed it up and drank it off. He turned, went to the hotel writing table, addressed an envelope, placed it in his pocket and stiffened back in his chair. Mr. Dickinson, who was watching the man, ran to him, but he slipped to the floor, and in a moment he was dead.

Dr. J. H. McGarry was summoned, but Lewis was beyond medical aid before he arrived. Dr. E. L. Kellam, city coroner, was called and took charge, after an examination of the body. Dr. Kellam announced that the poison used by Lewis was strychnine, and that he had probably taken eight or ten grains, as a dose of that quantity would produce death quickly.

On the envelope in his pocket was written: "This is my address, George W. Lewis, 90 St. George street, Toronto." The letter handed to Mr. Dickinson was addressed to Mrs. R. T. Gooderham, who is a sister of the deceased. This letter was opened to ascertain if it would throw any light on the cause of Mr. Lewis' rash act. It told Mrs. Gooderham that when she received it he would be dead. It gave instructions; told where his keys to his strong box at the Canada Permanent could be found, but threw no light upon the cause of the suicide.

Poison Got in U.S.

It was learned yesterday that Mr. Lewis on Saturday morning made numerous attempts at the city drug stores to obtain strychnine to kill a dog, but was refused. It is thought he got his poison from the United States side.

Alfred Hoskin, the Toronto barrister; Mr. Lewis, solicitor, arrived with Capt. Mitchell, a relative, Saturday evening and took charge of the remains, which had been removed to Butler's undertaking room. They took them back to Toronto on the Sunday morning train.

From an interview with these gentlemen, it was learned that Mr. Lewis has been suffering from melancholia for some time past, and his relatives in Toronto have been apprehensive of his safety. He left home at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon last and they have had two detectives hunting for him ever since. They failed to find any trace of him, however, and the first intimation they had was when Dr. Kellam telephoned them Saturday afternoon.

Son of Rice Lewis.

Mr. Lewis was well-known in the Toronto Club and the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, both of which he was a member. He was independently wealthy, although it is thought he was brooding over money matters in some extent. He was a bachelor and lived a quiet retired life. He was the chief partner in the large hardware firm of Rice Lewis & Son when his father died. He afterwards disposed of his interests there and embarked in business in England. He was a man of about 60 years of age, and well preserved.

LEWIS WORTH $1,000,000.

Arranged His Will and Important Papers Before Going Away.

Toronto, Feb. 1.—The news of George W. Lewis' death confirmed the grave apprehensions excited by his sudden disappearance and the significant manner in which he had arranged his will and other important papers. When this was noticed immediate steps were taken to trace his movements, but no clue was obtained until the absence of a Grand Trunk time card suggested that he had left the city. This inference was soon proved correct, a telegraph message reaching the family at noon on Saturday, announcing the fact of the suicide.

Mr. Lewis, with his father, Rice Lewis, A. B. Lee and John Lee formed in 1867 the hardware firm of Rice Lewis & Sons, Limited. He left the firm in 1877, six years after his father's death, and did not thereafter actively engage in business. Of abstemious and quiet habits and cautious in financial matters, it is not thought that pecuniary or other troubles prompted the rash act, nor had he given any previous indications of mental weakness or aberration.

Mr. Lewis is reported to have been worth any way from $500,000 to $1,000,000. He never speculated and his money was all invested in giltedge securities. He was a director of the old Western Loan Company and when the Canada Permanent was formed became a director and a heavy shareholder. He attended the directors' meeting on Monday and seemed in excellent health and spirits.

His body was brought to the city yesterday. The funeral has not yet been arranged.

Swiss President's Son Shoots Himself.

Dijon, France, Feb. 1.—Arnold Comtess, son of the President of Switzerland, has committed suicide here by shooting. Comtess, who had been living here recently, drove out on Thursday to pay a visit to a woman of his acquaintance. Upon being informed that she was not in, Comtess re-entered his carriage and shot himself in the mouth with a revolver, the bullet penetrating his brain. He had been suffering from celebral derangement, resulting from malarial fever.

LORD SALISBURY

And John Hay Have Done Most to Unite Britain and the U.S.

New York, Feb. 1.—There were nearly 300 guests at the complimentary dinner given Saturday night by the Lotus Club to Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, the British Ambassador in Washington. The Ambassador said:

"There is nothing in the world that I have desired more than to see England and America standing together. Not an alliance. That is not necessary. But what was wanted to come has come—to stand together and think together."

President Schurman of Cornell said in an address:

"I know nothing more remarkable in history or nothing fraught with more hopeful significance, than the development in the last half dozen years of the deep, genuine good feeling that now binds English and American people and Governments together.

"Two names there are which history will especially exalt as the conscious master builders of this temple of Anglo-American concord and amity, Lord Salisbury and John Hay.

"John Hay is one man without whose agency these friendly and cordial relations between the English and American peoples and Governments would not have developed to anything like the extent and intensity of which we are conscious. He is the fairest, ablest, the most sagacious and the most successful Foreign Secretary now living."

Lawyer Loses $60,000.

London, Feb. 1.—Saturday evening a famous lawyer of the midlands of England, who represents the Duke of Newcastle, a brother to May Yohe's former husband, came to town with $90,000 in bank notes to buy real estate. He left $60,000 in a wallet in his bedroom while he went to get shaved. When he returned he found the lock of the wallet broken and the notes gone. The police asked him to give the number of the notes, so that they might prevent their being cashed. The noted lawyer replied: "Oh, yes! I took the numbers, but they were on paper among the notes."

The buildings belonged to the Matthews' estate, and are owned by H. C. Baker, Hamilton & Talbot, MacBeth, London; fully insured.

Murder in Montreal.

Montreal, Feb. 1.—Foul murder was committed in this city Saturday midnight. Pierre Carpentier, 52 years of age, and a furrier, was stabbed to death in St. Paul street by a companion from Old France, known as Parisian. The men were drinking together and a quarrel ensued, with the result as described. When the murderer was arrested he had the blood-stained knife still in his pocket.

Toronto's Municipal Scandals.

Toronto, Feb. 1.—To-day the prosecution expects to try ex-Controller Wm. Burns and D. R. O. Samuel Thompson. George Maguire will be tried Wednesday. Forty-five witnesses are subpoenaed to appear in the Police Court this morning. Every witness will be confronted with a charge of perjury if he fails to reveal all he knows of the criminal intrigue to control the city election.

Broke Both of His Arms.

Toronto, Feb. 1.—At 9.30 Saturday night Adam Walton, the G.T.R. signal man at the foot of Berkeley street, was found lying at the foot of the stairs of the signal house. Both his arms were broken below the elbows. He slipped from the top of the stairs leading into the box. Walton lost a leg some time ago in an accident.

Many friends and hundreds of villagers from Witley and other neighboring towns stood around the grave in a steady downpour of rain.

King Peter's Condescension.

System Poisoned by Defective Kidneys.

RESULT OF THE MOST DREADFULLY PAINFUL AND FATAL AILMENTS KNOWN TO MAN.

DR. CHASE'S Kidney-Liver-Pills.

Of the food which is taken into the body, part is digested and assimilated and goes to form new blood and tissue, and a certain portion becomes waste matter which is poison to the system. Much of such matter is cast out or excreted by the kidneys in liquid form and passes from these organs through the ureters to the bladder.

When the kidneys become deranged this liquid poison forms into solid material, sometimes collecting in the joints and causing rheumatism, at other times in the kidneys, ureters or bladder, and becoming what is known as gravel or stone in the bladder, probably the most torturing and most fatal ailment known to mankind.

Don't wait for symptoms of these horrible diseases, diabetes, dropsy, or apoplexy before beginning the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but prevent these results by taking warning from the first symptoms, such as headache, deposits in urine, loss of flesh, and any irregularities of the urinary organs.

Mr. John L. Hickey, now caretaker of the Public and High Schools, Trenton, Ont., states:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills and found them the greatest medicine I ever tried. I used them when in the lumber camps and believe by keeping the kidneys and bowels regular and the general health good that they protect a person from catching contagious diseases which are so common in the camps.

"I have seen hundreds of men using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in the lumber camps. They buy them by the dozen when going in, and to show how much faith they have in them they buy them when they could get their medicine for nothing by going to the hospital camp. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills keep my liver, kidneys and bowels regular and my health good. I would not think of being without them."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

MR. GAMEY IS AROUSED

Rickard, West Durham, Provokes Him—Tempest Soon Settled.

"Man From Manitoulin" Repudiates the Globe's Report of His Woodstock Speech, and Says It Is False—The Debate on the Address Continues Wearisomely Along—Col. Munro to Be Seated To-day.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—Yesterday's debate in the Legislature developed just a slight ripple of excitement. It soon subsided and the remaining portion of the speeches was as inoffensive as anything that could have been said at a 5 o'clock tea.

Gamey Aroused.

Mr. Richard of West Durham, was reading a Globe report of a speech of Mr. Gamey's at Woodstock, when the latter arose and said;

"Mr. Speaker: Let me say for the benefit of the hon. gentleman and the information of the House that in reading such statements the hon. gentleman is reading what is fale. I did not on the platform in Woodstock nor anywhere else use any blackguardedly language, or words, warranting any such criticism.

The Speaker said: Any hon. member can read articles of that kind, but he must not give opinions on those articles, for that would be offensive to members of the House.

Mr. Rickard asked was he out of order, and Mr. Whitney encouraged him to "Go on," advice which Mr. Rickard did not follow, but adopted another line of argument, and at three minutes to six moved the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. Crawford's Fair Argument.

Mr. Crawford spoke first and put up a fair argument, dealing with a variety of subjects, but paying particular attention to agriculture and live stock.

The debate will not conclude till Wednesday or Thursday. On the Government side Mr. Routledge and Mr. Graham are to speak, while the Conservatives will put up Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, Mr. Duff and Mr. Gamey. Mr. Carscallen of Hamilton will not be in the House for some time, having gone south for his health. Mr. Barber, who is also unwell, will stay away on account of Mr. Carscallen's illness.

Col. Munro, the victor of North Oxford, will be introduced to the Speaker to-day.

CAN'T YOU TRUST ME?

Question of Queen Alexandra That Embarassed a London Merchant.

London, Feb. 2.—For the first time in years Queen Alexandra went shopping at Windsor yesterday, like the humblest of her subjects, entering many shops, examining goods and asking prices. Usually merchants are summoned to bring goods to the castle and display them.

The Queen was accompanied by the Princess of Wales, Princess Charles of Denmark and Princess Victoria. Despite the rain she spent two hours visiting the shops afoot. Her Majesty bought photographs, bric-a-brac, antique furniture and curios. She did not disdain to carry the smaller packages herself.

Her Majesty didn't pay cash. She said to one merchant:

"You can trust me, can't you?"

The Queen did not trouble the merchants to wrap some of the purchases in paper, thrusting them in her coat pockets. The royal shoppers were not recognized by the throngs on the sidewalk.

G. A. Putnam Appointed.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—George A. Putnam, secretary of the City Dairy Company, has been appointed superintendent of farmers' institutes for the province, to succeed G. C. Creelman. The salary is $1,500. The appointment was agreed to at a meeting of the Cabinet yesterday afternoon.

G. C. Creelman, the new president of the Ontario Agricultural College, leaves to-day for Guelph to take up his new duties. After the quarantine at the college has been raised he will return to Toronto to close up some matters.

Suicide By Gas Route.

Galt, Feb. 2.—William Rutherford, 45 years of age, an employe of the Galt Gas Light Co., committed suicide by inhaling gas, being dead yesterday morning in his own house. He is said to have been drinking excessively lately. He leaves a widow.

ON, ON, WITH THE DANCE

"Joy Unconfined" at St. Petersburg on Possible Eve of War.

Will It Be the Precursor, As at Brussels, of a Modern Waterloo or Moscow in the Far East?—Russia Announces the Mobilization of the Manchurian Troops—Russian Division Arrives on Yalu River.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 2.—The court ball at the Winter Palace last night was the most brilliant event of its kind ever held here for years, and it marked the climax of the social season.

The Czar and Czarina and the Imperial family met the guests in the white marble saloon. The Czar led the Grand march with Lady Scott, wife of the British Ambassador, the Ambassadoe escorting the Czarina. Mrs. McCormick, wife of the American Ambassador, was escorted by Grand Duke Cyrille. The Czar did not dance the Russian mazurka, the feature of the court ball, but he moved about and conversed with the diplomats.

During the evening Count Lamsdorff, the Foreign Minister, drew M. Kurino, the Japanese Minister to Russia, into a window embrasure, where the two talked earnestly for half an hour. This incident attracted general attention.

Arrival of a Russian Division.

London, Feb. 2.—The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Nagasaki says in a despatch that Japanese refugees from Port Arthur, Dalny and Harbin report the arrival of one Russian division on the Yalu River.

From Tokio a correspondent of The Daily Mail cables that the Seattle Line steamship service of the Yusen Kaisha will be resumed February 10.

According to the Seoul correspondent of The Times reports have been received from Ping Yang, Corea, saying that armed soldiers have been guilty of robbery and public breaking there, and the missionaries declare the anti-foreign feeling to be increasing.

Japan Fixes War Pay.

London, Feb. 2.—The correspondent of The Times at Tokio says an ordnance was issued to-day fixing the war pay of the army and navy. It was also officially denied that any statement of the situation was recently made by Japan to the powers. Russia's answer is expected about the 5th inst. Meanwhile the public anticipates no concessions, though there is an easier feeling in some circles. Japanese residents are withdrawing rapidly from the Liaotung peninsula. There is no official intimation of the cessation of commercial traffic on the railways.

Russia Prepared For War.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 2.—In spite of the expressed hope of the Russian authorities that the present crisis will be passed and that a pacific solution of the Russo-Japanese negotiations will be reached, it is no longer concealed that Russia is practically prepared for eventualities. Yesterday the mobilization of the Manchurian reserves was announced.

It has been well known for months that Russia has been steadily strengthening her army and navy in the Far East, to meet the preparations which Japan was openly making. The available warships were despatched to the Far East, and the last division, which left the Mediterranean a month ago, is now nearing its destination. Quietly, but surely, it was necessary that Russia's preparations should keep pace with those of her diplomatic adversary.

Feverish activity of Japan during the last few weeks naturally increased the distrust of her ultimate intentions, and the Russian authorities have been pushing their precautionary measures with more vigor. It is understood that six or seven military trains daily have been going east over the Siberian road, and the charters of some ships cargoes for the Pacific have been cancelled because the water route was considered unsafe. The authorities now feel that the situation is secure, should Japan reject the efforts the Czar is making to avoid war.

What Germany May Do.

Paris, Feb. 2.—Although the officials here do not give the slightest credit to the recent report of Germany's alleged design to occupy Copenhagen and close the Baltic to both Russian and British warships in the event of Great Britain participating in a war in the Far East, it is believed the story has a certain political significance bearing on the Russo-Japanese controversy. The report appeared under a St. Petersburg date at the same time that Russia was seeking to impress the maritime powers with the danger resulting from Japan's fortifying Fusan and controlling the entrance to the Sea of Japan. Copenhagen has the same relative position to the Baltic that Fusan has to the Sea of Japan, and it is therefore believed that the report regarding G?rmany's alleged intention to occupy Copenhagen was put out as a means of impressing the maritime powers with what might follow from permitting Japan to control the entrance of the Sea of Japan.

TORONTO ELECTION FRAUDS.

The investigation into the ballot-box stuffing case in Toronto is already creating no little excitement. The first case investigated shows fraud to the extent of twenty-five persons, who are recorded as having voted, but who swore positively that they did not vote. This is a sad state of affairs, the result of the machine operations, and no punishment "that fits the crime." It is to be hoped the guilty parties will be discovered and severely punished. No danger of their being pardoned, the crime is municipal, not political; hence the powers that be will not use the pardoning power.

NATIONAL TRANSCONTINENTAL CAN'T BE BUILT.

The Opposition, when the Grand Trunk Pacific deal was broached, urged upon the Government the absurdity of pursuing the vision further, until thorough surveys of the eastern section had been obtained. Hon. A. G. Blair joined in the chorus of protests, but Sir Wilfrid obdurately refused to be counselled. He declared that there were "mountains of information" to be had. Later he laid on the table of The House a blue book containing the said "mountains of information," and the data proved to be the veriest rot ever submitted to a Canadian Parliament.

It is now persistently rumored that the much talked of "National Transcontinental" is an engineering impossibility. The surveyors are reported to have been confronted with insurmountable obstacles. A glance at the map shows how hard a country the Laurier Government proposed to pierce by a railway, yet the Premier obstinately pushed his pet on the country, without regard to cost or the purposes it might serve. Now the scene is changed and the Government has been compelled by sheer force of circumstances to give that consideration to its proposal which was demanded of it months ago.

Railways and Storms.

Newspapers and people who are kicking up such a row about railway trains not running on schedule time during the past few weeks seem to forget the fact that this has been perhaps the coldest and stormiest winter ever experienced since railways began to run in Canada. There have been many heavy falls of snow and not a sign of thaw to remove the accumulation, with the result that there is a greater depth of snow on the ground than has been for many years. In some parts of western Ontario, a depth of from five to nine feet of snow is reported. The wonder is that under such circumstances trains are able to get through at all. The Grand Trunk service has come in for, what seems to us, uncalled for and unfair criticism. The officials of the line are always anxious to give the best and most regular service possible, and as far as the eastern division between Toronto and Montreal is concerned, have done very well, considering the unprecedented difficulties in the form of snow and cold that they have had to contend with. People have become so accustomed during recent years to luxuriously equipped trains running sharp on schedule time, that when under adverse conditions, such as have prevailed this winter, there is sometimes a little wait at the point of embarkation or delay in reaching their destination, they become unreasonable critics, and the officials of the railway, who are doing the best they can, are often most unjustly blamed. The railway companies have nothing to gain by not running sharp on time, but from the way some people talk one would think they were keeping the trains late on purpose. If Canadians would only take the trouble to investigate they would discover that they are faring just as well, if not better, than their neighbors across the line on the great railroad systems running into New York, Boston and other places. There for some time trains have been running from one to ten hours late, and traffic outside the passenger service is practically tied up. And the American railways have not half the snow nor nearly the degree of cold to contend with that the lines in Canada have.

Keep easy, gentlemen; give the railways a chance; they are doing the best they can under adverse circumstances.—Brockville Recorder, Jan. 23.

A Goddess of Africa

A Story of the Golden Fleece.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "MISS CAPRICE," "DR. JACK'S WIFE,"

perched up on the pedestal, and moving one of the extra arms his royal nibs is provided with. I suppose the priests used to work it from the inside, and that awful groan sent the cold shudders through the multitude lying on their faces. Gad, they were up to delightful tricks in those good old days, eh, and yet in my travels I've seen things just as brazen practiced in communities supposed to be civilized to-day. Go on with your work, Rex. If it's as pleasant as mine you are to be envied I tell you."

Hastings waited not to argue the pro and con of that question, since he was quite in a [illegible] to continue his task. He had travelled many weary leagues, had encountered innumerable perils from wild beasts and still wilder men, in order to enjoy this hour, and now that it had come his whole being thrilled with the sensation of victory such as but few men experience, and then only once in a lifetime.

Again he was on his knees beside that most wonderful pile, which had lain here as if slumbering through the ages—again his eager hand chased the glowing balls of color as they rolled among the baser images, as though playing a game of hide and seek.

In the hunt these golden vessels were tossed aside as though representing little value, which was possibly the truth when a comparison was made with those gems of Ophir, such as the Queen of Sheba might have brought as presents to Solomon when she came with such pomp to test his wonderful wisdom.

At last every fugitive jewel had been successfully cornered and carefully captured. There were two small bags of them, bags that bulged with riches as their like had certainly never done before; for seldom in the history of Mother Earth could so much wealth have been compressed into so small a compass.

Deliberately Rex took some cord and proceeded to tie up the mouth of each diminutive sack, and when this had been completed, he slipped them into the side pockets of his stout coat.

Sometimes it is but a step between absolute poverty and the wealth of a Croesus—this is a strange world in which we live, and singular adventures befall the chosen few. At least it falls to the lot of but a select number to pick up a fortune ready made, and slip jewels worth perhaps a cool million into his pockets. Perhaps Hastings was born under a lucky star.

CHAPTER XII.

ON THE ROAD TO HADES.

When he had thus made sure of the quart or so of glistening gems that may have once bedecked the form of the ugliest of idols, Rex found that he could condescend to smaller things.

The queer images and vessels fashioned out of pure gold claimed his attention. Their intrinsic value must be quite a snug dot, if one could but convey them to the busy marts of men, where such things were scrambled for with the most feverish eagerness.

Really, he was surprised to see how calmly he could view such a collection of the most precious of metals; but then when one has already dined upon the most exquisite of viands, he is able to look upon an ordinary feast without emotion, though at another time the sight of the same spread might set his mouth to watering.

Picking up a couple of the least cumbersome of the images, he lugged them out of the receptacle and planted them at the feet of the working artist, who halted in his labos long enough to vouchsafe the antiques a scrutinizing glance and then say:

"Found 'em all right, eh—well, they are daisies, now, I'll admit. Get Jim and the rest to assist, old boy. I'm too much engaged, you see—really, wouldn't put a stop to my sketch for all the gold in Africa, Haggard and his King Solomon's mine to the contrary," and he scratched away for dear life.

Bludsoe was quite ready to help, and the others also came quickly to the front, so that in an exceedingly brief space of time the little pile of golden relics had been switched from the interior of the old barbarian god to a spot in the middle of the chamber.

Lord Bruno had finished his sketch of the remarkable three-headed deity and condescended to inspect the collection with the eye of one who might be called a connoisseur.

And forsooth, it was a sight well worthy the attention of prince or peasant, a brave accumulation of quaint vessels that bore such mute though eloquent testimony regarding the cunning and skill of ancient goldbeaters in the days when the Pharaohs reigned over Egypt.

The professor actually went down on his knees before the treasures, as did the reprobate children of Israel before the golden calf. To him the intrinsic part was as tinkling brass when placed in comparison with their amazing historical value.

Even the cowboys were quite taken with the oddity of some among the images, and Red Eric burst into a loud laugh as he snatched up one that appeared to be half way between a gorilla and a man, with a certain suspicious leaning toward the Egyptian style of sculpture as witnessed in the temple of Luxor.

That laugh, how weird it sounded—a dozen tongues seemed to take it up—from one end of the chamber to another it was echoed, and hustled back and forth with the rapidity of a tennis ball in a hard fought championship game.

It was as if the grave assemblage of hideous old gods had been given the breath of life, and were mocking the merry cow-puncher, whose merriment came to a speedy end.

At the same moment, as though there might be some connection between the mad, rebounding echo, and the spirits that haunted the ruined temple of Azor, the brilliant light which had served them so well all this while, suddenly went out, not even deigning a parting flicker in farewell.

Exclamations arose, for the first thought that flashed over them was that there might be something supernatural about it all—they had heard of a curse being left with a hidden treasure, a poisonous vapor perhaps, fastened in a Pandora box, that would immediately finish any one who dared open it.

All of them were plain, practical men of good common sense, and when the first shock had departed, they found themselves ready to laugh at the thrill which had involuntarily swept over their frames under the impulse of that queer coincidence.

"The powder has given out," spoke up the Englishman in a voice that showed no trace of a tremor—"be patient a moment, my hearties. I've another package handy, and we'll soon have plenty of light."

Then a match crackled—puff! the darkness was shattered, and in its stead came that same dazzling light which had before permeated almost every crack and cranny in the great low ceiled chamber.

Hastings uttered an exclamation.

"What now?" demanded the Briton, recognizing in this cry a note of alarm, and perhaps believing Rex had been shaken by a sudden winnowing of wings overhead, as some gigantic bat beat the air, frightened at the new flood of light.

"Yonder—I could swear I saw a crouching figure, a giant black, suddenly spring out of sight behind that leaning god."

All eyes were instantly glued upon the spot he indicated, but no sign remained of the phantom figure Rex believed he had seen.

"Possibly a delusion," said Lord Bruno, as he bent over the treasure-trove and examined some of the queer conceits that were fac similes of the barbaric gods with which they were even then surrounded.

Rex had some good stubborn Scotch blood in his disposition, and having taken hold it was hard for him to let go. He shook his head in a negative way, saying:

"Of course that would be a possibility, but I am far from willing to admit that my eyes deceived me. Here is Bludsoe—perhaps he too saw it vanish like the smoke on a windy day—how is it, Jim?"

The cowboy confessed that he had been looking in another quarter when the light resumed sway, and therefore failed to see what Rex mentioned, as no sign of its presence hovered about the spot when he did fasten his eyes upon the angle.

"Still, it's an easy thing to make a dead certainty of it. Come with me, Mr. Hastings, and unless the thing of evil possessed the wings of a bat we'll be sure to discover some sign of his presence, I swear."

Rex instantly understood what he meant to imply. The dust that lay so promiscuously around would betray the fact whether a human being had entered the chamber in that quarter or not.

Jim Bludsoe, ere trusting himself in such a subterranean trap as the black temple of Azor, had prepared for an emergency by securing several billets of wood to serve as torches should the occasion warrant.

Possibly they were not equal to the lightwood flambeaux he might have secured had he been given a better opportunity, but they promised to answer the purpose.

One of these he now dipped in the glowing furnace on the pan. It immediately took fire, and while its puny flame held no comparison with the intense glow of the flash-light, still he was satisfied.

Rex followed at his heels, leaving the others busily engaged in stowing the golden images that were worth five times their weight in sovereigns, into a couple of leather saddle bags, fetched for the purpose.

Rex, even while quivering from excitement, could not but remark what a wonderfully fine picture the athletic cowboy made as he moved on, for you see Rex had been somewhat of an artist in days gone by, and once that spirit finds lodgment in a man it never leaves him.

A dozen strides and Bludsoe was at the spot—he swept his torch in advance as he bent low. Almost immediately Rex heard him give an exclamation, and from its exultant ring he knew in advance that his suspicions were confirmed.

That flying glimpse of a disappearing object was not the stretch of imagination.

"What have you found?" he asked, coming alongside the plainsman, and also riveting his gaze upon the ground.

"Footprints, and not made by an angel, either, you bet," returned blunt Jim, pointing to where the dust had been disturbed, and there Rex discerned a giant imprint.

It meant much to them—discovery—an alarm, the assembling of the black hosts, the destruction of their only path out of the deep crater, a siege, and ultimate destruction! No wonder then, with these possibilities staring them in the face both Rex and the cowboy were anxious to know whither the black spy had flown.

Besides, Bludsoe was at once overwhelmed by a feverish desire to follow, that being a part and parcel of his religion.

He flashed the light over the trail, and Rex did not say nay—indeed, he was in quite the mood to accompany Bludsoe down through the infernal regions if so be there was an object in visiting that abode of the dark shades.

As he went on Jim kept up a running commentary upon the situation, and in that way gave vent to his feelings, while at the same time imparting a certain amount of information; for Rex had never had much practice as a trailer, and might be looked upon as something of a "tenderfoot" in cowboy parlance.

"See, here's where he made that flying leap when [illegible] a glimpse of him, and I [illegible] how the critter must [illegible] nigh to death [illegible] up so sudden lik [illegible]—you can see [illegible] down, but [illegible] a scart deer.

"Here's the [illegible], but jest in this [illegible] it's riven, and through that [illegible] our chap went licketty split.

"Now, if you asked my advice, sir, I'd surely say we'd be foolish not to go a little way into that ere crevice and see if we can't run across this cussed spy, because if he once gets clear, we'll have to pay the piper. Is it a go, Mr. Rex?"

His tone and manner were persuasive, and Rex, falling in with the spirit of adventure, as he recognized the value of keeping this scout from giving the wild alarm, immediately acquiesced.

So they plunged into the black crevice, which looked more like some freak of nature, resulting from a convulsion of the mountain in the days when Krokato was violent, than any possible passage constructed by man's ingenuity.

It was astonishing how rapidly the experienced Bludsoe pushed on. He seemed to keep one eye on the ground so as to follow the trail, while with the other he endeavored to pierce the darkness that lay like a pall just beyond the line marking the limit of their feeble torch's power.

Hastings could not but experience a sensation of thrilling interest as he kept at the other's heels.

They had quickly passed around several angles, so that a backward glance which Rex shot over his shoulder failed to reveal the first sign of light from the rear. On either side were the roughened, black walls, which looked very much as though they had been burned by the fire of ages, while under their feet the base of the crevice was threatening to trip them up with every move.

To add to the interest of the affair, both of them began to sniff suspiciously of the atmosphere, as though it aroused unbidden fears, for it became strongly impregnated with sulphur or brimstone, as though they approached the bottomless pit.

And as they thus rushed on Rex was surprised to have the flambeau thrust into his hand, while his companion shouted over his shoulder:

"We're closing on him fast, sir!"

CHAPTER XIII.

THE SNAP OF A ROPE.

It was easy to see that the cowboy had some plan of action in his mind—that even as he ran he had arranged a scheme by means of which he hoped and expected to accomplish the downfall of the black spy who scurried on before, and of whom they had occasional glimpses as he bounded from pillar to post in a sullen, unwilling way, as though he liked not the idea of being thus chased so heartily into the bowels of the earth.

Rex entered into the spirit of the game with a zest known only to the hunter—an eagerness that is seldom reciprocated by the fugitive, be it man or beast, straining every muscle and nerve to escape.

He kept close at Bludsoe's heels, and waved the torch above his head so that with the draught caused by this double movement, the flame hissed and roared, and ate deeper into the wood of which the flambeau was composed.

The air grew even more suggestive of the infernal regions—it was fetid and strongly impregnated with that sulphurous odor which they had noticed ever since plunging into the crack in the black rocks.

Still Jim Bludsoe ran on, and Rex would not allow any man to outdo him in an affair of this kind, no matter where it led. That was the Scotch blood of his way-back ancestors again—he owed much that was wholesome in his disposition to those sturdy men of brake and fen from whom he was descended.

As his eye rested momentarily on his companion he discovered that Jim had made his lasso ready—that weapon which is more than knife or revolver in the hands of one to the manner born, and with which an adept can perform feats that might stamp him a wizard in the eyes of a tenderfoot.

He coiled it as he ran and woe betide the black fugitive once the rope was launched forth by that practiced arm.

All the while they gained, possibly because the man who fled before them experienced an unwillingness to explore the mysteries of the subterranean passage, and also on account of their avoiding obstacles he stumbled over, thanks to the light.

Now he could be seen very plainly—Rex even caught the look of deadly fear upon his dark face as he twisted his head around in the endeavor to discover whether they were still gaining.

He really felt sorry for the wretch, and yet, knowing what it meant for them should the Zambodi warrior escape to sound the alarm, and arouse the black impis within ten leagues of the sacred crater, he was just as determined as Jim to continue the mad race until it came to its legitimate conclusion.

Twice he shouted to the fellow to stop and surrender, but his voice sounded like a trumpet blast in that narrow, ragged cleft, and appeared to only inspire additional terror in the fugitive, judging from the fresh spurt he took, fear lending him wings.

Bludsoe was almost ready to hurl his rope—he had begun to swing it around his head as if to give warning to Rex that he might keep his distance.

The black runner no longer scrambled over the rocks like a frightened chamois—he had come to a full stop, and his attitude was that of a man who finds himself between the devil and the deep sea—behind him were those white, adventurous spirits from whose touch he had fled in such haste like one possessed, while before him yawned an abyss whence arose a weird vapor that looked like a phantom smoke, together with a dull glare as of some fiery furnace far down in the bosom of the earth.

To make the leap meant but one chance in ten of his reaching the opposite side, such was the width of the awful chasm from which these sulphurous fumes drifted, and should failure be his portion his flight to the gates of Hades must be rapid indeed.

As the black athlete stood there, with every muscle strained in anticipation of the fearful task before him, and with one foot drawn back to give impetus to his leap, he presented a picture young Hastings could never forget to his dying day—a picture that has since graced the walls of a salon and aroused the most intense admiration for the marvellous look of fear and resolution combined upon the black face of the sinewy Zambodi warrior.

Bludsoe was swinging his lariat with increasing power, as though it were his intention to wrap the reckless spy in its coils ere he had a chance to launch himself forth upon such a haphazard mission.

He was too late to prevent it.

The black athlete suddenly leaped through space, his form describing a parabola as it rose and fell again.

Bravo! he struck the other side, clearing a greater space than the highest record of a standing jump ever reached, for the dread of death gave the amazing power of steel springs to his muscles.

"Great Scott! what a magnificent leap, and he made it—he has landed on the other side—a tiger could have done no better. Not yet—not yet—he staggers wildly on the brink—his footing is insecure and he failed to throw his weight forward. Poor devil—he is lost after all—my God! what a fate for a brave man."

Even while Rex was thus speaking the black warrior had been going through the most tremendous contortions in an endeavor to maintain the slight advantage secured by planting his feet upon the rocky brink of the cleft; but instead of gaining ground his most frantic and exhausting muscular efforts only served to keep his balance for a space not exceeding fifteen seconds of time.

Then from his lips burst a shriek such as might proceed from the lost souls in torment. Despair had swallowed up hope, and a consciousness of his terrible doom overwhelmed him.

So he ceased his mad efforts, and toppled over into the abyss, to go plunging down into the awful depths where mortal man could never descend and live.

But Jim Bludsoe was there, the man who had handled a lariat since a lad, Jim Bludsoe, who while the wretched brave wildly endeavored to maintain an equilibrium had rushed dangerously near the other edge, and giving his coiled rope a parting whirl, flung it out across the gulf.

As the man threw up his arms and fell back, Rex saw the noose had settled over his head and shoulders.

There was no time to see more, so rapidly did the unlucky devil shoot downward; and yet through the mind of Hastings flashed a sudden intense fear for his companion's safety, for if Jim Bludsoe held the other end of the lariat, the quick shock, as the entangled human plummet reached a perpendicular would be more than apt to drag him over the edge.

The cowboy, however, was one not to be caught napping in a case like this. He realized the danger even while casting his lariat, and the very instant its noose settled over the shoulders of the staggering black, by a quick turn he made a couple of turns around a projecting spur of rock that fortune seemed to have placed for just such a purpose.

Then came a thud as of a strained bass string on a violincello, instantly followed by a sharp, whip-like crack. Heavens! the lariat had not been equal to the strain—a sharp edge of rock, almost as keen as a knife blade as they afterwards discovered, had severed the tense strands—and the wretched athlete had gone down to eternity!

Rex crawled to the edge and looked over. What he saw made him shudder. Far, far below he could discover what looked like a small creek of red and yellow fire, though the clouds of smoke and vapor at times became so dnese as to utterly hide it from mortal vision.

Yet he knew he was gazing upon those slumbering internal fires that ages upon ages ago had boiled and bubbled in the tremendous crater, tearing the crown of the mountain away in their mad upheaval.

And that river of fire had formed the sepulchre of the wretched black spy who would have sounded the alarm if given the chance, and brought his tribe shouting wild war-cries about the devoted little band of adventurers. Perhaps it was just as well—in the fight for a continent, what matters one poor life, white or black—the beautiful land must be wrested from the grasp of fetish worshippers, and these seekers for treasure are really the pioneers of civilization. Possibly it is a strange philosophy, and yet the deeper it is examined the more pregnant with truths it becomes. Heroic treatment is sometimes necessary when glorious results are to be attained.

Jim Bludsoe looked grimly disappointed and it is to be feared was using some pretty strong language under his breath.

It was not on account of the poor devil of a black he lamented, but the fact that the major portion of his trusty lariat had accompanied the fellow when he made that headlong plunge into the fiery Styx far below. For a cowboy to be in the wilds without even an apology for a lasso, is something little short of a dire calamity.

At first he vented his abuse upon the rope, and loaded it with all manner of opprobrious epithets for proving so treacherous, until he snatched the torch from the hand of his companion and examined the rock around which he had snapped a couple of coils with such instantaneous rapidity, when of course he speedily discovered the true inwardness connected with the parting of the strands.

Then he called himself a fool for making an effort to save a wretched "nigger" when his death meant life to them; and Rex found it exceedingly difficult to comfort him as they began to retrace their steps.

It was time they were getting further away from that terrible crack in the rocks, for so powerful was the sulphuric gas that crept out of the abyss that it choked them and they were almost overcome.

They had plunged the treasure into the yawning mouths of the saddle bags, and disposed of the surplus about their persons, so that each and every one had a singularly corpulent appearance. As Rex and his companion emerged from the passage, they found Lord Bruno igniting one of Jim's torches, as the flash-light powder had given warning that it was about to yield up the ghost, while the professor had crawled inside the hideous three-headed image and was working its four arms, in the endeavor to discover how the fearful groaning sound was produced.

Little Phil hovered near Lord Bruno, as usual, while Red Eric had climbed upon one of the idols and was busily engaged in a laudable endeavor to punch the eyes of the image out, under the impression that they were composed of jewels.

The return of the warriors was greeted in a noisy fashion, for Lord Bruno gave a hearty English cheer, Red Eric waved his hat and let out a genuine whoop such as was his habit when in mad chase of runaway cattle, and even the French savant worked the arms of the head god from his perch within, with the result that a succession of diabolical sounds floated upon the air such as might have frozen the blood in a Christian's veins and must have been very demoralizing to the ignorant and superstitious fetish worshippers in the long ago.

Lord Bruno had seen enough. Now that Rex declared his mission to the temple satisfied they must quit these strange realms where the relics of a departed race held sway. Besides, Lord Bruno was filled with a most intense anxiety regarding the prospects of an interview with the mysterious white god of the Zambodi.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE THROWER OF ASSEGAIS.

Familiarity breeds contempt without a doubt, for while all of them have been more or less awed upon first entering the double chamber, and looking upon that silent assemblage of ancient and hideous deities, now that they had grown accustomed to the grinning or solemn-visaged chaps, it was small reverence they gave them.

Lord Bruno sounded the retreat, and two by two they stalked into the passage leading to the open air.

The sudden presence of the black spy had warned them that the old temple was not unguarded—while the Zambodi might not be in sympathy with the religion practiced by those who had occupied this region centuries before their coming, still it was holy ground for them, and the invasion of white men must be severely punished.

Only by death could the adventurers atone for their audacity in polluting the cemetery of idols with their hated presence.

Under the circumstances they kept a bright lookout as they advanced along the well remembered passage, heading for the exit. They could reach that spot none too speedily to please them, for the pure air of heaven would be like balm of Gilead to their distressed lungs and eyes, racked by the sulphur fumes of the cracked earth.

At last, Jim Bludsoe in the lead, they reached the opening, and one by one crawled out of the depression. The first thing they did was to fill their lungs with air and expel it, only to pump them full again. It was more delicious than nectar of the gods, and Red Eric roundly swore he could never quaff enough of the invigorating ozone.

Bludsoe was already looking to the right and to the left in his usual cautious manner. Possibly some intuition of portending trouble weighed upon his spirits.

Before his eyes had completed the circumference of the cliffs formed by the walls of the crater, Jim was heard to grunt in the peculiar way he had when something of an extraordinary nature was forced upon his observation.

His lordship knew what this meant, for he had made a special study of the cowboy's peculiarities.

"Where aways?" he asked, instantly, and then followed the line marked by the extended arm and finger of the other.

"Yonder where the dip lies, and the swell ain't quite as high as the rest. Keep your eye on it, sir—there, you saw it I reckon."

"I saw something flash, but it was quickly gone—just as a giant firefly might make a couple of plunges and vanish, or the lantern of a coast lighthouse gleam for an instant over the stormy waves, only to be followed by darkness."

"Just so, sir, this was a signal too, handed on from one black sentry to another on a second elevation, and telegraphed straight into the kraal at the foot of the kopje. What they are saying I don't know; but I can make a big bluff of a guess, and I reckon it's about us," was the other's cool response.

The breath of danger was incense to the nostrils of the rover, who scented the battle afar off.

Rex was hardly so composed, for somehow, the possession of those two little bags in his pockets gave him a feeling he could not have explained, but which was akin to a desire that he might reach the outposts of civilization as speedily as possible. He recognized the change that had come over the spirits of his dream, and even laughed quietly in scorn of his sudden discretion.

But Lord Bruno was disappointed. He had arranged his plans, and it was exceedingly hard for him to give up. The motive that urged him on was one that had been born in the heart. He had fostered it for many days and dreamed of it at night, until the idea of finding in this mystic goddess of the Zambodi the one who had so long been lost to kindred and friends had become the ruling passion of his life.

What to him were the eager longings of Rex Hastings, in his search for the Golden Fleece, or the equally mad desire of the French savant intent on disovering that strange freak long spoken of as the "missing link," and which was to send his name down the ages in harmony with such honored ones as Darwin and Spencer? The motives of the Englishman were of a much nobler character than these human desires for riches and fame.

That is why he contemplated the possible rising of the impis with a clouded brow. It was not any craven fear of personal danger, for Waterford had been in the army during his younger days, and demonstrated that he was a man who knew not the meaning of the word—upon the hot sands of Egypt with the column that struggled up the Nile to the gates of beleaguered Khartoum, only to arrive after brave Chinese Gordon had met his fate and the stronghold been sacked by the fanatical followers of the Mahdi, he had led his men in many a fierce scrimmage with fierce Arab and desert warrior, winning fresh laurels for his family name.

Lord Bruno was not the man to let his feelings get the better of his judgment. He knew just as soon as he heard Bludsoe's warning, that their business was to get out of the sacred crater as speedily as possible.

So far as they knew, there was but the one means of gaining the outer world. That was via the narrow, oblique shelf along which they had so cautiously picked their way when descending from the ragged black cliffs.

Should they meet the blacks when half way out, there would be the deuce to pay, with the chances pretty much in favor of their leaving a [illegible] legacy of bones in Krokato, over which future explorers would spin gauzy tales of speculative fancy.

"To the outlet!" was his slogan, and among them was not a man but who comprehended what this signified.

It was not a mad rush by any means—the weight of the gold laden bags would have prevented this even had there been any inclination to disorganization on the part of the little company; but each one seemed to recognize the value of time, and a bee-line was struck for the spot where they had landed.

The moon was still hidden by dense masses of clouds, and Bludsoe cast an occasional glance overhead as though he had some idea they would yet have to stand up under a flood when the gates of heaven were opened. Such a circumstance is a small affair in the eyes of a cowboy who flirts with nature's smiles and frowns every day of his life, learning to accept her unpleasant moods with as much equanimity as he does her favors.

Nothing occurred to disturb them while they pressed through copse and over blasted rocks, so that the wall was speedily gained.

Jim's judgment was as true as steel, for he had guided them to the identical place they wished to reach. So much for his faculty of observation, which long practice had made almost perfect.

Jim led off, with Lord Bruno at his heels, the others stringing out, and Red Eric bringing up the rear.

It is easier to climb up a wall of this character than to descend; besides, having once gone over the ground they were in a measure familiar with it.

Bludsoe held himself prepared for an emergency, and acting upon his suggestion every one of the others kept an eye on the man just ahead, ready to bring their progress to a sudden halt, should the signal be given.

Up they climbed.

The narrow ledge was sufficient to give a foothold, but in places they were compelled to be very cautious lest a slip might prove fatal.

Half the distance had been covered and as yet no note of warning passed along the line. It was good. Their spirits arose, and hope once more came to the fore.

Then came the shock.

Bludsoe had started to creep around an angle, when his eagle eye detected a sudden movement beyond. True to his instincts the plainsman instantly flattened himself out on the narrow ledge, and none too soon, for something went hissing through space just where his body had been, to bury itself in the depths below—something that cut the air with a sound never to be mistaken—something that carried death in its whistle.

It was Zambodi assegai or spear.

Ordinarily Jim would have been prompt to snatch a revolver from his belt, and return the courtesy with a few leaden cards that must have voiced his feelings; but under the peculiar conditions he was averse to making such a response just now, since it would positively throw off the mask, and give notice of their presence.

Hence, his first act was to shuffle back around the angle, much as a crab might retreat in the face of danger. Luckily there was room enough between Lord Bruno and himself to allow this movement.

The line no longer kept in motion, but its constituent members came to a stop, and huddled as close together as the narrow limits of their footing would admit.

All had heard the angry hiss accompanying the passage of the assegai that had shot through blank space, and no explanation was needed. They simply waited to hear what Bludsoe had in his mind—to carry out any suggestions he might offer.

Advancing Years.

AT LIFE'S EVENING.

To those well along in years there comes, according to the condition of the system, their measure of ills and suffering. Some are young at 70, while others are old at 40.

Elderly people who once use Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill find that it has marvelous power to relieve them of the troubles that nothing else will shake off, especially backache, constipation, bladder trouble, failing appetite, and indigestion. If ANTI-PILL is used upon taking cold, the aches and pains that usually follow will be avoided. To prove this, send to WILSON-FYLE CO., Niagara Falls, Ont., for a free sample. ANTI-PILL is sold by druggists at 50 cents a box.

Dr. Shoop's
Rheumatic Cure

COSTS NOTHING IF IT FAILS.

Any honest person who suffers from rheumatism is welcome to this offer. For years I searched everywhere to find a specific for rheumatism. For nearly 20 years I worked to this end. At last, in Germany, my search was rewarded. I found a costly chemical that did not disappoint me as other rheumatic prescriptions had disappointed physicians everywhere.

I do not mean that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure can turn bony joints into flesh again. That is impossible. But it will drive from the blood the poison that causes pain and swelling, and then that is the end of rheumatism. I know this so well that I will furnish for a full month my Rheumatic Cure on trial. I cannot cure all cases within a month. It would be unreasonable to expect that. But most cases will yield within 30 days. This trial treatment will convince you that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure is a power against rheumatism—a potent force against disease that is irresistible.

My offer is made to convince you of my faith. My faith is but the outcome of experience—of actual knowledge. I "know" what it can do. And I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on rheumatism. I will then arrange with a druggist in your vicinity so that you can secure six bottles of Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure to make the test. You may take it a full month on trial. If it succeeds the cost to you is $5.50. If it fails the loss is mine and mine alone. It will be left entirely to you. I mean that exactly. If you say the trial is not satisfactory I don't expect a penny from you.

Write me and I will send you the book. Try my remedy for a month. If it fails the loss is mine.

Address, Dr. Shoop, Box 969, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases not chronic are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

CHRISTMAS FEASTING.

A Variation From Tradition—The Knickerbocker Chicken Pie.

Housekeepers who are not bound by tradition are recommended to try braised turkey, which an old writer declares is the ne plus ultra of gastronomic art. Fill the turkey with the best forcemeat you can command. The most elegant is a chicken forcemeat mixed with sweetbreads and mushrooms or truffles, but an ordinary bread or celery or chestnut stuffing may be used. After the bird is picked, singed and drawn hold it breast down for a few moments over a bright fire to stiffen it and lard the breast alone with shreds of fat, salt dried pork. Place it in a large saucepan, one without the ordinary long handle, laying it breast uppermost. Add sliced onion, celery, carrot and some sprigs of parsley, with veal broth almost sufficient to cover. Cover the saucepan tightly, set in a moderate oven and cook slowly. When half done add seasonings of salt and pepper, and when tender take it out, lay in the roasting pan and brown quickly, basting with butter. Strain the gravy, thicken and serve in a boat.

The Christmas dinner of the descendant of the Knickerbockers would be incomplete without a chicken pie. It is baked in a pan, the sides only of which are lined with crust. Only the breasts and boned first and second joints are used. These tidbits are seasoned and laid in the pan with alternate layers of a very delicate forcemeat, the whole covered with a rich broth made from the rest of the chicken with a delicate flavoring of onion, celery and parsley. The top crust is laid on, a hole cut in the top for a vent and the pie cooked for two hours in a slow oven. Brown paper must be kept over it until fifteen minutes before serving, when the crust must be delicately browned. This is a feast in itself, and it is a pity to serve it midway at any dinner, but it is as good if not better cold.

In Germany the goose holds the same place as the turkey on American tables. It is either stuffed with chestnuts or a dish of boiled kale garnished with boiled chestnuts is served with it. The poor man stuffs his bird with apples and garnishes the kale with fried potatoes.—Table Talk.

Tommy's Bad Break.

"We are going to have pie for dinner," said Tommy Uptown to the minister.

"Indeed!" laughed the clergyman, amused at the little boy's alertness. "And what kind of pie is it?"

"It's a new kind. Ma was talking this morning about pa bringing you home to dinner so often, and pa said he didn't care what she thought, and ma said she would make him eat humble pie before the day was over, and I suppose we are going to have it for dinner."

TIMELY TOPICS.

Grit papers are just now troubling themselves about the Conservative French-Canadian Leadership in the Province of Quebec. The last story is that Monk retires and, Tarte succeeds him. It would be interesting to know whether the Conservative party have any knowledge of what is going on in this particular, other than that which appears in the Grit newspapers. Sir John Macdonald once replied to an interviewer, when asked a political question: "I don't know. I have not seen the opposition papers this morning."

The reason given for the calling of the Ontario Legislature together so suddenly was on account of the necessity of transacting important business. Now Premier Ross asks for an adjournment for some days. What humbugs!

"One is tempted to ask Herve Riel's question, 'Is it love the lying's for?' Did all these personators and the returning officers who may be found guilty do their filthy work for fun? Scarcely. There must have been an employer somewhere. And it will be the chief business of the men entrusted with the investigation to go behind the scenes and drag the respectable scoundrels who supplied the money into the light. Let them be put in the pillory beside their tools.— Toronto Globe.

Who could have believed that after either silence or indirect approval of the means adopted to keep Ross in power in Huron, Elgin, Waterloo, Oxford, Brockville et al., The Globe would all at once become virtuous, and so anxious for the punishment of election frauds? Surely it must be a Monday outburst after a quiet Sunday.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE

IN STORE FOR THOSE WHO DOUBT.

When you read that a sufferer of many years' standing has been completely restored to health by using Smith's Cure-all, you are inclined to doubt the statement and, in fact, have no belief in it whatever. The reason for this is that so much is claimed for the Cure-all it is impossible for anyone to believe it; if the advertiser confined his claims to the curing of one disease, as do the proprietors of Pyramid Pile Cure, readers would have much more faith in published testimonials. Those familiar with this great remedy know that testimonials as to its merit may be relied upon implicitly, also that the cures brought about by its use are little short of marvellous. The genuineness of the testimonial here given is vouched for and is but one of thousands received:

"I wish to write to you and tell you what your Pyramid Pile Cure has done for me. I have been troubled with piles for the past five years and used every remedy that was recommended to me. While some would give me relief for a while they never have cured. I was so bad this summer I could not get up or down without pain; could not attend to my household duties. Finally I got a 50 cent box of your Pyramid Pile Cure at the druggist's and it is now two months since I used the last of the box, and have had no trouble since. I can say it is really and truly a good remedy.

"I am so thankful I tried it as I know it has cured me, and if at any time I should have such trouble again I would use it at once. Since I am cured I have recommended it to my friends, whom I know to be afflicted as I was, and I know they will use it too. I am so thankful I ever learned of your cure." Mrs. F. Hutt, 460 2nd street, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Pyramid Pile Cure is sold by druggists for 50 cents a package, or will be mailed to any address upon receipt of price by Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich. Write this firm for their book describing the cause and cure of piles.

Didn't Think the Queen Would Like It.

An English paper tells a funny story of Prince Edward of Wales when he had only a few years to his credit. His teacher was trying to give him some idea of heaven. "Everybody will be happy there," she said. "Every one will share happiness equally."

"Really, truly equal?" asked the little boy.

"Yes, my dear."

"Yes; no matter what or who we are in this world," was the innocent reply.

After some seconds came the question, "Will great-grandma (the Queen) go to heaven?"

Shocked, the teacher assured him that it would be impossible to doubt it even for a moment.

"Well," after an instant's reflection, "I'm very sure she won't like that. I'm sure she would rather stay here, for she won't have any sort of a time there."

CLERK SENT FOR TRIAL

Durance Held in $600 Bond on Conspiracy Charge.

Ballot Box Stuffed After the Close of the Poll—Police Magistrate Denison Orders Speedy Trial in Toronto Municipal Scandal Cases—Ex-Controller Burns Case Begun But Not Finished.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—Six hours of energetic investigation into the election scandal yesterday revealed sufficient crooked work to warrant Magistrate Denison holding Poll Clerk John Durance for trial, establishing beyond question that the ballot box in that division had been stuffed with twenty-five bogus votes after the poll closed and the submission of all the evidence of the Crown connecting ex-Controller William Burns with repeating. The efforts of Thompson's counsel supplemented by a physician's certificate of illness prevented the accused returning officer going to trial, but similar tactics on behalf of Durance failed to delay the Police Court proceedings.

Brushed Away Technicalities.

The swiftness with which Magistrate Denison brushed all technicalities aside that were calculated to delay action and held to the one question of dispatch was a disturbing factor to the lawyer defending the election officials, though Messrs. Slattery and Robinette for Mr. Burns announced their readiness to proceed instantly. The vigorous language of the magistrate accompanied by the deliberate preparations for forcing a trial was equally significant to others accused and their friends present, and the seriousness of the whole affair was forecasted in the calling of the Durance charge in the face of all opposition.

From 11 until 5 o'clock was consumed in the Durance case, and the disposition to push the entire investigation was so strong as to induce the court to remain in session until 7 o'clock. Gradually the story was unfolded and the wholesale disfranchisement of voters in sub-division nine of Ward Four became a matter of police court record.

Ex-Controller Burns' Case Called.

The verdict of the magistrate had been discounted, and little surprise was exhibited when Durance was held for trial. The crowd increased in proportions as ex-Controller Burns' case was called. The magistrate clearly indicated the state of his mind when the books of the divisions, where the defendant was accused of voting, were introduced, when he observed: "After the Crown has brought these twenty-one witnesses in here who swear they did not vote in the face of the fact that the records of the poll show they did, I must insist that it is scarcely sufficient to accept these books in other cases as conclusively correct."

What Curry Will Prove.

Crown Attorney Curry, in the course of explanation, said to the court that he was prepared to prove that twenty-five votes were recorded as having been cast after the Cleary sisters left the booth; that all were bogus; that these ballots were marked by the same hand for Board of Control, and ex-Ald. Steve Burns and S. Alfred Jones, and I will urge your honor to conclude that nobody but the deputy returning officer and the poll clerk could have polled these votes or these gentlemen in combination with them."

Mr. Curry observed that bail would be required in the Durance case. The magistrate said: "Yes, two sureties each in $300." The two brothers of Samuel Thompson, accused jointly with Durance, came forward and signed the bond, qualifying on a small piece of real estate.

The Burns case will be resumed Wednesday, when the Maguire and Thompson cases will also be called.

GROWS MORE SERIOUS.

Abyssinians Acting Passively With the Mad Mullah Now.

Rome, Feb. 2.—The situation in Somaliland is growing more serious. It has been learned that the Abyssinian army sent out to fight the Mullah did not proceed beyond the point where the water wells ended, and it is known that the Mullah sent emissaries to the Abyssinians, who seem to have succeeded in inducing them not to fight against their own race. It is not true, however, as the Mullah boastfully declares, that this Abyssinian force entered into an alliance with him; still their attitude has been changed from the active assistance expected from them into one of passivity.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation —Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alternative, and in neutralising the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED. AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

T. S. McINTEE.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption.

Much talk, many lies.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

Woman's Priceless Pearl

The greatest menace to happiness is her health. The gravest menace to her health is Kidney Disease. Mrs. Young says South American Kidney Cure is a "priceless pearl." So it is.

Mrs. A. E. Young, Barnston, Que., says: "It is seven months since I took my last dose of South American Kidney Cure and I have not had the slightest symptom of the aggravating Kidney trouble from which I suffered so many years. I paid doctors a small fortune without any permanent results. This great remedy is a "priceless pearl" for women suffering as I did."

REV. DR. TALMAGE'S UNITY SERMON FROM CURIOUS TEXT.

SERMON INSPIRING LESSON.

Message to Churches and Religious Communities That Have Been Torn By Dissension or Weakened By Discord—Spiritual Victories For Christians Acting As a Harmonious Unit—Gideon's Unique Victory.

Los Angles, Cal., Jan. 31.—To the churches and religious communities that have been torn by dissension or weakened by discord and defection this sermon conveys a powerful and inspiring lesson, showing how even a small company of Christians, acting as a harmonious unit, may win great spiritual victories. The text is Judges vii, 6, "And the number of them that lapped, putting their hand to their mouth, was three hundred men."

No sinecurist is the army's recruiting officer. In most cases, whether in peace or war, the problem which must be solved by the war department is not "How can we reject our volunteers?" but "How can we persuade or even compel men to enlist in the ranks?" During America's great civil war all healthy men in the south between the ages of eighteen and sixty were forced to shoulder a musket if unwilling to go as volunteers, while in the north, after the volunteers had ceased to respond to Lincoln's repeated calls for troops the "draft" officers went everywhere.

The story of Gidean's campaign is unique in history. Here was a general about to march against a powerful invader, well armed and equipped, whom he must meet with a raw and undisciplined force, actually reducing by a capricious test the number of his followers. Under God's command he dispensed with nine-tenths of his men. When General Gideon raised his standard to repel the invasion of the Midianites and Amalekites 32,000 volunteers answered the call to arms. But God said to Gideon, better quality than quantity. Better a few loyal and devoted men to repel the invasion than a great host made up of disgruntled and fault finding, indifferent recruits. Gideon, as directed by God, cut down the numbers of that Israelitish army. He cut them down and down and down and down until there were left only three hundred men—only three small companies to follow their intrepid leader. But they won the victory. So it may be in the great conflict between good and evil in this world. Consecrated, loyal, earnest men are needed in the struggle for righteousness.

The church should be a harmoniously organized army. The loyalty with which one soldier holds to another in the national army decides to a great extent the aggregate strength of that army. When going into battle it is just as important for a soldier to know that he is standing shoulder to shoulder with friends as to realize that he is standing face to face with attacking foes. Civil war veterans have told me that the affection which bound the men of each company together was like bands of unbreakable steel. If a soldier out foraging found food hidden away in a barn or if he found a deserted pile of blankets or an extra pile of dry wood to be cut into kindling, the first persons he thought of were those of his company. There the members shared each other's joys. They sympathized with each other in their sorrows. So, my friends, the members of each separate Christian church ought to be linked together by gospel love. They should try to shield each other and pray for each other and care for each other and help each other. They should never before the world expose each other's weaknesses any more than a wife should be willing to publish before a cynical neighborhood the weaknesses and shortcomings of her husband. Church members, in other words, should "be kindly affectioned to one another, with brotherly love, in honor preferring one another."

"The church a harmonious gospel company? Oh, no," says one. "That ideal is not always a possibility. I know it is not possible for me to live in sympathy and love with all the members of my church. Some of them have been too mean and have done me too many injustices. I can truly say I do not want to harm them, but I certainly desire that they should leave me entirely alone. I certainly intend to leave them entirely alone. I do not wish to keep them out of heaven, but I do not wish some of them to sit beside me in a celestial mansion or by any common earthly fireside made of brick and stone." My friend, by such an answer you are proving the Holy Spirit's power inefficacious. You are demonstrating that you are unwilling to become one of Gideon's band and live in faithful harmony with the chosen three hundred. God is willing to give you grace enough to love all your fellow church members if you will only ask for that grace. Has not the sure testimony been given, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me?"

You are now about to decide your whole eternal destiny. You are to decide it not by how you profess to love God, but by how you are willing to love your fellow church members. Are you ready, here and now, as Christian soldiers to "be kindly affectioned to one another, with brotherly love in honor preferring one another?" Do not tell me that it is impossible for you to live in Christian sympathy with those who belong to your same church family. By the grace of God it is possible. And if you are not willing to let that divine love have full control of your life, then instead of staying in a church and disputing and finding fault continually with the other members it is far better for you to leave that church and go back to the world and thereby play the gospel coward, as did the 22,000 men who deserted Gideon's standard at the first opportunity the Hebrew commander gave them to skulk home.

The church should be a harmoniously organized army. It is not only possible thereby to hurl a solid front against the Satanic foe, but also by preponderance of numbers, concentrated in one move, to make, as the Bible says, a little one "become a thousand and a small one a strong nation." Concentration in military parlance means not only conquest, but generally the complete mystification and disorganization of an opposing foe.

It was by the successful concentration of forces against his enemies and by the lightning rapidity of his movements that Napoleon Bonaparte won his great victories. During all the military career of the "Little Corsican" his armies were outnumbered by those of his opponents. But one day we find the brilliant military genius attacking one wing of the Austrian army. The next day we find him attacking another wing of the Austrian army. One day he is falling upon the defenseless Italian fields by boldly scaling the Alps. Another day we see him concentrating his artillery fires upon a separated part of the German army. Napoleon with his forces would have been wiped off the face of the earth ten years before he met his fate at Waterloo had he attempted to battle his enemies in bulk. He beat Austria and Italy and Germany and Spain by defeating his foes by detail—piecemeal. He did it by the power of military concentration. This was the way Frederick the Great carried on his wars of many years. This was the way Washington and Nathanael Greene won their victories. So, my friends, as Gideon marshaled his three hundred, the church soldiers should be a united band. They must be able to hurl all their spiritual strength against the Satanic foe in one place and at one time.

How can this great forward movement of a single church against sin be concentrated and conserved? First, by all the church members every seven days answering church roll at the mid-week prayer meeting. Wednesday night prayer meetings is even more important than the Lord's day worship. It is by the commingling of prayers that the spiritual forces of a church become inflamed with the holy zeal and all conquering gospel enthusiasm. It is to that roll call that the members of the church must give diligent heed. Concentrated church membership at the mid-week prayer meeting is of overwhelming importance. I know of what I speak. During my life I have observed the ways of two kinds of churches. In the one I have seen a mighty gospel conquest going on month in and month out. Why? The people attended the mid-week prayer meeting. In the other kind of church spiritual results were never assured. Why? The people, no matter how the pastor begged and pleaded, failed to attend the mid-week prayer meeting. A church with a full prayer meeting means a spiritually conquering church. A church with an empty prayer meeting means a spiritually dead church.

The concerted forward movement of a church, in the next place, must be manifested in the united voices of its members lifted in songs of praise and in its gospel energy. Oh, yes, the very best voices trained by our musical colleges are never too good to be allowed to sing in the church choir. But the church members have no more right, in this gospel movement, to let the choir do all the singing than the pew has to expect the pulpit to do all the praying. Methodist pews have sung as many immortal souls into glory as Methodist pulpits have won by preaching. "Let everything that breathes praise the Lord!" In every service let the old fashioned hymns be given out and let all the people sing. Yea, shout forth your gospel battle songs like the sound of many waters! Concentration of the church forces in prayer meeting means spiritual conquest for Christ. Concentration of the songs of praise in one great congregational chorus means also spiritual conquest for Christ.

The concerted strength of the church, in the next place, should make that church a unit in its belief in the authority of God's revealed word and also in its protest against sin, wherever found. When the three hundred Gideonites went forth to battle, their most effective weapons were a lighted lamp concealed within a pitcher and a trumpet in the right hand. The lamp lighted, can be used as the symbol of gospel faith, as revealed in God's word. The trumpet can be used as the symbol of the voice of a Christian church protesting against a world steeped in sin. Plenty of room in every Christian church for all repentant sinners saved by Christ's blood, but no room for any man who will not accept the sacrificial blood of Jesus Christ and who will not protest against sin, wherever found. The Christian church must be a unit in its Calvary belief, and it must be a unit in its protest against sin.

As in every other army, the Christian army must have a countersign. When I belonged to the United States army, during the Spanish-American war, there were certain times I could not pass in or out of the camp without giving the countersign. So we find that all the Christian churches have a countersign. That countersign is one word of five letters, and that one word is Jesus, Jesus, Jesus, Jesus! Jesus, who is our Saviour; Jesus, who lived and died and rose again to redeem the world and to save his people from their sins.

The church army must be a harmonious army and show a brave front. There is sure to be to a more or less extent cowardice lurking in the hearts of us all. If one Christian soldier is allowed, using a common phrase, to show the "white feather," he will be very apt to demoralize all the ranks. "What!" you say, "Every man to a more or less extent a coward?" Yes, my friend. We all have a cowardly streak within us. We must therefore be very careful how we let a faint hearted Christian soldier influence us to turn and run.

If you do not believe that all men may become outward cowards, read the memoirs of one of our greatest generals, than whom no braver man ever lived. Yet he tells us that when he went into battle the first time he trembled like an aspen leaf shaken in the wind. He was so scared that he would have turned and fled but for the fact that he was afraid his regiment would run away with him. Then, much to his surprise, when he came to where the enemy had been encamped he found that they had been even more frightened than himself. During the previous night, without striking a blow, the enemy had turned and fled. Yes, there is a cowardly streak in all of us. Therefore, Christian soldiers, do not go publishing around your fears. Do not criticise your minister in public, because you may start others criticising him. Do not talk about your anxieties lest the church audiences should not keep us. Do not exaggerate the results of your foolish imaginations. Do not, in other words, give free rein to your gospel cowardice. If you do you may unkennel and unleash the cowardly disposition in us all. If you ever wish to be a blessing as a church member, only sound forth the inspiring words of hope. God knows there are enough and too many who are always ready to sit around in the dark church corners and croak the miserable, whining, grating words of despair.

Lastly, I remark that a church membership should be a united and harmonious and compact army. One traitor in the camp can do infinitely more damage than five hundred enemies without.

It is of vast importance that the preservation of the sacred honor of the Christian church be intrusted to those who are truly her friends. Therefore, my fellow church members, never try to placate a church enemy by electing any man to a position of trust unless he be a prayerful man and unless deep down in his Christlike heart he fully realizes the solemnity of his trust. Never elect any man to a position in a church unless that man is first ready to put all bitterness out of his heart and to get down on his knees and earnestly and tenderly say: "O Lord, my God, teach me to love my fellow church members. Teach me to be an under shepherd to them, as thou art ready to guide me. Teach me, O Master, to say, 'I forgive,' as I would have thee say unto me, 'I forgive thee also, my child.'" No man in church life is fitted to be a leader of men until he himself is first ready to be cleansed of sin. Better a smaller church; better three hundred loyal Gideonites than thirty-two thousand men who are not ready to let Christ lead them as he would.

But I cannot close my study of this mighty theme of the church as a conquering army without telling you, my people, the object I have in view. First, I want to kindle to holy zeal the scores and hundreds and thousands of churches all over the land which have for years been torn and rent asunder with internal strife. Pastors are discouraged, people are discouraged. Christian communities are discouraged about them. "Oh," these people say, "we are only a little handful. We have dwindled down and down until there is hardly any membership left. What are we to do?" Why, ye discouraged churches, by the grace of God ye can do everything. God has been sifting your membership until the best are left. You are now a Gideon's band. United and welded together by trouble you can accomplish wonders. It was not by great numbers that Gideon won, but by the loyalty of a few.

My second purpose in this sermon is to show you that these conquerors over the Midianitish hosts were ordinary men. Who were they? We don't know. They were selected at random. Some came perhaps from wealthy homes; some came from the homes of poverty. They were all selected simply by the way they lapped up the water when they drank of the famous brook. So God is going to judge our availability to be among his chosen followers by the way we are ready to do, in his name, the little things of life. He will judge whether we are fitted for membership in the Gideonite band by the way we smile a good-morning; by the way we help upon the car a poor woman with her basket; by our willingness to sit by an humble sick-bed; by the way we lead in prayer in the house of trouble and by the way we forgive.

The third purpose: I would show that these three hundred immortal Gideonite conquerors were all volunteers. Christ's disciples must be volunteers, not conscripts. The Christian soldier of the church must be a volunteer. Will you enlist under Christ's banner? Will you go forth in the name of this church, a united band, to march against the Satanic hosts? Will you go forth a harmonious company of Christians, ready to battle in Christ's name? Will you not realize that all your past trials, whether in church or out of it, have been only a means used to fit you for ultimate gospel triumph?

The Human Voice.

Every person hears his own voice differently from other voices, including his own, in the phonograph, because when he speaks the sound is carried to the ear not only by the air, but also directly through the bones of the head, which changes its tone color.

Football.

Football is almost as popular in Burma as it is in the United States. The natives play the game unshod and kick and shoot goals with bare feet.

ORR & SCHRYVER.

A STORY WITH A MORAL.

There Are Ways and Ways of Advertising One's Business.

There was once an advertising agent who called on a business man to prove to him that advertising in a newspaper was more effective than advertising on billboards. The business man was skeptical on this point. He had been in the habit of distributing his business signs all over the face of the landscape, and he regarded this sort of exaggerated tattooing as no less wise than picturesque, as perhaps it was. His idea of the picturesque differed from that of the Barbizon school of painting.

The agent said, "I will prove to you that a sign painted on a dead wall is of very little practical value."

The business man said, "If you can I will advertise in your paper."

The agent made out his contract. Then he said: "There is an advertisement seven feet by four painted in large letters on the wall of a seven story building which you pass on your way to your office every morning. Can you tell me what it is?"

The business man racked his memory in vain. He could remember that there was a sign there in white letters on a blue ground, but though he had seen it every morning for many years he could not remember anything more. Then the agent led him out and showed him that it was an advertisement of somebody's liver pills.

This story carries its own moral. When the first advertisement was painted on a wall for those to read who never read newspapers it doubtless did attract attention. But when a dozen brass bands are tooting at a time, it would puzzle an expert to tell what tune any of them is playing. In passing along the street the brain can only take in a certain number of impressions and instinctively rejects those not of immediate interests. In reading a newspaper the attention of the reader is given to the space before him for several minutes, perhaps half an hour. He sees things which he would not notice in an instant's survey. If he happens to want some particular kind of goods he cannot go out on the streets and scan the buildings for the sign of the dealer. He looks in the paper or in the directory. Any one who wishes to test the comparative value of the street sign and the newspaper need only make the experiment described in the story. The chances are that he cannot tell the names of three of the numerous firms whose goods he has seen advertised on walls and fences between his home and his place of business.—Washington Times.

A Busy Statesman.

Apart from his occasional attention to gardening, Mr. Chamberlain is probably as busy when at Highbury as during his heaviest official work. His correspondence and public duties have rather increased than otherwise with his relinquishment of official life. Two hundred letters, on an average, are received by him each day; all are read and answered personally, with the aid of a private secretary and competent shorthand writers. This correspondence has to be dealt with most carefully; for artful opponents are forever laying cunning traps for the Birmingham statesman, and too faithful friends are but little less troublesome with their suggestions and conundrums. The house is beset with newspaper correspondents, with whom Mr. Chamberlain is always popular. He talks freely with them and fully appreciates the power and influence of the press; yet no correspondent has ever extracted a secret from him. He works far into the night, Parliamentary life having accustomed him to late hours. Three in the morning often finds him still at his desk. His speeches are carefully prepared, and are privately declaimed to his secretary the day before delivery, the statesman meanwhile smoking a brier pipe or a fat black cigar.—F. A. Acland, in January Booklovers' Magazine.

Notice to Baby Correspondents.

If a strange event that has stirred the office of The Australian Woman (a Sydney contemporary) to its soul is to be made a precedent, says The St. James' Gazette, then life will become more horrifying than ever. It seems that one morning a lovely baby was found lying on the doorstep with a note pinned to the infant's clothes, in which the unknown mother threw herself and the baby on the editor's mercy because it was a woman's paper, and because "when I saw the Children's Hospital picture in your paper I thought you must be fond of children." It is much to the credit of our contemporary that the baby has become a member of the staff. We deem it only right, however, to issue a warning. We are, ourselves, fond of children—in moderation. Enough, however, is as good as a feast, and we cannot undertake to fill our quiver in this vicarious fashion. So by all embarrassed mothers we wish it to be understood that failing a stamped and addressed envelope all contributions, babies or otherwise, run a serious risk of the paper-basket's oblivion.

Sister Hostesses.

It cannot be denied that sisters make charming hostesses whenever one finds them keeping house together and hospitably inclined. For one thing it is a gain to have two hostesses instead of one, and sisters are accustomed to one another and can understand each other without a word and instinctively feel what is going on. They can talk together of quite different things and yet keep tune. Many a sisterly shrine must occur to each one of us, with warming hearth and pleasant words of welcome. It matters not whether it is in Brighton or in London, past or present, or in the murky Manchester or on a Cornish crag or by some distant Cumberland lake side. One always seems to be at ease where reflected kindness lights up the friendly hours of companionship and rest.

The Capital of Morocco.

In Fez, the capital of Morocco, most of the houses consist of several stories, each being provided with a light veranda running round it and connecting the rooms. All the windows and doors open out into the patio, or court yard, the window openings in the upper stories being covered with close trellis work. All the houses have flat roofs, with a wall some four to six feet high running around, and from 4 p.m. until sunset the roofs are given over to the ladies exclusively, who can then walk about and take the fresh air without being seen by any of the opposite sex. This reservation is a law which is never broken, and no man would be guilty of being seen on his or on any other roof during the forbidden hours. Owing to the fact that the women of the house are not allowed to be seen by any other man than their lord and master, all domestic offices are situated away from the house proper. In many of the larger houses, besides the water fountains, others playing scent or scented water are to be found. Sections of the court yard also are slightly sunk, and these portions are filled with scented oil, which is used to perfume the rooms. The Moors are exceptionally particular in discarding their footgear before entering a room or crossing a rug or carpet; they even change slippers before entering the court yard from the street. Thus the houses are kept beautifully clean and sweet, and are not, as many people would suppose, musty or close.

and will quickly eradicate all traces of scalp bacteria, which is the cause of hair falling, dandruff and baldness. NO SCALP CAN BE HEALTHY AND NO HAIR CAN BE BEAUTIFUL WHEN CONTAMINATED WITH THESE DISEASE-BREEDING CREATURES. They undermine the hair and devour all the nutriment or life-sap of the scalp, without which the scalp dries up and peels off, forming dandruff and causing the loss of hair. SEVEN SUTHERLAND SISTERS HAIR GROWER AND SCALP CLEANER ARE THE ONLY REMEDIES IN THE WORLD THAT WILL DESTROY THESE GERMS. They penetrate the scalp thoroughly, carrying with them all the necessary properties to quickly regenerate all the impoverished parts. They rebuild the lost tissues of the scalp and renew the growth of the hair in every case. A few applications will make the hair fairly sparkle with new life and vigor. They make healthy hair grow twice to three times as fast as it does normally.

THE HYPOSCOPE.

Military Device Destined to Revolutionise Warfare.

Successful contestants at Bisley brought back with them from England a little instrument which is destined to play an important part in the warfare of the future. It is called a hyposcope, and its purpose is to enable a marksman to fire with accurate aim without exposing his head to the fire of the enemy. It was invented by William Youlton of Brighton and was used with good results in the latter part of the Boer war.

The hyposcope is adapted to be secured to the stock of the rifle, near the breech. It consists of a series of mirrors mounted in a tube of inverted L shape. The shorter arm lies across the barrel of the rifle, while the longer arm hangs down at one side. The first mirror reflects the light coming in along the barrel of the rifle to a second mirror at the elbow of the instrument, which directs the rays downwards to a mirror at the lower end of the tube, and thence it passes out at right angles to the eye. Thus on looking in at the eye-piece one can see the sights of his rifle and take accurate aim while holding the gun above his head.

The vertical arm of the instrument comprises two telescoping sections, so that by means of a thumb-screw at the side this arm may be extended to elevate the device for long range shooting. The amount of elevation may be accurately determined by means of a fine scale on the upper section. In order to allow for windage a thumb-screw at the end of the horizontal arm may be rotated to move the mirror contained therein slightly to one side or the other. A scale on this arm shows just how far the mirror must be moved for different velocities and directions of the wind.

The entire instrument is very compact and light, weighing about a pound. It is provided with a holster, in which it may be encased to prevent it from sustaining any injury when not in use. The parts, however, are not liable to be easily injured. In case a mirror is broken a new one can readily be slipped into the old frame.

A company of 100 men using the hyposcope skillfully would be able to kill 700 of the enemy and wound 200 more in less than five minutes. A regiment safely entrenched could put hors de combat more men than Napoleon lost at Waterloo.

A Cautious Husband.

The late Phil May (of him Mr. Whistler said, "Black and white work is summed up in two words—Phil May") was talking once in London about his early days of penury in Australia.

"For a time," he said, "I boarded—I boarded with an honest family in a house with an actor named Gayo. Rates were low enough in our boarding house, but Gaye nevertheless fled one night without paying a month's board. There was a hubbub when his flight was discovered. The landlady, a pretty woman, sent the maid around to the theatre to say that if he didn't settle up before nightfall she would come herself to collect his account.

"When the maid returned she was empty handed.

" 'Well,' said our landlady, 'what did Mr. Gaye say to you, Jane?'

" 'He said, ma'am,' Jane answered, 'that he wouldn't pay, and if you dared to come to the theatre yourself he'd kiss you.'

" 'The impudent wretch!' exclaimed the landlady. 'I'll show him! Kiss me, will he? Well, I'm going to him now, and let him try to kiss me if he dares.'

" 'Don't go,' he said gently. 'Gaye said he'd kiss you, and perhaps he will, for there's no telling what a man will do when he's in a passion.' "

Royal Commission on Births.

The London Daily Chronicle of Nov. 14 says: The first Royal Commission on the birth rate ever formed in the British Empire has now been appointed in New South Wales, and has begun to hold sittings. The Australian birth rate was referred to in this column some months ago, as an extreme instance of the general tendency, but it seems to be taken for granted that, in the present case, the deliberate intention of the people is the determining factor. It need hardly be said that France is in a similar plight, and that in all probability the proportion of white to other races on the earth is steadily falling year by year, despite the recent destruction of most aboriginal races by alcohol and tuberculosis. As a result of ten years' fall in New South Wales, the birth rate is now just over twenty-five per thousand. This may be compared with the rate of fifty reached in an alien quarter of London not so long ago. The Commission, which includes five medical men, is to furnish its report within three months, and is to refer to the difficulty experienced by young men in obtaining private employment, owing to the development of State Socialism.

Steeplejack's Escape.

The London Express of a recent date had the following: A steeplejack named Towie has just had a terrible escape from death. He was engaged with others in erecting a chimney 300 feet high at some bleach works at Edgeley, near Stockport, and was taking down the staging when his hand became entangled in the ropes. He was lifted off his feet to the pulley, where his fingers became jammed in the wheels. Here he remained suspended at a height of 300 feet for ten minutes, and was with difficulty rescued by his comrades from his terrible plight. In a fainting condition the man was taken to Stockport Infirmary, where it was found that his fingers had been practically torn from one of his hands.

INTERESTING INTERVIEW WITH DR. WILLS.

THE CREDIT CANADIEN AFFAIR.

Dr. Wills, who is largely interested in mines in the Yukon Territory, and also one of the Directors in the "Credit Canadien," Paris, arrived in the city a day or two ago direct from France, was waited upon by an Intelligencer reporter, who, after welcoming him home to his native city and congratulating him on his healthy appearance, asked:

"What's the trouble, Doctor, with your affairs in Paris? There have been all kinds of reports flying about, particularly in French papers published in Montreal, to the effect that your partner, Mr. Carbonneau, has had trouble with the Oblat Fathers on some stock transaction, and that he had been, or was to be arrested, and an investigation held by the French Government into the affairs of the company. Can you give me any information for publication upon the subject, as these reports have been exciting not only the curiosity, but anxiety of people here, knowing that you and other Belleville people were interested in the Paris Credit Canadien."

"Well," replied the doctor, "I must confess to no little surprise on my arrival in New York to learn from cablegrams from Paris that damaging rumors had been put in circulation in Quebec, affecting the business of the Credit Canadien, and that said rumors indicated the arrest of one of the officials and an examination of our affairs by the French Government. When I left Paris about eight days ago our business was progressing as favorably as in the past, and I know of no transaction which could possibly justify the rumors to which you call my attention."

"Did not your brother, Frank, cable the parties in Paris as to the truth of the stories which had been published in the Montreal papers?" asked the reporter.

"Yes," continued the doctor. "When I reached Belleville my brother, Mr. J. F. Wills, showed me replies which he had received from Paris, assuring him that there was no truth in the stories which had been put in circulation, and that they could not understand the origin of them. To satisfy myself I at once cabled fully for information and received to-day, 1st February, a reply to the following effect: "You may "rely upon it, reports are utterly "destitute of truth. No proceedings "have been taken against either "Carbonneau or the Credit Canadien. "Am at a loss to understand how "this infamous Canadian press cam-"paign originated." That is all the information I have upon the subject. Of one thing I am sure, there has been no transaction in connection with the Credit Canadien which will not bear the fullest investigation."

"Doctor," queried the reporter, "what about the serious statements made and published by your former partner, Mr. Chute, in reference to the Gold Run Mining business? He has been making some damaging charges."

"Oh, yes, but do not forget," replied the doctor, "that these charges emanate from a gentleman who, for good reasons, was deposed when the Gold Run Mining Company was formed, but as these charges have nothing to do with the Paris business, I must decline making any explanation. The dispute between Mr. Chute and myself is now in litigation. The courts will settle the difficulties between us; therefore it would be impolitic for me to discuss the question through the press."

"Thank you, Doctor, this statement will ease the minds of many of your friends here."

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

Picton and Belleville will play here to-night in the final game of the Trent Valley League.

An effort was made to secure either the senior St. Georges or the Marlboros to play against the local hockey team Friday but neither could be induced to come.

Municipal Law.

To Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—In your issue of January 28th ult., you refer to the action of the County Council in seeking to have that part of the municipal law repealed that gives power to Councils within a County by a majority vote, to do away with the present County Council system of representation by districts and have said County Councils composed of the various Reeves in the County representing local Councils.

I may say that at the commencement of my remarks that in my opinion the law does not want repealing but amending, so that the County Council may be composed of Reeves and Deputy Reeves, representing the population, and not as you say as now "by representation by taxation" and which you appear to approve. Where will you find the principle you appear to advocate applied to the populous system? What does manhood suffrage mean? And what have the Conservative party been advocating for years? And you say further, "We fail to see how the members of the Legislature, as reasonable men, can decline, etc., etc.," adding "the present arrangement has worked splendidly in Hastings County." Has it? is a natural query by those who have watched as the writer has, its working with much interest. I am afraid you have not given this matter the careful consideration the question deserves. I know there are a large number of thoughtful people in this County and in other Counties of the Province who do not believe the system has worked well. What was the argument, and almost the only argument that brought about the change from "Reeves and Deputy Reeves" to the present district system? And I speak with a personal knowledge of the arguments in the Legislature. It was that it was too expensive. It came up year after year in the Legislature and at first voted down, then referred to special committees to meet the same fate, but finally, Mr. Editor, like many amendments to the municipality law, a change was made, not so much because it was desirable, but to make an experiment, and has been, I believe, very much to the lowering of the municipal status of local Councils. But this feature further on. As I said the principal argument was expense. "Reduce the member and save expense." County of Hastings with its 35 or 40 members cost so much; reduce to 16 and save the difference. Has there been a saving? Let us see: does Council sit less days? No. Does it cost any less per member? No. Do the other expenses of the Council decrease? No, on the contrary have increased. What about the increased expense, overseeing, inspecting and making plans for county roads and bridges? There used to be a County Surveyor with a salary and a cheap trip to the chairman of gravel roads committee. How is it now? An examination of the Auditor's report will tell the story. Do the reported statements or debates in Council as they read in public tell? Certainly not the details, where the individual facts could be known. I by no means wish to charge a concealment of details for a purpose, but the public do not get them, and the sources of information are confined to the 16 councillors or the records of the County Council if they remember and are asked when formerly it was distributed by Reeves and Deputy Reeves to all the local Councils, and the Councils held them responsible. The complaint was, too many Councillors. How is it now? We have just the same number of Councillors plus the 16 additional County Councillors. Is that a saving? And now one word as to my statement that the present system had a tendency to lower the status of the local Councils. Formerly — a man ran as Councillor, going on up from year to year to Deputy Reeveship or Reeveship, and thereby becoming a County Councillor. A worthy ambition—all over the County was this spirit inspired, and induced our best men to commence in the local Councillors, giving Councils strength and character. Now there is but little interest attached to the Reeveship. He is simply in effect a Chairman. You argue the wrong that will be done to Sidney, Thurlow and Tyendinaga. There are more successful townships on this county than those you have mentioned, and my experience is that the townships named have always had quite up to their share of expenditure. One has only to note how these townships are gridironed with roads kept up by the County to reach that conclusion with the expensive bridges maintained. I am quite free to admit that it is a difficult thing so to distribute the expenditures, that you can trace a direct benefit to each section — but general benefit has always, as a rule been fairly maintained.

I have heard fault found with the recent grant of $150 to the Eastern Dairymen's Association" held in Belleville, but personally I think it a highly proper appropriation for the general benefit. To sum up the reduction of members in County Council, and the saving expense thereby is the only tangible argument, and that is misleading.

Evangelistic Services.

There was a good attendance at the evangelistic service in the Baptist Church last evening. The song service, conducted by Mr. Whyte, began at half-past seven, the congregation joining heartily in the various numbers. Just before Mr. Shield's address Mr. Whyte sang one of his sweet songs. "The Healing of the Cripple at Lystra," Acts, 14-8 —10, was the theme of Mr. Shield's sermon. According to the teaching of God's word, we are all born lame in the feet, spiritually. To understand and believe this truth was one of the elements of the faith that saves. With the realization of this truth, there should also be an implicit confidence that Jesus could and would heal our spiritual lameness, and give the sinner power to walk uprightly in the paths of righteousness. Believing this all that was required was to trust ourselves in all our weakness into the hands of Jesus Christ. Quite a large number remained to the after meeting, which was held in the school room. The meeting commences each evening at 7.30. Bible readings are given each afternoon at 3.30. Mr. Whyte sings at both services.

LA GRIPPE COMING AGAIN.

The doctors believe another epidemic of Grippe is here, and already many are suffering. The medical men are not afraid of Grippe since Catarrhozone was introduced, and claim that no one will ever catch this disease who inhales the fragrant, healing vapor of Catarrhozone a few times daily. Catarrhozone kills the Grippe germ and prevents it spreading through the system. "Last winter I had an attack of Grippe," writes C. P. Mackinnon, of St. John's. "I bought Catarrhozone and got relief in short time. I found Catarrhozone better than anything else and was cured by using it. Catarrhozone prevents and cures Grippe, colds and catarrh. WEDDING BELLS.

FORMER BELLEVILLE LADY MARRIED IN MANITOBA.

The News, published at Oak Lake, Manitoba, in its issue of January 20th contains the news of the marriage of a former Belleville young lady. It says:

A very pretty wedding took place on Tuesday evening last at St. Alban's Church, when Miss Emma Curry, of Belleville, Ont., was married to Mr. Frank A. Walker, of Fort Saskatchewan, Alta. The bride, who was attired in a dainty dress of cream crepe de chene over white taffeta, carried a handsome bouquet of roses and maiden hair fern. She was given away by her brother-in-law, Mr. E. E. Orr. Miss Nina Curry, of Oak Lake, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Miss Jessie Lind made a charming maid of honor. Mr. R. L. Curry, of Saskatoon, a brother of the bride, attended the groom. The nuptial knot was tied by the Rev. S. Ryall. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. After the ceremony the wedding party and friends repaired to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Orr, where refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Walker left the same evening for Fort Saskatchewan, where Mr. Walker is the Dominion Land Agent. The groom's gift to the bride was a fur jacket, to the bridesmaid a gold brooch set with pearls, to the maid of honor a gold necklace and to the groomsman a gold locket.

February 2, 1903.

I was feeling bad; was sleepy all the time; as soon as I ate my meals I would fall asleep if I did not go out. Saw the doctor two or three times, but that did me no good. I was in the drug store and picked up one of your little booklets and read about Iron-ox Tablets being good for the liver; took about four boxes and that tired feeling was gone. I felt like a new man. Iron-ox Tablets cured me.

EMPIRE DEFENCE LEAGUE.

Congratulates Canada and Regards Selection of Sir Frederick Borden as Step Towards Closer Union of Colonies.

London, Feb. 2.—(C. A. P.)—Hon. H. H. Asquith, the principal speaker of the British Empire League Monday night, moved a resolution which was unanimously adopted, expressing satisfaction at the step taken toward Imperial military co-operation by the admission of Sir Frederick Borden to the deliberations of the committee on Imperial defence; that the congratulations of the council be offered to the Canadian Government upon the inclusion of one of its Ministers in an Imperial committee, and that the council appreciated this great advance towards Imperial union.

The problem of Imperial defence, said Mr. Asquith, was composite, not seperable like water-tight compartments, with one for Canada, and another for England, but they were interdependent. It was not imagined that any very important result would follow the step, but it afforded a precedent.

Single, Though Composite Problem.

While the problem of Imperial defence was a single, though a composite, problem, yet each separate colony has its own local requirements, which it has to meet on the spot with its own resources, and in determining what was the best way to do this it was of the highest importance to be able to take counsel from the Imperial authorities. Mr. Asquith referred in this connection to Hon. Mr. Borden's acknowledgement, which hints at the training of Canadians for the Imperial service.

Hon. W. Reeves urged the necessity of having machinery provided for systematic rifle practice, making the statement that the different parts of the Empire should offer advice on all matters they regarded as of Imperial moment.

An Admirable Speech.

The Times calls Mr. Asquith's speech at the Empire League admirable and statesmanlike. There are few of us, it says, who do not look forward to the time when the British Constitution will comprise some body which will unify the policy of a number of independent military authorities without interfering with the international administration which helps forward our future Imperial constitution.

Other speakers were Sir Gilbert Parker, Sir Frederick Young and Sir Joseph West Ridgeway.

No Motive for Bribery.

London, Feb. 2.—(C.A.P.)—Col. J. A. McGillivray, grand secretary of the I.O.F., reached London yesterday. Speaking to the Canadian Press Association correspondent of the Montague case, he declared that no possible motive for bribery existed. The Premier, after an enquiry, had declared the I. O. F. reputable and gave it a license to proceed. Then the charge was made that Dr. Montague said to Peacock: "Have you a candidate I can help?" In gratitude Peacock is reported to have accepted bills on behalf of Mitchell. The present Premier is in full sympathy with Canadians. The jealousy of rival organizations was the cause of the whole trouble. Mr. McGillivray sails for Canada to-day.

Can This Be True?

London, Feb. 2.—(C. A. P.)—Winston Churchill, speaking at a free trade demonstration in Edinburgh yesterday, said that 200 Conservative members of Parliament were opposed to the policy of Mr. Chamberlain.

Sudden Changes of Temperature

BRING HOSTS OF COUGHS AND COLDS—SERIOUS RESULTS ARE PREVENTED BY USE OF

Dr. Chase's SYRUP OF Linseed and Turpentine

Coughs and colds usually arise from sudden changes of temperature. It may be change of weather, passing from a warmer to a colder room or exposure to a draught.

It is not always possible to prevent exposure in these ways, but it is possible to prevent serious results by using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

This great medicine has saved thousands of lives by preventing pneumonia, consumption and other forms of lung troubles.

It is mother's favorite remedy for croup, bronchitis, whooping cough and other coughs and colds to which children are subject. Being pleasant to the taste the little ones delight to take it.

It is prized by the old people because of the prompt and thorough relief it brings for asthma and other chronic ailments of the bronchial tubes.

The very fact that the sale of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is more than three times that of any similar remedy, and was never so large as it is to-day, is sufficient proof of its merits. In the great majority of homes it is kept on hand for cases of emergency.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle, family size (three times as much) 60 cents, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every bottle.

RECOGNIZE OUR HERD BOOKS.

St. Louis World's Fair Board Will Now Concede This Point.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—Yesterday Secretary Westervelt received a communication from the secretary of the St. Louis Exposition informing him that the fair board had decided to recognize the following herd books: Dominion Clydesdale, Shire, Hackney and French-Canadian; Dominion Shorthorn and Hereford; Canadian Ayrshire, Holstein-Fresian; French-Canadian; Dominion Swine Breeders. These are practically all the herd books of any importance used in Canada. This concession goes a considerable way to remove the just grievances of Canadian live stock dealers, after the announcement that a number of breeds that were placed low in the prize list would be raised; but there is still the difficulty with the customs regulations of the United States, which prevent Canadians from selling their stock for breeding purposes and shipping them direct from the Exposition.

Feeling Was Worked Up.

The decision to send no live stock to the fair has met with general approval, but one of the best-known breeders in the province, Richard Gibson, of Delaware, in a letter to The Breeders' Gazette, says the fault lies with our own Government, rather than with the Exposition authorities. He declares that the Dominion Live Stock Commissioner, F. W. Hodson, and a packed meeting, worked up the feeling against the regulations complained of. He says there will be numerous individual exhibits of Canadian stock, notwithstanding the opposition of the associations. Mr. Gibson, however, complains of the unjust tariff regulations in force in the United States. He says: "There never was such picayune legislation put in force by any country as now prevails in the rendering of an order of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. It is simply a genteel way of saying: 'We will not deal with you.' An open order to that effect would be better relished than the one now in force. Why should St. Louis suffer for vagaries of a United States Treasurer or the reading of the law as a collector of customs or a customs' broker interprets it?"

GERMAN GOVERNOR MISSING.

Feared He Has Been Obliged to Entrench Himself Against Tribesmen.

Berlin, Feb. 2.—Nothing has been heard for weeks of Col. Luetwein, the Governor of German Southwest Africa, who was making a long march from the Warmbad region toward his beleaguered forts northward. The natives who have besieged all the outlying stations are supposed to be in force between Windhoek and Col. Luetwein's column, of less than 300 men, which was returning from the campaign against the Bondelzwarts in the territory 450 miles south of Windhoek. No runner has passed through the lines.

It is feared that Col. Luetwein may have been unable to force his way through the hostile tribesmen, and that he has been obliged to entrench himself and await for the arrival of a rescuing expedition. The idea that he has been overwhelmed is rejected officially, but this apprehension is expressed in the newspapers.

There's not much oil in the market now; it's scarce and high in price. But seal oil and other inferior oils are cheap and plentiful. That's why you can buy so many substitutes for Scott's Emulsion at a lower price.

Saginaw, Mich., Feb. 3.—The wedding here last week of Corporal Charles Valois of Company H, 26th United States Infantry, home on furlough, and Miss Mabel Steiner, had a tragic climax last night, when the young couple took poison in a room at a rooming house on Franklin street. Mrs. Valois is dead and her husband is in a critical condition. The match met with the disapproval of the parents of each of them. They left a letter saying that their parents had turned them out and they had no place to go, and had decided to die together. Mrs. Valois died from a dose of carbolic acid and laudanum.

THE SITUATION UNIQUE

Son Led the House of Commons While Father Looked On.

But Joseph Chamberlain Was the Centre of the Political Drama—Austen Defends the Attitude of Premier Balfour and His Parent Towards the Fiscal Question—Father Cheered His Son On.

London, Feb. 3.—"My right honorable friend, the member from West Birmingham," as Austen Chamberlain described his father, was the central figure in the drama that marked the opening of Parliament yesterday.

For the first time in years Joseph Chamberlain took his seat as a private member of the House of Commons, and was separated from his former colleagues in the Cabinet by the gangway. From this seat he saw his son act as leader of the House of Commons, a position which Joseph Chamberlain, with all his years of Parliamentary experience, never attained.

House Was Spellbound.

Premier Balfour was unable to be present because of influenza. When Austen Chamberlain rose to reply in behalf of the party, of which his own father is supposed to be the most powerful member, the House was spellbound. It had been expected Sir Akers-Douglas would take the Premier's place, and interest was also heightened by the fact that Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal leader, had just concluded a merciless satire on Joseph Chamberlain. The situation was without parallel in the recollection of the oldest politician, and all eyes were fixed alternately upon the father and the son.

Father Nervous For Son.

Joseph Chamberlain, who had sat unmoved under the ridicule of the Liberal leader, turned nervously toward his son, who now takes precedence over him. With his monocle in his eye, an orchid in his buttonhole, and his hands clasped across his knees, the most prominent figure in the British Empire listened while his son defended him.

Austen Chamberlain spoke haltingly and under evident strain; yet, when he referred to his father, it was always as "the member from West Birmingham."

Chamberlain Cheered Son On.

Now and again jeers greeted Austen Chamberlain, whereupon, with unmistakable anger, his father turned his glance in the direction of the offender, and occasionally Joseph Chamberlain cheered his son on. When Austen Chamberlain neared the conclusion of his defence of the attitude of Premier Balfour and his father towards the fiscal question, the interruptions grew more frequent, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer clutched the brass-bound treasury box, on which Gladstone was so fond of leaning, and addressed his remarks almost solely in the direction of his father. Defiantly Austen Chamberlain accused Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman of attacking the Premier in his absence, and with a touch of pride he said: "The member from West Birmingham is here; he can speak for and look after himself."

House Felt Relief.

The House frankly expressed its relief when the speech was over and generally termed the proceeding as one of the most extraordinary personal situations that ever had occurred and the speech as one of the weakest defences of the Government's policy ever made.

On behalf of Premier Balfour, Austen Chamberlain declared the House of Commons must first decide whether or not it desired any change at all in the fiscal system and until that point was settled the Opposition demands for details of the Government's fiscal reform plan could not be granted.

INSTRUCTION IN DAIRYING.

New Appointee Will Have Scope of His Work Enlarged.

Toronto, Feb. 3.—The Minister of Agriculture proposes extending the scope of the work of the newly-appointed superintendent of Farmers' Institutes and Director of the Eastern and Western Dairy Schools. The idea is to have Mr. Putnam act as Director of Instruction for Dairy Syndicates throughout the province. Under the general plan adopted by Mr. Dryden a couple of years ago, the farmers have been syndicated and an instructor has been sent among them lecturing and demonstrating. Mr. Putnam will have a general supervision over these syndicates, and it is believed that much good will result from his personal attention to the work. The plans of the department are not yet worked out, but some radical changes will soon be announced.

THE RAILWAY COMMISSION FIASCO.

The Railway Commission has been appointed at last. But with what feelings of keen disappointment must those who looked forward to the board accomplishing a good work, have received its personnel. At the last session of Parliament, Sir Wilfrid Laurier promised to nominate as Commissioners, a lawyer familiar with railway law, a practical business man, and a practical railway man. Of the three men who have received appointments only one, Hon. A. G. Blair, possesses the necessary qualification—a lawyer with railway training. Prof. Mills and Mr. Bernier, who will be Mr. Blair's associates, know absolutely nothing of railway matters. This leaves the Commission a one man affair. Mr. Blair, who received his office in payment for abandoning his principles, will be the Czar of all the railways. He will have practically unlimited sway over the destinies of corporations, their employees and the general public. What confidence the public will have in this autocratic style of controlling the great railway systems of Canada can best be judged by the disgust with which strong Liberals have received the Government's decision. It is admitted on all sides that Mr. Bernier is an incompetent and under any Government bent on promoting the country's interests, his nomination to such an important post would have been an impossibility. Mr. Mills is unknown apart from his connection with an agricultural college. And yet he is to be one of those who will be entrusted with responsibilities weightier than those of a Minister of the Crown. The Commission as it now stands is a mere fiasco, which should be thoroughly ventilated in Parliament.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Good evening. This is the 57th day of consecutive sleighing.

When Sir Henry Irving recently revived "The Bells" in New York, it is reported that the first words, "Peace be unto you," were the cause of hearty laughter throughout the house. The English actor is said to have paused in amazement. Then he looked at his auditors with something very much akin to scorn, and went on with the play. It was some time, however, before he was able to grasp the attention of the audience. When it was later explained to him that the greeting of the Dowieites was "Peace be unto you," his anger was appeased, for no one enjoys a joke better than Sir Henry himself.

A story is told of Count Schouvaloff, a former Russian ambassador to England. He greatly admired English women and was heartily annoyed when he offended any one of them. While he was here he learned English, and having heard one famous English beauty say "Shut up!" to another, he imagined it to be a phrase of polite agreement, such as "Say no more." In this sense, he himself addressed it to an illustrious lady the next night at dinner, to the lady's consternation, and his own, when later he discovered his mistkae.

TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

GRAND TRUNK AT WORLD'S FAIR

The extensive and comprehensive exhibit which the Grand Trunk Railway System are arranging for the World's Fair, held at St. Louis, during 1904, is now in course of preparation. The proposed pavillion which it is the intention of erecting is one combining beauty, elegance and artistic merit and the designs submitted to the Exposition authorities were greatly admired and accepted. The pavillion will be erected in the Fish and Game" Building, facing on aisles, will be of Corinthian and Doric architectural style, embellished with emblematic designs of fish and game, and it is claimed will be one of the handsomest structures at the Exposition. Canadian haunts will be the predominating feature of the display.

The mammoth palaces that form the main picture of this "World's Fair"—the Foreign and State buildings and the "Pike" (Midway)—are at the present time much further advanced before the opening date than the buildings of any other of the great expositions that have been held in the past; in fact, the installation of exhibit is now been proceeded with in many of the buildings.

One good feature of St. Louis is the Union Station; there being only this one, all trains from all points with the exception of excursion trains from a distance of one or two hundred miles of St. Louis will arrive and leave from the one depot, and as the street car lines pass the station visitors will have no trouble in reaching their hotels or boarding houses without difficulty and early after arrival.

People who have seen the grounds for the first time marvel at the magnitude of this colossal undertaking and do not hesitate in forming the opinion that it will be the greatest event from an instructive, educational and amusement point of view, that the world has ever seen.

Two hundred and fifty conventions have already signified their intention of visiting, and have completed arrangements for St. Louis during the "World's Fair."

Evangelistic Services.

The stormy weather last evening affected the attendance at the service in the Baptist Church. Mr. Shield's text was 1st Chronicles, 20, 4-8. The antagonism of the Philistines to God's chosen people was typical of that which existed between flesh and spirit, good and evil, God and Satan. Mr. Whyte sang several selections during the service and at the close of the meeting some manifested their desire to be saved by the power of God. There should be a large audience at the service to-night, which begins at 7.30. Bible readings are given every afternoon at 3.30.

YOU TAKE NO CHANCES.

All druggists guarantee every bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and will refund the money to anyone who is not satisfied after using two-thirds of the contents. This is the best remedy in the world for la grippe, coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough and is pleasant and safe to take. It prevents any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

Mr. McFarlane stated that there had been expended some $1,100 more on the roads than was appropriated. He asked Mr. Wickett if he knew that he was exceeding his appropriation.

Mr. Wickett said he was not in a position to know where the extra money was expended. He took his orders from the Superintendent. In reference to the quantity of gravel spread on the roads in excess of that taken out of pits, he said that he had taken considerable gravel out of the country pit in Thurlow.

Mr. McFarlane said that the custom of only paying the owner of the pit for one yard of gravel when more was taken should not be sanctioned by this Council. He moved, seconded by Mr. Clarke, that the Superintendent and all road foremen be and they are hereby instructed to take full measure of gravel and stone for the county and in every case to give full credit to each and every person from whom materials are bought, and also to enter in the report, as put on and spread, only the quantity shown to have been bought or drawn.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

On motion Messrs. Tumman, Farnham and Wickett were voted their expenses in attending the investigation.

The report of the Special Committee recommended that more territory be given to certain foremen, which means that Mr. Wickett, or some other foreman, and his gang would be discharged.

Mr. Denyes and the Warden objected to Mr. Wickett being cut off. The Warden stated that Mr. Wickett had been an efficient and faithful servant of the county. He moved that the latter part of the report be laid over until the June session.

Mr. Denyes seconded the motion.

Mr. Hanley spoke in support of the Committee's recommendation.

Mr. Mallory said the report stated that the County was not getting value for money expended. The only proper way is to suggest a new Superintendent.

Mr. Denyes could not see how the County could dispense with any gang of road men, as it was shown that all the work laid out would have to be done.

Mr. McFarlane said they all admired Mr. Vankleek, but he was, on account of advanced age, not able to do the work assigned to him.

Mr. Mallory said the Superintendent had not the check upon the foremen he should have. He moved that the Superintendent and the foremen of the County be notified that their services will be dispensed with after April 1st.

Mr. Lancaster thought this was springing matters rather suddenly. Some of the foremen could not do the best of work because they were advancing in years. Some of the foremen, he thought, had taken advantage of Mr. Vankleek.

Mr. Hanley stated that some drastic measures had to be taken in this matter. He seconded Mr. Mallory's motion.

A Goddess of Africa

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

After all, it was Hobson's choice, since to retreat meant in all probability annihilation in the crater, and they could not stay where they were.

The two leaders had their heads together and were busily engaged in deciding what should be their line of action. Since the alarm had already been quietly given, what difference would it make should they take prompt and decisive action? The path must be cleared at all hazards, come what might. Once out of the great hole it would devolve upon them to meet the assault of the black legions, and where force would not avail let Anglo-Saxon wit take its place.

So the decision was speedily made—they must force the passage at all hazards.

Bludsoe again advanced, but this time he was more cautious, knowing that a vindictive foeman crouched around the sharp angle, no doubt with a second assegai raised and ready to be hurled with all the force of a mighty arm.

Rex peering over the hunched shoulders of Lord Bruno could see that the cowboy had halted just at the point where the rock turned. He appeared busily engaged with something, and Rex found his curiosity aroused when he saw the wind frolicing with the long locks of Jim Bludsoe.

Ah! now he made another move, pushing something out in front, so as to make its presence known around the angle, something which at first was a mystery to Rex, but he suddenly awoke to the fact that it was the cowboy's head gear, fastened to the end of a torch.

It was a venerable trick, a regular old chestnut along the frontier where Bludsoe had learned the ropes of his trade, and one he might have really been ashamed to have been caught practicing; but there was always an even chance that it had not become so familiar to the South African impis.

Again was heard that peculiar rushing sound, so associated with the swift flight of an assegai from a practiced hand—the sombrero was violently shaken, for the keen pointed dart had passed entirely through it with the utmost ease.

Bludsoe laughed outright at the eagerness with which his black foeman above had bitten at the bait; but even while thus giving vent to his appreciation of the good fortune that had befallen him, the cowboy was quick to set himself in motion.

Rex saw him creep part way around the angle — saw him throw an arm forward, and with the action came the detonation of a seven-shooter, that echoed back and forward, from one wall of the crater to another, growing more feeble with each rebuff.

It did not die away, but was drowned in a human shriek of agony. Jim had fired with some result; and presently they heard the lifeless body of the black guard go tumbling from rock to rock as it sought a resting place in the dark vale below.

Before that happened Jim Bludsoe was pushing on, ready to meet other foes if so fate determined, ready to undertake almost any peril, however great, if there was a chance of success beyond.

Yet they had thus advanced only a dozen yards when once again the leader came to a halt, and this time instead of silence, they heard his voice as he bellowed out:

"Back—back, on your lives! They have undermined the trail—the whole face of the rock is trembling on the balance!"

Like sheep cowering at sight of the wolf they beat a hasty retreat—a gap opened between Lord Bruno and his cowboy guide, and the face of gneiss cliff was shaved as with a giant razor, the trail being carried away in the general ruin.

CHAPTER XV.

WITH THE CLIFF CLIMBERS.

Jim Bludsoe did not go down with the avalanche of gneiss that, detached from the face of the mighty cliff where it had held forth for ages, went crashing into the awful depth below, with a roar not unlike that of thunder.

His extreme agility stood him in good service as it had done on many another occasion.

Besides, he had detected the quivering of the rock just in time, and by crowding back almost upon Lord Bruno, managed to avoid the tragic [illegible] with which fate threatened him.

The little party crouched there for a full minute, as if turned into stone. It would not be strange if their blood became cold under the possibility that in another brief space of time the narrow shelf upon which they knelt would become detached in the same mysterious manner as had the rock ahead of them, when one and all must be hurled into eternity.

The stupendous uproar as the mass burst into fragments below, seemed to arouse the slumbering echoes of Hades, and for the time being it was utterly impossible to hear a human voice even when raised to a shout, for the unseen giants of the cliffs were hurling the detonations back and forth as though engaged in a game of shuttlecock.

Gradually, however, as though the gnomes of the air wearied of carrying their messages to and fro, this clamor grew less in volume; and those who continued to cling to the remains of the cliff trail, were able to reassure themselves with regard to the stability of their support.

At least it was a satisfaction to know that immediate death was not to be their portion though the future looked anything but inviting.

Lord Bruno was the first to speak.

"Here's a pretty kettle of fish, now. Bless my soul, not even a chamois would venture to go ahead, since the trail is entirely gone. Come, Jim, what's to be done in this emergency?" he ejaculated, trying to be as cherry as the gravity of the situation would admit.

Bludsoe craned his neck and looked at the awful gap which extended to the next angle of the wall, some 30 feet away. It was as smooth as the side of a house, not a single trace of the rocky shelf remaining. And this abyss began just two feet beyond the spot where he knelt.

"To go on is impossible, to remain here any length of time suicide. Thar's but one thing left—we must go back to the crater!" was the cowboy's quick reply.

They were men of resolution, and with a practical knowledge concerning the value of time in a case where life was at stake. Immediately Red Eric faced the other way, and began retracing his steps. Not a mumur arose—they expected hard knocks and even took a certain pleasure in pitting their powers of endurance against the flings of outrageous fortune.

All sounds had died away, the last faint echo having ceased to cross the great gulf. A fine dust had followed the crash of the tons of rock into the valley, but this gradually settled.

HOW IT SPREADS.

It made the cure of a case of Piles that was considered hopeless.

The news spread and although this was only two years ago the demand prompted Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, of Lincoln, Neb., the discoverer, to prepare it for general use. Now it is being sent to all parts of the world.

It will cure any case of Piles. There is a month's treatment in each box.

Sold for $1.00, with absolute guarantee.

It is for sale by druggists.

Perhaps some of them half expected that a second avalanche might follow the first, possibly leaving them stranded high up on the face of the cliff, with retreat cut off in both directions.

Fortunately this did not occur, and in due course of time the little company reached the bottom in safety.

The future looked anything but cheerful, and yet one and all felt thankful that the precious legacy of life yet remained; for they shared the Briton's policy that there was hope so long as they were free to think and act and fight.

To sit down and supinely wait for a turn in the tide so heavily setting against them was not according to their nature. Such men are of the same mould as Napoleon in making their influence felt in fashioning circumstances.

A council of war was immediately held, at which several startling propositions were made, looking toward their escape from the crater of Krokato.

To bring about such a happy result it was of course necessary that they scale the frowning cliffs, for in no other way were they likely to meet with success, although Rex did mention his suspicion that the ancient temple might be connected with the outer world by some subterranean passage, if they could only be fortunate enough to discover where this lay.

More practical means must be employed to gain their end. A cowboy's first reliance in time of trouble is naturally his lasso, and the decision arrived at after mature discussion was that if they could find the proper place, through their natural boldness and agility, together with a judicious use of the ropes, they might manage to overcome the odds against them and scale the heights.

The next thing on the programme was to make an examination of the walls, and in order that this task might be carried out with as little delay as possible, they divided into two companies, moving off in opposite directions.

Of course such a job took time, for the light was wretched and obstacles numerous. Rex and Lord Bruno, accompanied by Red Eric formed one of the parties. As the cliffs were outlined in silhouette against the clouded sky, they were able to distinguish to a certain extent at least, what the nature of their face might be.

The passage of the semicircle was made without disaster of any sort, though several times glimpses were had of fire signals on the heights, which warned them that the black clans must be gathering with the idea of crushing the daring invaders.

Thus they met the other party, and hasty views were exchanged, after which it was determined just where an assault upon the cliffs promised the best chances of success.

The clouds had grown heavy, and no longer did the light of the moon passing through the veil that had been drawn across her face serve to illumine the crater.

Instead, a gloom gradually settled upon the scene of such remarkable events connected with the dim past.

Just as the little company of adventurers, having decided upon their plan of campaign, started to the spot selected for the commencement of their operations, a sudden flash of lightning illuminated the scene, to be followed by the dull rumble of thunder.

Evidently nature was about to supply the light and orchestra, the theatre was to be the vast crater of Krokato, and the actors upon the stage our little company of choice spirits pitted against the black hordes of the Zambodi, led by their witch-doctor, who would be sure to inflame all their passions upon the altar of fanatical enthusiasm, for that white men should invade the sacred soil of the crater was sufficient cause to arouse these ignorant barbarians to fever heat.

Having gained the scene destined to witness their gallant effort to escape from the fate that seemed to overshadow them, a hasty examination was made.

Of course Bludsoe was the leading spirit in the enterprise, but there were others who came very close to him in a desire to reach out and grasp each difficulty that projected itself in their way, so that it might be throttled ere serious mischief could result.

The face of the cliff at this point was more ragged than in any other quarter, and Jim had declared he believed it within his power to climb it.

With the sturdy intention of proving his words true, he wrapped Little Phil's lariat around his body in such a way that it would not interfere with his muscular action.

Then he boldly assailed the problem.

No man was better fitted for such a hazardous task, since Bludsoe united the strength of a buffalo with the agility of a cat, and was moreover quick witted, so that he could grasp every opportunity blown within reach by the favoring winds of chance.

He speedily vanished from the sight of his comrades, who had moved a little aside so they would be safe from any loose shale which in his passage he might dislodge.

They could hear him now and then, while occasionally some small pieces of rock rattled down, but nothing of consequence followed. Once Rex stepped back and cast his eyes up along the face of the black height. Just at that moment a flash of lightning rent the darkness as though to lend him assistance. His gaze ran up the rock and instantly became riveted on a spot where some dark object seemed to cling.

Rex was almost positive that he could make out the form of a man flattened against the scarred gneiss, but the electric current went with the same swiftness that marked its coming. However, it mattered not — Bludsoe was progressing, else would he have warned them against his failure.

Five, ten minutes crept along, with an occasional illumination from heaven's battery. T[illegible] below waited and speculated in whispers. Then a low bird-like whistle came to their ears from above—Jim's signal for the world.

"Look for the rope!" said Lord Bruno, and each man went groping along at the foot of the cliff, seeking to discover the trailing lariat.

Now came the task which each in turn must undertake. Bludsoe had discovered some projecting shelf part way up the face of the rocky wall, and wished them to join him.

One by one they made the ascent, without any accident, for with the rope it was a much easier task than Jim had undertaken. Besides, when some one has done the pioneer work, those who follow need not worry about possible contingencies.

Red Eric waited until the last, for the ruling passion was strong within them and having risked their lives for these quaint images and vessels of gold, they were bound to hang on to them as long as posible. So he sent them up in two lots, willing arms above dragging the heavily laden saddle bags cheerfully through space.

Then the last of the Mohicans coolly put his foot in the loop of the lariat, gave the signal, and was hoisted aloft. Doubtless those who strained and tugged at the rope must have imagined the treasure trove had increased vastly in volume since they carried the bags, or it might be they guessed the true inwardness of the affair long ere Red Eric's flaming crown appeared over the brink of the platform which their leader had made use of as a species of relay station.

The ledge seemed to extend some distance in one direction, though its presence might not be suspected, even by the keenest eyes below.

Jim was of the opinion that they would do well to make a tour of observation before tackling the job, for indeed it promised additional dangers, and little chances of ultimate success.

Time had been consumed in all this business. They must not imagine their enemies had been asleep while the minutes passed.

Across the way a fire had been started on the heights, and they could see numerous figures passing and repassing. Presently it was discovered that some means of communication had been effected with the bottom of the crater, for figure after figure was seen to approach the brink and suddenly vanish. Perhaps a long rope had been brought into service, or else a series of ladders, the presence of which had been unknown to the fugitives of Krokato.

The truth of this reasoning became evident when lights appeared amid the scrub bushes around the entrance to the ancient temple—lights that flashed hither and yon like giant fireflies of the tropics, constantly increasing in number until they spread in a line directly across the crater, steadily advancing across from wall to wall.

How the black legions discovered the facts, unless able with savage cunning to follow a blind trail, it would be hard indeed to say, but no matter—it was only a brief time before they had gathered at the foot of the cliff directly under the shelf upon which the little company of adventurers had found lodgment, and their fierce outcries warned the whites that their position was accurately known.

CHAPTER XVI.

BROUGHT TO BAY.

Bludsoe was fain to lay it all to the witch doctor, who had been able through his knowledge of the Black Arts to divine whether they had flown—at least he so expressed himself, and swore upon the first opportunity to clear up his reckoning with this arrant old humbug of a magician.

In his own mind the cowboy knew better than this, realizing that it was the exercise of remarkable sagacity in the line of trailers that had achieved such a result for the war blacks.

The situation was far from cheerful, and it certainly required pluck of no ordinary calibre in order to face the music without flinching.

Silence was a thing of the past, for when heaven's artillery deigned to refrain from bombarding their ears with a series of terrific explosions, the black warriors were exchanging signals with those of their ilk on the top of the cliff.

To ascend was no longer the one ambition of the adventurers, since it was evident that should they arrive at the top after a most arduous and dangerous climb it would only be to face death at the hands of the waiting Zambodi warriors whose assegais had been whetted for bloody service.

What then?

Between the upper and the nether stone they seemed in danger of being pulverized. Indeed, some plan of action appeared to have been arranged between the two wings of the hostile army, for presently stones began to crash downward from the heights, stones that were both large and small, and which increased in number until it seemed as though from the murky heavens this deluge must proceed.

They scarred the ledge here, there and everywhere — they chipped off pieces of the gneiss as though with the blow of a trip hammer, such was the tremendous power gained by their downward plunge.

It would seem almost miraculous that any living being could remain upon that shelf and exist, but thanks to the formation of the cliff in one place, where the rock was hollowed out, they were able to flatten themselves beyond the danger line and wait for the furious bombardment to cease.

Whether the energetic fellows above had used up all the available supply of loose trap-rock, or fondly believed they must have pulverized their enemies by this time, the shower of descending missels finally grew less in volume, until at last, some signal casued it to cease altogether.

He was gone five, ten minutes, and they began to grow a trifle anxious.

In whispers they consulted as to the best move they could make in order to outwit the black wolves who howled for their blood; but it was a hard nut to crack, and the puzzle could not be solved until they heard the cowboy's report.

Rex had hardly raised his haed than his attention was attracted by some moving object that came between the cloudy sky and his eyes, an object that quickly resolved itself into a wriggling human figure dangerling at the end of a rope.

Of course it was a daring Zambodi scout, sent down by those above to ascertain the true status of affairs on the ledge.

Lower came to follow. Of course his eyes were strained to discover any evidence of human presence around him, but he would have needed the eyes of a feline to have made out the shadowy forms against the black rock.

Just then, as though in a vicious mood, the electric plant of nature took particular pains to send a zigzag bolt earthward somewhere among the hills, and the whole scene was illuminated as by a magician's wand.

The dangling warrior's face was turned directly toward that line of crouching figures, and such was the amazing brightness of the heavenly torch that Rex could distinctly see the look of sudden fierce joy that flashed over the cruel features as he discovered where the covey of fugitives had found refuge.

There was no time to see more, for darkness succeeded, so deep and profound after the passing of that dazzling white light, that Rex seemed suddenly stricken blind.

He felt Red Eric spring from his side, and could give a shrewd guess as to the nature of his mission, so that he was not very much surprised when almost immediately on the heels of this movement there came a shriek of mortal agony that started on a line with the ledge and ended fully thirty feet below, to be quickly followed by a dull shock, full of the most dreadful possibilities.

Another shower of rocks might be looked for, but failed to materialize, which was pretty good proof that their enemies had other game in prospect.

Then Bludsoe put in an appearance, and without vouchsafing any information bade them follow him, which they of course did with alacrity, believing he must have made a discovery of some consequence to account for his actions.

The ledge proved of considerable length, and yet there was but a small portion of it that was not subject to the bombardment of the Philistines, which proved what a streak of good luck had been theirs when they found such convenient shelter from the storm of weighty missiles that had recently poured down upon the shelf from above.

Rex was moving along, one hand upon the wall for guidance, when without the least warning in the world his fingers clutched vacancy.

He received quite a shock, under the impression that he was on the brink, and for the moment dared not move lest by even the slightest action in the world he precipitate the catastrophe that seemes impending, for he doubted not but that he was upon the ragged edge of an unfathomable gulf and though the stupendous fortune contained in the pockets of his coat might buoy up his spirits and lighten his heart when clouds weighed heavily upon him, he could not expect it to take wings and waft him gently to solid earth below.

But some one passed him by — it was the eager Englishman, Lord Bruno. At about the same time he heard a whisper that set his mind at rest.

"Behold—a yawning cave!" was what the cowboy said, for be it known Jim could at times be truthfully suspected of budding dramatic genius, possibly due to the influence of Buffalo Bill, in whose Wild West Bludsoe had for several seasons borne part as the gallant leader of the rescuing cattle rustlers, until the monotony of the daily grind for pay became too much for his adventurous spirit to longer endure, so that he had set out in quest of adventure, somewhat after the fashion of the illustrious Spanish gentleman of La Mancha, only Jim's exploits were of the genuine type, and not with windmill giants.

The discovery of the cave at least promised something of mystery, for no one as yet knew anything about its dimensions, where it ran, or whether there was a chance of ultimate escape through its means.

When they had crept cautiously along some little distance, it was decided that the danger of a light being seen by their enemies was reduced to a minimum, and so after a brief struggle a torch was induced to take fire. One and all they mentally blessed that wise forethought that induced Jim to cling to his lightwood, though had it come to the worst Lord Bruno could have produced a little more flash-light powder from the satchel, carried with a strap over the shoulder, as one might his field glasses.

Hardly had the bit of resionous wood commenced to send forth a flame that dissipated the dense darkness than six pairs of eager eyes were cast about in the endeavor to discover what species of place this strange slit in the gneiss adamantine wall might prove to be, and learn, if possible, what chances of ultimate escape it presented.

Rex saw nothing beyond the bare rough walls some six or seven feet apart, and the black shadows marking the limit of the torch's power of illumination overhead.

He heard an exclamation beside him, and there was Red Eric, holding something which he had just snatched up, and which appeared to be the white thigh bone of some animal.

It was not the only remnent of its kind to be seen, for as Hastings glanced down in the direction of the stone floor his eye was attracted by quite a collection in that line, evidently the remains of many a feast on the part of some wild beast.

As yet he failed to comprehend why the cattle-punchers seemed so pleased. In his eye the discovery of these bones indicated nothing pleasant—indeed, he felt a shiver pass over him at the thought that possibly their own remains might some day be found by similar bold explorers, perhaps a century hence, and most profound treatises be written based upon the mystery of their presence in that strange cavern leading from Old Krokato's crater.

"That settles it," remarked Jim, nodding his head in a complacent manner, which served to confound Rex more than ever.

Fortunately the next words that were uttered served to throw a gleam of light over the mystery, and he was positively charmed to think he had not spoken and betrayed his dense ignorance of cowboy lore.

"Well, if a beast could at sometime have had his den in this place, we ought to be able to discover which way he went in and out, and I'm very sure it wasn't by the road we took in coming here," laughed Lord Bruno.

As Rex remembered that tremendous climb to reach the shelf, he was ready to echo this declaration on the part of the artist rover.

They halted not upon the order of their going, but struck out. There was danger hovering in their rear. The blacks might take it into their miserable heads to swarm down the face of the wall, either by the aid of ropes, or simply utilizing their monkey-like ability to cling fast to the rocks; but if once the platform was reached it would not take long to have them on the heels of the fugitives, whose first warning of their proximity might be the whirr of steel shod shafts tipped with quick death.

So they eagerly pushed on, following the course of the subterranean channel, hoping that presently they might discover an exit which would relieve their anxieties.

Ever and anon Bludsoe, cautious Jim of the prairies, would come to a halt in order to listen; and Rex could not but notice that he seemed more concerned with what might occur in their rear than the unknown depths before, which they were yet to pierce.

So far as Hastings could tell, the only sounds that came to them were the old familiar flutter of frightened bats' Satanic wings, as they beat the air in a frantic rush to escape

No money is wanted—from you—nor from him. I ask only a postal card, and I ask it as an act of humanity.

I will send him my book. I will arrange with a druggist near by that he may take six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. He may take it a month at my risk. If it succeeds the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself, and the sick one's mere word shall decide it.

Could I meet you—for even ten minutes—I would forever convince you that I have what these sick ones need. More than that, they must have it, for most of them can never get well without it.

But I can meet only a few, so I take this means to convince you. I let you take it a month to prove what it can do; and you can pay, or I will pay just as you decide.

I have found the cured ones fair. In the past 12 years I have furnished my Restorative to hundreds of thousands on these terms, and 39 out of each 40 have paid—and paid gladly—because they were cured. I will pay just as willingly if you say I have failed.

My Restorative is the result of my lifetime's work in learning how to strengthen the inside nerves.

THE EAST INDIAN WAY.

A trade journal tells a story of an adventure which nearly cost one of its correspondents in India his life. The Indian merchant was a wealthy man who had got on well with the natives, but two of his servants had had a quarrel over a girl whom they both wooed. The merchant interferred in the fight. The unsuccessful suitor, Laj, began to make trouble, and his rival, the husband, warned the merchant against him. Nothing happened for some months. Then the merchant went away on business. On his return he was told that Laj had been caught in his bedroom and locked up.

In the East this meant trouble. The merchant called his servants and had a thorough search made of the house. They examined every trunk, bureau and bedstead, every picture, statue and crevice in the wall and crack in the floor expecting to find a hooded cobra or other poisonous reptile. They scrutinized every knob, handle and garment to see if it had been smeared with poison or with juices which attracted venomous creatures. Then they searched the wine-cellar, the pantry and the store room. But they found nothing.

The merchant was tired, and after eating, went to the cabinet where he kept his cigars. It was a large case of teak and plate glass, with an old-fashioned silver Indian lock.

As he was about to insert the key in the keyhole, Laj's successful rival, who had been active in the search, cried, "Look out, sahib, some one has been meddling with that lock!"

They examined the keyhole and found traces of wax. When they opened the case the merchant found everything apparently untouched. Five boxes of cigars were unopened. He had opened the sixth before he went away and removed a few cigars. As he took this box up he noticed on it the marks of dirty fingers.

The cigars looked as if they had not been disturbed. He was about to take one when he noticed that something was wrong with the head. A second and a third were like the first. In each a small, almost imperceptible rose thorn had been inserted, and on it was a dab of brown slime, still moist, the same color as the cigar.

"Do not touch them, sahib," said the Indian. "They are poisoned."

The merchant sat down and wrote a note to the police. In half an hour an officer appeared with Laj under guard. The merchant stated the case to the officer, and taking one of the cigars, handed it to Laj with the command, "Take it and smoke it."

The man turned gray and refused. His guilt was proved.

TIMELY TOPICS.

January was the coldest month known in sixty years.

Ah! Poor old Kingston, who, through her newspapers, made many a jibe on this fair city about its street railway, is to also have her street cars stop running if the railway don't get what they ask for from the city.

Not one woman in a baker's dozen knows how to wash her face properly. When she rubs out a frail linen handkerchief, she is always careful to rinse away the suds and to have the scrubbing thorough, for she knows that linen only half laundered soon becomes grey and grimy. But she is not always so careful with her face. Perhaps she moistens the end of a wash rag—very generally as if it might bite her—and dabbles her face by long-distance methods. The result is that she spreads out the grime and, as everybody knows, dust is a destruction machine of considerable energy and power.

MAKE PEACE WITH YOUR STOMACH.

YOU ARE CERTAIN TO LOSE IF YOU ATTEMPT THE USE OF FORCE AND VIOLENCE.

You cannot force your stomach to do work that it is unable and unwilling to do. It has been tried time and time again with always the same result. The stomach is a good and faithful servant; but when pushed beyond the limit it rebels. Some stomachs will stand much more abuse than others, but every stomach has its limit; and when that limit is reached, it is a very dangerous and unwise proceeding to attempt to force it into doing further work. The sensible and reasonable course is to employ a substitute to carry on the work of digestion and give the stomach an opportunity to recuperate and regain its lost strength.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the only perfect substitute to take up and carry on the work of tired, worn out stomachs. They are natural and easy in their work and cause no disturbance in the digestive organs. They contain all of the essential elements that make up the gastric juice and other digestive fluids and will digest any food that a strong, healthy stomach will, and do it in the same way. They work independently of surrounding conditions, and the fact that the stomach is weak or diseased does not influence them at all in their useful and effective work. They will digest food just as well in a glass jar or bottle as they will in a stomach. You can see that for yourself by putting one of them into a jar with a square meal and some water to enable it to work.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by thus relieving the stomach of its work, enables that organ to rest and recuperate and regain its health and strength. The process is perfectly natural and plain. Nature will heal the stomach just as she heals a wound or a broken limb, if she is not interfered with and is permitted to do her work in her own way. All interference is prevented by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by druggists everywhere at 50c a box, and if you are afflicted with dyspepsia, one box will make you feel fifty times better. You will forget you have a stomach and rejoice in the forgetfulness. No druggist would be so shortsighted as to try to get along without Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, for they are so popular and are so well known for the good they have done and the happiness they have caused that any druggist caught without them would lose the confidence of his customers and be regarded as below the standard. His business would suffer as a result and his patrons would go to other stores and buy their other drugs there as well as their Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Fifty-seven Granges have reported, representing the eastern, northern and western districts of Ontario chiefly. IN BRITISH VESSELS.

Customs Ruling That May Cause the U.S. Much Trouble.

Boston, Feb. 3.—Unless some agreement is entered into between the United States and Canada, the long-time practice of carrying Canadian goods in bond to ports in the provinces without regard to the carrying vessel, must come to an end, and a lucrative business of American railroads and American steamships running from Boston will be shut off.

This has been established by the recent enforcement by the collector at St. John, N.B., of the Canadian regulation that goods passing to Canada from the United States shall be transported in British registered vessels.

The case at hand was that of a consignment of stoves from London Ont., to St. John, by way of Boston, the water transportation being by the Eastern Steamship Company, whose steamers carry the American flag.

Secretary of the United States Shaw has been asked to make some arrangement with Canada whereby the non-enforcement of the regulation may be brought about.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

1904 IS A LEAP YEAR

THEME ALIKE DELIGHTFUL TO MAIDENS AND THE ASTRONOMERS.

Origin of the Quaint Custom of Ladies Proposing Marriage Veiled in Obscurity—Laws for the Leap Year—History of Leap Year Interesting Without Reference to Its Sentimental Associations.

About leap year there clings a wealth of legend and superstition, mingled oddly with a mass of the most obstruse science. The theme has been a delight to girls and astronomers for hundreds of years. The former it gave a chance of marriage, the latter an opportunity to air their knowledge. Of late, however, the popular custom of asking for husbands has been sinking into oblivion, until nowadays the eligible bachelor need not approach the year 1904 with trepidation. He is comparatively safe. In the eighteenth century his danger was real enough, although he could always escape his fair admirer by tempering his refusal with a silk gown and a kiss. He might also plead a prior engagement, and the court would accept this excuse. He could not, however, treat with contumely the young woman who laid her heart and hand at his feet. Speaking of leap year, a book published in London, 1606, says: "Albeit it nowe became a part of the common lawe in regard to social relations of life that as often as every leap yeare doth return, the ladyes have the sole privilege during the time it continueth of making love, either by wordes or lookes, as to them it seemeth proper; and moreover no man will be entitled to benefit of clergy who doth in any wise treat her proposal with slight or contumely."

St. Patrick and St. Bridget.

The origin of this quaint custom is veiled in obscurity, but so far as we can trace it back, St. Patrick was responsible. The tradition which credits the popular Irish saint with the innovation explains that after having banished the frogs from the bogs and the snakes from the grass of the Emerald Isle, the Saint was one day walking along the shores of Lough Neagh. To him in great distress came the comely St. Bridget, the lady superior of a convent. She explained to St. Patrick that there were great dissensions in the nunnery because its inmates were debarred from choosing husbands. (It is to be noted that at this period, celibacy, though advocated, was not insisted on among the clergy.) St. Patrick was touched by the pathos of the situation in the convent, and generously offered to set apart one day in seven years, on which women might propose. At this St. Bridget threw her arms about his neck, crying:

"Arrah, Patrick, jewel, I dourn't go back to the girls with such a proposal!" Now, although St. Patrick was a holy man, he was human, after all, and yielding to the pleasure of the embrace he exclaimed: "Bridget, acushla, squeeze me that way again, and I'll give you leap year, the longest year in the lot." Thus encouraged, St. Bridget, minded of her own husbandless condition, promptly proposed to St. Patrick. He, however, had imprudently taken vows of celibacy and had to sorrowfully decline. As a token of his regret, he gave to St. Bridget a silk gown.

Laws for Leap Year.

The foregoing account of the custom may not be altogether true, but it is probably as accurate as any other version. Fortunately those who believe that girls should be permitted to do some love-making "by wordes or lookes" are not wholly dependent on tradition for precedent. In the statutes of several countries are to be found laws covering their case. One enacted in Scotland, 1288, is worth a literal quotation. It runs as follows:

"It is statut and ordaint that during the rein of her maist blissit megeste, for ilk yeare knowne as leape yeare, ilk mayden ladye of bothe highe and lowe estait shall hae liberte to bespeke ye man she likes, albeit he refuses to taik hir to be his lawful wyfe, he shall be mulcted in ye sum one poundis or less as his estait may be; except and awisgif he can make it appeare that he is betrothit ane ether woman he then shall be free."

Not many years later a similar law was passed in France, and received the King's approval. It is also said that before Columbus set forth on his famous voyage, the girls of Florence and Genoa had sought and obtained the same privilege. In England the law was unwritten, but none the less stringent for all that. In New England, too, the Quaker maidens were not averse to the leap year's prerogatives of their sex. Longfellow's heroine, who proposed, was accepted and lived happily with her husband, comes to mind. Perhaps there are scores of similar instances to be found in Canada, but the blue-books tell not of them. Only a confidential talk with the blushing leap year bridegroom would reveal the fact that his wooing was not quite orthodox.

Two Great Calendar-Makers.

The history of leap year, without reference to its sentimental associations, is very interesting, bound as it is with the history of our calendar. The road of the searcher after truth in this matter, like other roads, leads to Rome, where hundreds of years before Christ, it was the custom of the priests to call together the people at the beginning of each month and apprise them of the sacred and feast days to be observed. The word calendar is plainly derived from the Latin word "calere"—to call. So badly did the priests arrange things that in the course of a few centuries their spring came in summer. Then came the wise Julius Caesar, who, looking into the future, saw the time when the 17th of March would be celebrated on the 12th of July. He decided to reform the calendar, and, with the assistance of Sosigenes, an astronomer, did so in 46 B. C. To make the civil year fit the solar year, Caesar gave February an additional day every leap year, calling the fifth day before the 1st of March a double sixth. This calendar is used even now in Russia, and was accepted everywhere until 1582, when Pope Gregory XIII. compiled the present calendar. Caesar's mistake was in giving each year an average of 365¼ days, which is 11 minutes too much, and would amount to 12 days by this time. Gregory overcame this difficulty by ordaining that when leap year fell in a centurial year it should not receive its additional day unless the year was a multiple of 400. Thus 1600 was a leap year, but 1700, 1800, and 1900 were not, so that those who are alive in 2000 will celebrate an event which has not occurred for four centuries. Even the Gregorian calendar is not perfect, for our civil year is 22 seconds longer than the solar year. As this only amounts to a day in 3,866 years we need not worry.

ADMIRAL ALEXIEFF.

The Czar's Mild-Mannered Autocrat of Manchuria.

A pleasing personality, with nothing in his appearance to strike terror to the world, is the man who holds the keys of peace and war in the Far East to-day. Admiral Alexeieff, a man whom the Czar has many times been pleased to honor, is still young enough to look forward to great conquests, yet just old enough to impress us as a kindly, middle-aged man, with a patriarchal beard, whose delight is to dandle a child on his knee.

He is the first Russian viceroy in the Far East, the man upon whom Nicholas II. has imposed the momentous task of building up a new Empire. Just what part Alexeieff has played in the recent moves on the great chessboard of Asia nobody outside the Czar's Empire knows. He has been in his time Governor-General of Eastern Siberia [illegible] Governor of Russian Manchuria, and he is to-day commander-in-chief of the Russian forces in the Pacific. It is an office hardly understood in England, for Alexeieff has power over the forces on land and on sea.

If he has played his part in the strange developments which have brought Russia face to face with Japan, Alexeieff has contributed his share also to the strength of the Russian navy. Time was when the Czar's navy was commanded and officered by Englishmen, when the sea power of Russia was not such a thing as appalled its enemies. But it is different now, and Russia's fleet stands third among the navies of Europe. With ports 9,000 miles apart, Russia has a naval position which Sir George Clarke declares "absolutely unique," and its new sea power is due not a little to the foresight and skill of its greatest sailor.

So lately as 1900 Alexeieff was side by side with the forces of Japan, against which he may soon be engaged in war. He was in charge of the Russian troops in China, and had under him when war began more troops than all the other powers together, except Japan. The story is told that the Russian band played the French "Marseillaise" as it marched into Pekin, and that it was only after some minutes of acutest agony that the General was able to stop the army of the Autocrat sounding the republican march. But it was the simplest blunder, and should not be taken as in the least suggesting lack of discipline. Where Alexeieff rules, there the soldier knows that obedience is the only virtue in the world.

If Alexeieff is not the slave of a strict convention—and we know that his soldiers were seen in China marching under umbrellas—he knows how to fit in freedom with efficiency. It was he probably of whom a traveler was thinking when he wrote home that "I have seen high Russian officers joke and laugh with their soldiers as if they had been chums." Yet the same traveler wrote that on the trying march to Pekin, "where soldiers of all other nationalities collapsed in hundreds along the road from sunstrokes or dysentery, or oppressed by the great heat, I never saw a single Russian fall out of the ranks." When the allies left China the Czar sent Alexeieff a sword shining with gold and diamonds, and inscribed: "For victories at the seat of war in Pechili, 1900."

Since then the Emperor has made him lord of Russia's Far Eastern Empire, with power almost absolute under the Czar himself and a special committee. The admiral has become, as a Russian paper said, the instrument of the will and purpose of the Czar, and that in the territories where Russia's movements cause the greatest uneasiness to the rest of the world.

It is said that when he first received his flag Alexeieff had a consuming passion for "Russian bridge," and was the best player on the Pacific station. But he has no time for bridge to-day, especially if it is correct that the Czar has telegraphed to him that "I give you full power to maintain, if necessary, the prestige of Russia by force of arms." We shall hear more of Admiral Alexeieff if that is true.

The Pope and the Figure Nine.

Speaking of his past life to a friend in Venice, just before the Papal election, in connection with which his name was mentioned, the Pope, remarks The Pall Mall Magazine, said: "My life has been strangely ruled by the figure nine. For nine years I was a schoolboy at Riese; for nine years a student at Padua; for nine years curate at Tombolo; for nine years priest at Salzano; for nine years a canon at Treviso; for nine years a bishop at Mantua; and now for nine years I have been Cardinal-Patriarch at Venice; and when I am Pope . . fin che Dio vuole . . . forse altre nove anni . . . (as long as God wills . . . possibly for another nine years)."

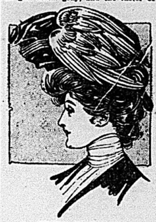
CHIFFON VELVET.

The New and Supple Weave Which Has Become So Fashionable.

Chiffon velvet has almost entirely supplanted the ordinary make of this material, for it is so supple and so lustrous that even the best silk velvet looks cheap by its side.

At almost any smart function this winter chiffon velvet dresses prevail. They are made in elaborate tailor fashion and are worn with handsome stoles of fur and much beplumed toques.

The most fashionable color seems to be gun metal gray, and the luster of this is toned down in spots by masses of embroidery and deep gray and white fringe.



CHIFFON VELVET HAT.

Next in popularity comes an odd, rather silvery shade of brown, which goes particularly well with sables or silver fox.

In one of New York's most fashionable tea rooms recently no fewer than eight beautiful costumes in chiffon velvet of this shade were to be seen.

There are also very smart gowns of black chiffon velvet trimmed with rich Irish lace and black chenille, but these are worn by older women.

The dressy tailor made may be of gray cloth or velvet, made with a bit of fringe or dyed lace and some pretty buttons. A white or gray lace waist may accompany this and a large gray and white plumed hat.

In millinery chiffon velvet is positively unequaled, for it is light in weight and lends itself to intricate manipulation.

The illustration shows a hat of this velvet in a fawn shade. It is trimmed with a brown and green wing.

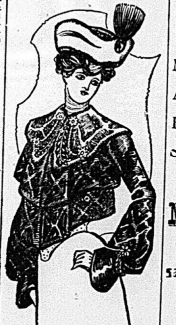
JUDIC CHOLLET.

SMART BOLEROS.

Changes In the Cut of Waists and Small Coats.

Three-quarter length cloth costumes are seen for general utility wear. For dressier occasions, however, the short bolero with the wide belt is to be preferred. This bolero is made in double and triple effects, and often the overhanging part is bordered with fringe.

The outline of the figure is lost in many of the new bodices, they are so befrilled. Bertha effects, and especially deep ones, are very smart, especially for evening toilets. Fulness is not only seen in the front, but also in the back, where it is fulled in to a wide, tight waistband.



MOLESKIN BOLERO.

Silk fringe with a deep network is one of the most fashionable trimmings possible, and it is much used on crepe de chine and veiling gowns.

Blouses of heavy lace are made with a thin lining of chiffon and a wide folded belt.

Velvet blouses are prepared for wearing with coat and skirt costumes, and the pin spotted velvets are most attractive when lightly trimmed with a few motifs of lace or made with a small V shaped yoke and collar of lace. Ornaments of chenille and silk are freely used on bodices and blouses, and lace is decorated with disks of velvet or with stitched bands and borders.

Pale, Anaemic People

With thin, watery blood always suffer greatly from the cold as well as the sudden and violent changes of our Canadian winter. They are particularly susceptible to Chills, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, La Grippe and even Consumption. They should take FERROL, instead of which they usually resort to extra warm clothing and avoid the cold, fresh air as much as possible—a very great mistake. What they require is a coating of good, healthy fat, a supply of rich, warm, red blood and properly toned nerves and all this they may have with very little trouble or expense, by taking a course of FERROL (The Iron-Oil Food) which will infallibly enrich the blood, increase the weight and tone up the nerves, making clumsy clothing quite unnecessary, and crisp, cold, fresh air a joy, instead of a thing to be avoided.

The Great Mortgage Lifter

In an address before the annual meeting of the Kansas state board of agriculture Frank Hobart of Columbus, Kan., made the following statement:

"I need not go into detail over the grains that can be raised on a Kansas farm to be used as a balancer for corn, but I cannot let this opportunity pass without saying a word for grass. Grass is one of the best balancers of the corn ration. The farmer figures, maybe, on all the condiments and high priced feed advertised and forgets that the green carpets of Kansas, on which he looks and treads so often, are the best condiments known, and careful experiments have shown will save him in feed 20 to 30 per cent.

"The two men who have made the most money out of hogs in Cherokee county have grass in abundance. Why will we keep our cows knee deep in grass and our hogs knee deep in mud? In a drive of nearly fifty miles last spring over a good portion of two of our southeastern counties I was astonished to see but one farmer that had adequate pasture for his herd of hogs. Corn has been cultivated 200 years, and its possibilities are just being discovered. Without it our Puritan forefathers would have perished, and we might have had no New England.

"Now corn culture is much discussed and corn breeding associations are in vogue. When will the grass growers form an association and lay before the world the possibilities of grass? Such a variety of grasses as grow in Kansas! Such a world of feed going to waste! The day of grass needs to be hastened."

The Hog House.

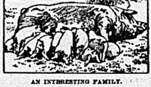
Many farmers do not have a suitable hog house because they think they cannot afford it. A good and serviceable one can be built that will not cost much and at the same time will give good satisfaction. The plan is as follows:

Build it sixteen feet wide. The length will depend upon the number of hogs kept or the number of sows to farrow on the farm. The building should run east and west and along the north side a passageway three and one-half feet wide should run the whole length of the building, thus leaving all the pens on the south side. It should be so constructed that movable partitions can be dropped into place every seven feet, making a breeding pen 7 by 12 feet, which will be large enough for a sow.

There should be a window in each pen and below the window a door, which should open into a little lot or space into which the sow and pigs can run on sunny days. When not being used as breeding pens the partitions can be removed, and it will make a sleeping house for the shotes or fat hogs. The troughs should be placed directly under the partition adjoining the passageway, and the partitions over them should be so constructed that they will swing from the top, so that when putting the feed in the troughs the pigs can be shut off. Such a hog house is not expensive, and it will soon pay for itself in caring for and saving the pigs.—Successful Farming.

Raising Large Litters of Pigs.

The accompanying illustration sent to the Breeder's Gazette by N. W. Crockett of Missouri shows a white sow with twelve pigs. She had thirteen and raised twelve of them. Just after the pigs are born, says Mr. Crockett, I like to keep the sow as quiet as possible for the first twenty-four hours. I give her all the water she wants to drink, and the next day I give her a little thin slop and a small feed of corn. I usually increase her feed each day until I have her on full feed. In about a week or ten days or as soon as the pigs are able to follow I give her the run of the pasture. I have a separate pen where I teach the little fellows to drink slop and eat soaked corn. I generally let the pigs wean themselves. My sows that farrow in March and April will bring pigs again the last of August and the first of September. They are bred before they wean their pigs. As soon as the sows show signs of drying up I remove them to another pasture, and the pigs do not miss them, for they have learned to eat and do not depend on their mothers.



AN INTERESTING FAMILY.

Keep the Pig Gaining.

The pig should never be permitted to spend a day without an average increase in weight. When a pig becomes settled in the habit of making daily, or, rather, constant, gains, he will not cease if well fed, whereas if the habit is interrupted by a period of short rations, under the impression that he will gain faster when well fed, the feeder will find that he was mistaken and that he will not fatten nearly so fast as if he had been well fed all his life.

Scalding Hogs.

Put the hog in a cask or trough and throw three or four handfuls of air slaked lime over it; then put in your boiling water. It will make the bristles fly. There is nothing better. I have been using it for years. There is no ugly smell like pine pitch tar or rosin about it.—J. S. Fishel in American Agriculturist.

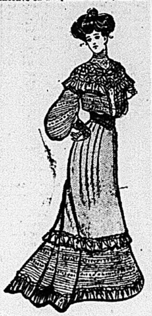
SEPARATE WAISTS.

They Still Are Worn In Spite of Some Dressmakers.

The separate waist still flourishes in pale tints to match the costume with which it is worn. Gray, lavender and pure white seem to be the favorite colors. The most serviceable material is crepe de chine, but lace, soft silks and chiffons are all popular.

The wide collar or cape effect is also smart on waists, and where this is not seen the long shoulder seam takes its place.

V shaped yokes of moderate size are effective on a separate blouse, and the silk or crepe de chine is tucked in groups all around. Stole trimmings are greatly in demand, and these are made daintily out of lace and embroidery.



PEAU DE SOIE GOWN.

Black and white effects in lace are gained by means of embroidery touches. Circular gaugings are used for yokes and are often relieved by stripes of fancy embroidery.

Elbow sleeves are voluminous affairs, with frills reaching far below the length of the arm. These frills are all of sheer chiffon net, etc., put on very full.

The illustration shows a peau de sole gown trimmed with white chiffon and renaissance lace.

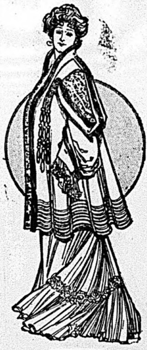
JUDIC CHOLLET.

FOR EVENING WEAR.

Brief Hints For Dainty Winter Dresses and Wraps.

The fichu effect decorates several evening gowns. It is made of chiffon and fine net and edged with narrow velvet to show off the whiteness of the neck.

Sleeves are becoming larger and larger, and this worries the average dressmaker, for she must plan the trimming carefully in order to avoid their appearing clumsy.



EVENING COAT.

Spotted and figured velvets are much in demand this winter.

Cream evening wraps are all the rage again for evening wear. They are trimmed with Irish lace and sable.

French sailor shapes of coarse lace and fur are among the novelties. They are trimmed with beautifully shaded velvet flowers.

Hair decorations are of a more modest size to go with the low style of hair dressing.

Gun metal gray is a very fashionable tint and harmonizes well with moleskin and squirrel and with the rich looking plushes which so closely follow the shades and markings of these furs. A very pale Japanese blue goes admirably with the gun metal tint, but it requires an amplitude of lace of ficelle tone and some brightly enameled or old silver buttons to make a smart gown.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

OATS FOR POULTRY.

A Poultryman Who Believes In Oats, but He Always Soaks Them.

In many papers I see the statement that oats are not fit for poultry food, and in the Stockman of Oct. 21 Mrs. S. W. Burlingame says that her hens do not like them and will eat everything else they can get before eating oats. Now, I believe this same condemned oats is one of the finest and best poultry feeds we can use as well as the cheapest. I have been feeding them regularly for over twenty years and would not do without them, but do not recommend feeding them dry. In the summer time I soak them twenty-four hours, and in cold weather I put them over the fire in the evening long enough to boil and feed them warm next morning. I am now feeding them thus: In the morning I put three gallons of oats to soak, and by next morning there will be about four gallons of them by swelling. I add to this nearly same amount of bran and shorts (equal parts) and about two pounds of oilmeal and four pounds of meat meal mixed so as to be moistened and crumbly, adding two tablespoonfuls of salt. I am feeding this every morning, and yet the fowls, old and young, will select out the soft oats first every time, but I do not use the chaffy light oats that we often find on the market, but buy the heaviest clean oats I can buy, and it would do you good to see what bone and frame grow from this ration with wheat and corn for noon and evening feed. I believe it is conceded by all other breeders that oats in some form is the best possible feed to develop the colt, calf, lamb or pig, but these all have grinders, so in feeding oats to poultry to get best results they must be soaked or boiled, and if in addition to this a liberal amount of good grit is furnished you will find oats an ideal feed as a bone and flesh former and also an excellent egg producer. Try them as I have described and see if your fowls do not soon learn to love them.—Joe Farmer in Stockman and Farmer.

Poultry as Insect Destroyers.

There is one advantage of keeping poultry on the farm that is generally overlooked, and that is the vast number of insects destroyed by it.

If every insect destroyed by a hen in a day were counted and an estimate made of the number of insects eaten by a flock of twenty-five hens, it would show that hens are more useful in that respect than may be supposed.

When busily at work scratching the hens secure many grubs and worms, while the larvæ of insects also assist in providing them with food.

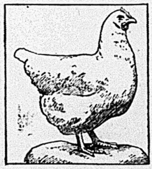
A flock of turkeys will search every nook and corner of a field for insects, and as a turkey can consume a large amount of food it will make away with a vast number of them each day.

The active guinea is ever on the search over the fields for insects. It does not scratch, but every blade of grass is looked over, and it rarely comes up to the barnyard to seek food. Its industry prompts it to secure its own food, and in so doing hundreds of insects are destroyed.

The ravenous duck, whose appetite seems never satisfied, will attempt to seek enough in the fields, and it captures not only insects, but the field mouse, and small reptiles will be eaten if other food is not plentiful. But if insects abound they will be content with eating them in preference to anything else.—Farm and Poultry Review.

A Fine White Rock.

The illustration, reproduced from American Poultry Journal, shows a pedigreed White Plymouth Rock hen bred and owned by Victor D. Caneday, Taylors Falls, Minn. She is very fine in both color and shape and laid eighty-six eggs in four months in her second laying year. Her grandam laid over 200 eggs in a year.



SHE HAS THE GOOD POINTS.

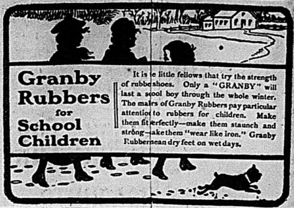
Silky Breed of Fowls.

Silky fowls are not extensively bred in this country, but in England they are very popular. Their soft, webless feathers when in prime condition are exceedingly loose and fluffy, standing out from the body in all directions, giving the fowl the appearance of a large bird, which their weight does not justify.

The cocks weigh from two and a half to four pounds, while the weight of the hens is from two to two and a half pounds, says a government bulletin.

The birds are of rather square, compact Cochin blood, crested, the cock's crest running back horizontally, while the hen's is globular; five toed, feather legged, rose comb, lumpy in appearance and dark purple in color, ear lobes blue or purple tinged with white, skin violet, approaching black; the covering of the bones being of the same color; shanks dark blue or black; plumage white and downy.

Silkies lay a small egg of a pale buff color and lay ten to twenty-five before wanting to sit. They make excellent mothers and are very valuable to hatch and rear the tender little ones of the more delicate varieties.



Granby Rubbers for School Children

It is the little fellows that try the strength of rubber shoes. Only a "GRANBY" will last a school boy through the whole winter. The makers of Granby Rubbers pay particular attention to rubbers for children. Make them fit perfectly—make them staunch and strong—make them "wear like iron." Granby Rubbers mean dry feet on wet days.

A Printer's Blunder.

A Paris newspaper on one occasion made a blunder which excited no small amount of merriment at the expense of a man of real talent. The following paragraphs, intended to have been printed separately, were by some error so arranged that they were read consecutively: "Dr. X. has been appointed head physician to the Hospital de la Charite. Orders have been issued by the authorities for the immediate extension of the cemetery of Mont Parnasse. The works are being executed with the utmost dispatch."

An agitation is being carried on to have the deer season a week later, viz., from the 8th to the 22nd of November, as the deer spoil during the warm weather the first week in November. Fancy having your pound of pork chops or wieners shied over the counter with a drop or an out curve and landing snugly in your basket when it looked as if they were going into the sawdust or through the door!

Monday night's games decided several group championships in the O. H.A. series. Perth won in senior group No. 2 by defeating Smith's Falls. Marlboros won No. 5 intermediate group by 1 goal, and Midland won No. 7 championship. Bracebridge is probably the winner of No. 8, though the referee's report has not yet been received. Watford wins in group 11 and Stratford in the combined 13 and 14 groups. Cobourg won in junior group No. 2. In the next round Perth will play the winner of group 1 on the ice of the latter on February 10; the return game at Perth on February 12. The winners in the east will play the Marlboros on the eastern ice February 16, and on Marlboros' ice Saturday, February 29. Thessalon will play at the winner of group 9 on February 8, and the return at Thessalon on February 11 or 12.

Perth and Smith's Falls will to-night do battle at the latter's place. This is for the group championship and promises to be an interesting event.

HOCKEY.

Picton Trent Valley Leaguers Won.

Belleville, as far as the Trent Valley Hockey League championship is concerned, is down and out, and whisper it gently that Picton did the trick here last night. Owing no doubt to the severe cold and stormy weather the attendance was meagre. Those who did attend endeavored to cheer the local boys on to victory, but it was of no avail. The Picton team appeared to be in better form than our boys, but neither team displayed much combination work. In this respect, however, the visitors appeared to advantage. At times the game was fast and many of the mix-ups were exciting. It was throughout, a clean game, but few of the players being sent to the fence for rough play. No one was hurt. It was 8.30 when the referee, Mr. Geo. Brown, of Port Hope, blew his whistle which called the teams out. The line up was as follows:

Picton Goal
Bartholemew
Yerex
McMullen
Hope
Tamblyn Shorey Black
Hough Wright Horner
Acton
Adams
Wilson
Williamson
Belleville Goal.

Picton secured the first goal soon after the puck had been faced off, Tamblyn doing the trick. Belleville secured the second goal, by making good rushes. The third was Picton and the fourth was ours. Shortly before half time Picton again passed the puck into the net. Score at half time 3-2 in favor of the visitors.

When the boys came out after a few minutes rest both teams worked hard for the next goal, Picton securing it after 15 minutes play. Our boys were now working hard to avert a defeat which seemed to stare them in the face, and succeeded in taking the next goal, which still left Picton one in the lead. For a few minutes the game was fast and the Belleville team worked hard to secure the goal which would tie them with the visitors. The spectators were however doomed to disappointment, for Shorey, with a beautiful lift from the side of the rink dropped the puck into the net, scoring the final goal for Picton. The game ended with a score of 5 to 3 in favor of the visitors.

The referee was all that could have been desired, he being apparently fair to both teams.

The officials were: Goal umpire for Belleville, R. Hamilton; Solmes, for Picton. Time-keepers, Tasse and W. T. Gorman.

The order of the goals scored, and by whom, was as follows:

First Half.

Picton	Tamblyn
Belleville	Adams
Picton	McMullen
Belleville	Adams
Picton	McMullen

Second Half.

Picton	Black
Belleville	Wilson
Picton	Shorey

Picton's victory ties them with Napanee, both teams having won two games and lost two. To-morrow evening these two teams meet at Picton for the concluding match.

BRITAIN'S PARLIAMENT

His Majesty King Edward Read Speech in a Resonant Voice.

In the House of Lords, Lord Lansdowne Said Policy of Mr. Chamberlain Was Not the Government's Policy, Although He Sympathized With the Design to Draw Colonies and Mother Country Closer Together—The Alaska Award.

London, Feb. 2.—The King's speech was read by His Majesty in a resonant voice yesterday. Touching on the Alaska decision, the King's speech said that on some points the verdict was favorable to the British claims, and on others it had been adverse. Much as this last circumstance was to be deplored, it must, nevertheless, be a matter for congratulation that the misunderstandings in which ancient boundary treaties made in ignorance of geographical facts are so fertile have in this case been finally removed from the field of controversy.

The Far Eastern Crisis.

The crisis in the Far East is touched upon briefly in the King's speech, as follows: "I have watched with concern the course of negotiations between the Governments of Japan and Russia in regard to their respective interests in China and Corea, and a disturbance of the peace in those regions could not but have deplorable consequences. Any assistance which my Government can usefully render towards the promotion of a pacific solution will be gladly afforded."

The Cotton Supply.

Another point of interest in the King's speech was a reference to cotton, as follows: "The insufficiency of the supply of raw material upon which the great cotton industry of this country depends, has inspired me with deep concern. I trust the efforts being made in various parts of my Empire to increase the area of cultivation may be attended with a large measure of success."

Foreign Relations.

The speech makes the usual references to the satisfactory character of foreign relations; touches upon the conclusion of the Anglo-French arbitration agreement as being "a happy illustration of the friendly feelings of the two countries," and refers to the Somaliland expedition, and to the Macedonian reforms, expressing the hope that the practical measures of these unhappy regions will be carried out during the present respite in the disturbances.

The Mission to Thibet.

Reference is made to the "political mission, which, with the concurrence of the Chinese Government, has entered Thibetan territory in order to secure due observance of conventions," saying that a Chinese official had been despatched from Pekin to meet this mission, and expressing trust that an arrangement would be reached to peacefully remove the constant sources of friction.

Cost of Defence.

The speech concludes with the warning, that, although the estimates have been framed with the utmost desire for economy, the burden imposed by the necessities of naval and military defence is "undoubtedly serious," and mentions some of the proposed domestic legislation, as already forecasted.

No suggestion of legislation concerning Ireland was contained in the King's speech.

In the Commons.

In the House of Commons the mover and the seconder of the speech praised the manner in which the Alaskan award had been received by Canada.

Bannerman Presents a Puzzle.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal leader in the House, followed. After expressing regret at the absence of the Premier, Sir Henry said he desired to question the Government regarding its attitude on the fiscal question, and asked was it a new Government with a new policy? The only way of dealing with the existing confusion, he added, was to appeal to the common sense of the electors of the country. Sir Henry severely arraigned the Government's attitude on the fiscal question, and announced that John Morley would in a few days introduce a more comprehensive amendment involving the whole situation.

Stood By the Premier.

Austen Chamberlain, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, defended the Government, whose fiscal policy, he said, had been clearly stated by the Premier. All the Government asked for was freedom to negotiate, which would enable it to preserve the open door and freedom to trade.

The sitting was suspended at 7.30 p.m.

In the Lords.

In the House of Lords, commenting on the Alaska decision, Lord Lansdowne said that although the tribunal was not, strictly speaking, arbitral, its efforts illustrated the possibility of settling by other than diplomatic means, long-standing, dangerous differences. The condition of Alaska might have brought Great Britain into a serious and acute controversy with the United States.

The finding of the tribunal doubtless was not entirely satisfactory to Great Britain, but no one expected it to be an entirely favorable verdict. Lord Lansdowne was inclined to find some consolation in the fact that the two islands in Portland Channel which had gone to the United States were not of any strategical value whatever.

Wait Till Asked.

Concerning the Russo-Japanese dispute, Lord Lansdowne said it was an axiom in diplomacy not to offer good offices until they were asked for. Neither of the disputants had asked for it. It was an open secret that mediation was not desirable at the present time. But should the opportunity offer, His Majesty's Government would gladly avail itself thereof.

The Fiscal Question.

Lord Lansdowne, referring to the fiscal question, declared that the policy of Mr. Chamberlain was not the policy of the Government. Premier Balfour had clearly defined the Government's policy.

Personally, he was in sympathy with Mr. Chamberlain's aspirations to draw the Empire more closely together and put the affairs of the nation on a more business-like footing.

The Government was prudent in declining to be misled into such proposals, in which if the reward of success was great, the punishment of failure was irreparable.

Justifies Thibet.

Lord Lansdowne congratulated the House on the conclusion of the Anglo-French and Anglo-Italian arbitration treaties, deplored the situation in the near and Far East, and expressed the hope that a pacific solution of the differences in both cases would be reached. Continuing, Lord Lansdowne at some length justified the Somaliland and Thibet expeditions.

The address was agreed to, and the House of Lords adjourned at 7.25 p.m.

Premier Balfour Laid Up.

Premier Balfour's attack of influenza is following its normal course. He was unable to attend the reassembling of Parliament. A bulletin issued by his physician says Mr. Balfour passed a fair night, that his temperature is lower, and that there are no complications.

Want of Confidence Motion.

Right Hon. John Morley, on behalf of the Opposition, gave notice that he would move an amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne. The amendment is equivalent to a motion of want of confidence in the Government, and is in the following terms:

"It is our duty, however humbly, to present to your Majesty that our effective deliberation on financial services is impaired by conflicting declarations from your Majesty's Ministers. We respectfully submit the judgment of this House that the removal of protective duties, for more than half a century actively conduced to the vast extension of the trade and commerce and realm and welfare of the population, and this House believes that while the needs for social improvement are still manifold and urgent, any return to protective duties, and more particularly when imposed upon the food of the people, would be deeply injurious to the national strength, contentment and well-being."

TOO LITTLE BLOOD.

IS THE CAUSE OF MOST OF THE MISERY IN EVERYDAY LIFE—IMPROVE THE BLOOD AND DISEASE WILL NOT EXIST.

Among the many thousands who testify to the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a blood and nerve tonic is Miss Mary Jackson, Normandale, Ont., who says:—"I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and have derived such great benefit from them that I consider it my duty to let others know their worth. For upwards of three years I suffered from anaemia, and grew so weak that I could scarcely walk about the house. I had no color in my face, my lips and gums were bloodless, I lost all ambition, suffered from headaches and dizziness, and fell away in weight until I weighed only ninety-four pounds. I doctored a great deal, but it did not seem to do me any good. I was then advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and before I had taken them ten days I felt better and my people could see a change in me. I continued using the pills for some weeks and am now in the very best health. Every depressing symptom has passed away and I have gained fourteen pounds in weight. I think there is no medicine can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I strongly recommend them to all weak and ailing girls."

Miss Jackson's experience should bring hope to all the weak, ailing girls and women. What those pills have done for her they will do for others. Every dose adds tone and vigor to the blood and nerves, brings a glow of health to sallow cheeks, a sparkle to the eyes and a ruby redness to pallid lips. No other medicine has done so much to bring comfort and health to weak girls and women. If you are ailing give the pills a fair trial and new health and strength will be yours. Do not accept any pink colored substitute; the genuine pills always have the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" printed on the wrapper around every box. Sold by medicine dealers everywhere or by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MR. GAMEY HAS THE FLOOR

Col. Munro, New Member For North Oxford, Takes His Seat.

Toronto, Feb. 3.—An opportunity to applaud with hearts full of gratitude came to the Liberals in the Legislature yesterday. It was when their new member was introduced, Col. Munro, the victor of North Oxford, was brought in by Hon. Richard Harcourt and Hon. John Dryden, two Ministers who assisted the candidate in the recent campaign. After the introduction to the Speaker, there was a vigorous round of desk-rapping, which lasted a full minute.

This little formality over, the debate went on, Rickard of West Durham taking up nearly an hour to "conclude." He was followed by Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, and he was followed by Dr. Routledge (East Middlesex).

Mr. Gamey will speak this afternoon and the House may reach a vote to-night, when an evening session will be held. The remaining speakers will be Messrs. McCart, Kidd, Graham and Hanna.

SIR RICHARD'S MOVE.

Is He Preparing to Take Other Position Under Government?

Ottawa, Feb. 3.—Recent events all points to some kind of impending move on the part of Sir Richard Cartwright. He has abandoned South Oxford, Mr. Hyman of London is about to join the Cabinet without portfolio, another son of Sir Richard's has been appointed to a place in the civil service, viz., Capt. A. D. Cartwright, barrister of Toronto, secretary of the new Railway Commission at $4,000 a year. Sir Richard may leave the Cabinet to make a portfolio for Mr. Hyman, or he may take Hon. Mr. Scott's place in the Senate and let Mr. Hyman succeed that gentleman as Secretary of State. There is still another report that Sir Richard will be made Canadian High Commissioner at London. From authoratative sources in London it is learned that Lord Strathcona is thinking seriously of resigning, and his retirement may be announced any day.

Cattle and Horse Breeders.

Toronto, Feb. 3.—Yesterday the Holstein-Friesian Cattle Breeders' Association, the Ayrshire Breeders' Association, and the Harness, Hunter and Saddle Horse Society met here in annual session. The associations were all in good shape, and officers were elected. The first mentioned association passed a resolution similar to that of other associations against exhibiting at the St. Louis Fair, and they all agreed to send delegates to the first meeting of the proposed National Live Stock Association at Ottawa.

Conservatives of Hochelaga.

WM. C. WHITNEY DEAD.

New York, Feb. 3.—W. C. Whitney is dead. Mr. Whitney was taken ill at the performance of "Parsifal" last Thursday afternoon and was compelled to return to his home as his indisposition continued. Physicians were called in, and after a diagnosis it was announced that Mr. Whitney was suffering from appendicitis. An operation was decided upon, and it was performed on Saturday night.

William Collins Whitney, former Secretary of the Navy under President Cleveland, was a many-sided man, a man of many ambitions, most of which he had realized. He set out to be a successful lawyer, and he succeeded in that. He had always had a hankering after politics but he left that alone until he had made an independent fortune and could afford to take up politics without any thought of gain. He was instrumental in building up the Young Men's Democratic Club of New York, and his success along the same line for the county Democracy made him recognized as a power in organizing as well as directing. The only public offices he ever held were those of inspector of schools and corporation counsel for New York city until Cleveland made him Secretary of the Navy. Whitney set to work to build up the new navy, a work which has been carried on with energy ever since.

PHYSICAL CONDITIONS.

These Are the Basis of Education Methods of To-day.

Toronto, Feb. 3.—Yesterday morning a congress of the members of the Provincial Board of Health and others interested in sanitary and educational matters convened in the Normal School on the call of the Minister of Education. Although few responded those who did were all experts in the subjects set for discussion, and as a result a movement was instituted which may have most important results in the educational system of Ontario. In order to produce some practical effect it was unanimously agreed that a committee be empowered to prepare a series of resolutions embodying the conclusions of the congress, and that these be submitted to the Minister of Education. Principal Scott, of the Normal School, nominated the following gentlemen to act upon the committee: Dr. Hodgetts, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health; Dr. Sheard, Medical Health Officer for Toronto; Inspector Hughes, and Mr. O'Dea of the Technical School. At the unanimous desire of the meeting Principal Scott's name was also added. The committee will meet on an early day on the call of Dr. Hodgetts.

The Human Dread of Heart Failure

SYMPTOMS OF WHICH CAUSE CONSTANT ALARM SOON DISAPPEAR WITH THE USE OF

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The heart is looked upon as the very source and fountain of life and the slightest defeat in the workings of this organ is sufficient to keep one in constant dread of sudden and unexpected death.

Shortness of breath on slight exertion, irregular beating, palpitation and weak action of the heart are among the symptoms which cause uneasiness, and these indications of disease soon disappear when Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is used.

With a liberal supply of rich, red, life-sustaining blood the heart plods on with ceaseless energy, forcing the blood through the body and patiently renewing its own waste, but just as soon as the blood gets thin, weak or watery, the symptoms of heart weakness appear and hold the victim in constant terror.

Because of its extraordinary blood-building qualities, Dr. Clase's Nerve Food thoroughly removes these symptoms and not only ensures regular and healthful heart action, but at the same time restores strength and vigor to the whole system.

Mrs. John Hogan, Strachan St., Belleville, Ont., states: "I have used several boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and as a result I have been restored to good health. I used to suffer a great deal with headaches, dizziness, nervousness and weak fainting spells. By the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food these ills have been entirely overcome and I feel like a different person. My nerves are steady, I have no headaches and the dizziness and fainting spells have entirely left me. I can speak most highly of this medicine."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cts a box, six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

Weather Probabilities.

Toronto, Feb. 4.—The general outlook is for cold weather, with no break in sight. Throughout Canada east of the Rockies the tendency is to still lower temperatures. Since the beginning of the month pressure movements have been extraordinarily rapid, and another cold snap is brewing in the Northwest. Dawson City yesterday had 46 below zero, with a maximum of 38 below. Qu'Appele and Winnipeg were each 28 below, and Kingston and Parry Sound tied at 16 below. From Toronto east zero and colder was the rule. British Columbia keeps mild at 44 above. Buffalo had five inches of snow last night, with a 34-mile-an-hour gale.

Rector Objected to "Fatty."

Windsor, Feb. 4.—Rev. D. H. Hind of Sandwich, rector of St. John's Church, administered a sound beating to an insolent passenger on a car in which he was riding Tuesday night. Dr. Hind is short and corpulent, but was a trained athlete in his younger days. The man addressed Mr. Hind as "Fatty," and followed up the remarks with others of a more insulting nature.

RUSSIA FORCING A WAR

Hayashi Says Situation Is "Certainly Very Threatening."

Fateful Day For Russia and Japan Is Now Fixed For February 5, When the Russian Reply to Japan Will Be Announced—Viceroy Alexieff Given Authority to Begin War If He Thinks It Necessary.

London, Feb. 4.—Baron Hayashi, Japanese Minister to Great Britain, describing the situation in the Far East, said the situation was "certainly very threatening," but said that everything depended upon Russia's reply, which will be announced on Feb. 5.

"It is highly improbable," the Minister continued, "that Russia will make any aggressive move before the Japanese Government has received and considered the Russian reply. What Russia wishes to do is to throw the responsibility of taking the initiative upon Japan."

The foregoing utterances were provoked on being shown the threatening press despatches from St. Petersburg.

Alexieff Given Power to Fight.

London, Feb. 4.—A despatch from St. Petersburg to Reuter's Telegraph Company, dated Tuesday, and forwarded by way of the frontier, says the Russian general staff has given Viceroy Alexieff authority to declare war and open hostilities on his own responsibility, if circumstances render it necessary.

The despatch adds that an Imperial manifesto declaring war is expected if the Japanese Government does not accept the conditions proposed in Russia's response, which, it is asserted, will be Russia's last word.

Russian Fleet Moves.

Port Arthur, Feb. 4.—Important naval and military movements have been effected here in response to the Japanese war measures. Seven battleships hitherto inside the harbor have joined the outside fleet, consisting of nine other battleships.

Only eight ships remain inside now. Simultaneously the 3rd Brigade of Siberian Rifles and two batteries of artillery started for an unannounced destination from Liao Yang, south of Mukden. Altogether about 9,000 troops have departed, leaving 10,000 men at Port Arthur, exclusive of the troops manning the fortifications.

Britain Has No News.

London, Feb. 4.—Just before the adjournment of the night session of the House of Commons, a member asked the Government whether it had any information concerning the rumor that Russia had declared war. To this question Home Secretary Ackers-Douglas replied: "None whatever."

War Correspondent Jailed.

New York, Feb. 4.—Jack London, the writer, who went recently to Japan to report the threatened hostilities, has been imprisoned, according to an American despatch from Tokio, charged with photographing Japanese fortifications.

Toronto, Feb. 4.—Two hundred prominent horsemen attended the banquet of the Canadian Horse Breeder's Association here last night. The feature of the evening was an address on the registration of stallions by W. J. Sparks, of London, Eng., and it was one of the most practical of discourses.

The Hackney Breeders' Association, the Shire Horse Association and the Canadian Pony Association all met in annual session here yesterday and elected their officers. They all had increases in membership and carry cash balances over.

After running down a steep grade for a quarter of a mile the train was stopped. Mrs. Langtry, who had been thrown against the side of the car, fainted when the danger was over.

SPEAKER STOPS GAMEY

Called Premier Ross a Literary and a Political Pirate, As Mr. Whitney Explained Directly and, Not As the Premier Had Done of Gamey, By Inuendo—Immense Crowd in the House to Hear the Member For Manitoulin Speak.

Toronto, Feb. 4.—For an hour and a half Robert Roswell Gamey spoke in the Legislature yesterday afternoon. The galleries were filled to capacity, and hundreds stayed around the corridors anxious for the opportunity of hearing the man from Manitoulin. Hours before the opening of the house the crowd began to gather, and a hundred were comfortably seated at 1 o'clock. From that time on the crush was great. Mr. Gamey spoke in ringing tones, but his language was temperate. He devoted some time to a dispassionate consideration of provincial issues, assailing the policy of the Government on questions affecting the prosperity of New Ontario. As a contribution to the debate, his speech, shorn of the references to his own case, was extremely valuable, showing a wide knowledge of affairs and conditions existing in the north. It was when Mr. Gamey ventured into the bribery case that he encountered trouble. He was called to order several times by the Speaker, who objected to anything being said that referred directly to the debates of a previous session, and to Mr. Gamey speaking directly to a member of the House. This is the incident:

Premier a Pirate.

Mr. Gamey said the Premier ought to know what a pirate is. He was the Capt. Kidd of Canadian literature. He actually stole the poem that appears in the old school books under his name. Was not that the most miserable and contemptible act of a pirate?

Speaker Charlton interposed: "Surely," he said, "the honorable gentleman is not going to attack the honorable Premier in this way?"

"Perhaps I should not use as strong language," replied Mr. Gamey.

Mr. Speaker—You are making a direct reference.

Mr. Whitney—You're right. The difference is this: The honorable member for Manitoulin names the one to whom he refers, but the Premier did not, but everybody knows to whom he referred.

Mr. Gamey resumed, but his first statement again aroused the Speaker. The Premier was a political pirate as well as a literary pirate.

The Speaker said the rules of debate barred any direct reference to a member of the House.

Mr. Gamey—Will he say he didn't mean me when he said "pirate?" Either I shouldn't be in the House or the Government should not be in the House.

The Letter in Premier's Desk.

Mr. Gamey then enquired, concerning the celebrated letter which was found in the Premier's desk, and which he had left in the Provincial Secretary's office. Mr. Stratton rose to say he had denied that such was the case, and was met with the observation that "perhaps he might have forgotten." Mr. Speaker said a denial must be accepted without comment. He intimated that a member may not discuss a question that had been previously debated and voted on unless an amendment were introduced re-opening it. This Mr. Gamey said he would do, when he had some things he intended to inform the House of.

Held Their Attention.

Frequent applause from Opposition members punctuated the remarks of the man from Manitoulin. His speech was listened to with great attention. It was closely followed by the Premier, who kept his eyes in the direction of the speaker from the first word to the last. Mr. Stratton also remained in his seat, and buried himself behind a newspaper, in which he appeared to be deeply interested.

Mr. McCart of Stormont, Mr. Duff of Simcoe, Mr. Graham of Brockville then spoke in turn, and Mr. Hanna moved the adjournemt at 10.30. It is expected a vote will be reached before six o'clock tonight.

C.P.R. Must Pay.

Montreal, Feb. 4.—The Canadian Pacific Railway officials announce that the company has been condemned by a British judge in Hong Kong to pay to the Chinese Government £96,000 sterling for running down a Chinese gunboat with one of their steamships, the Empress of Japan.

Two Galt Boys Acquitted.

Berlin, Feb. 4.—In the trial of Warner, O'Donnell and Hull of Galt, and Rellinger of Berlin, for shopbreaking and theft, Police Magistrate Weir honorably discharged the first two, but found the last two guilty and remanded them until Saturday for sentence.

Conference Without An Agreement.

Indianapolis, Feb. 4.—The joint conference between the operators and the mine workers has adjourned without an agreement. A sub-committee of one miner and an operator for each State has been appointed to fix a date for a future conference.

MR. WILLISON PRAISES MR. BORDEN.

Of the leader of the Conservative party, Mr. R. L. Borden, Mr. J. S. Willison, late editor-in-chief of the Toronto Globe, and the choice of Sir Wilfrid Laurier as the most fitting person to chronicle the events of the life of Canada's Premier, says editorially in the Toronto News:

"Mr. Borden has made an excellent impression during his recent tour in the Eastern Townships. Though the elections are now delayed, this personal canvass of an important district by the Conservative leader has been by no means lost time. He is possessed of a personality which gains in impressiveness by closeness of contact—rather a rare quality in public men—and it would be impossible that he should come out of a series of meetings with a thoughtful and intelligent community like that of the manufacturing Eastern Townships without having greatly increased his prestige and strength. * * * A chief may be a silent man. Human leadership is a power apart. This power Mr. Borden possesses in a large degree. His selection as leader of the Opposition in Parliament was not an accident, nor the result merely of clashing interests. He was a man and is a man who commands confidence at sight. He has the calmness, the cool judgment, the constructive power which men of experience like to see in those to whom they commit their interests. His lack of Parliamentary experience they felt would be overcome; while had he lacked the essential qualities of leadership, no deftness of floor tactics would have ever proved a substitute for them.

"On the platform he is not moving so much as argumentative. Audiences feel at times as if he were paying them the high compliment of addressing himself to them under the impression that they are judges rather than jurors. There is a sense that what he is saying is important, and not merely partizan talk reeled out in machine fashion. Impressiveness is, perhaps, his chief note, and Edward Blake and Dalton McCarthy the public men to whom he might best be compared."

SELF-RIGHTEOUSNESS.

Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst was talking about the self-righteous.

"They are a strange class," he said. "Whenever I think of them I am reminded of a man who died in Leipzig whne I was studying there some thirty years ago. This man was so abominably self-righteous that they say he murmured as he lay dying:

"'And if I owe any man anything, I freely forgive him the debt.'"

This is the story a Kansas City travelling man brought with him from Omaha yesterday. It is "on" Bishop Millspaugh of the Episcopal diocese of Kansas, who lives in Topeka:

It seems that the good bishop was recently fishing, and he caught a whopper. At a cafe in Omaha last week he was describing this fish when a stranger joined this party, and the man who had first heard the fish tale said to the bishop:

"Now tell that story again."

The bishop, his identity unknown to the late arrival, did so, describing minutely, the fish's dimensions, weight and the like. When he had done the man who had asked him turned to the late arrival and said:

"What do you think of that?"

"Well, had you told that yarn, I'd have said it was a ——— lie, but I don't know your friend here; introduce him."

The wisdom of a wise man is shown in his ability to conceal his ignorance.

Prof. Charles Zeublin, of Chicago, lectured recently in Philadelphia on "Ruskin and the Ethics of Wealth." After his lecture Prof. Zueblin talked about education. "Greek," he said, "can be made very interesting to boys and girls. I know an instructor who puts his pupils to translating the Asteia of Hierocles as soon as they can construe. Hierocles, you know, was a Greek joker, and his jokes still ring true. Most of them are about schoolmasters. One concerns a schoolmaster who boards a ferry on horseback, and, when the people ask him why he does so, he replies that he is in a hurry and wants to get across the river faster. Another of the schoolmasters of Hierocles is on a ship, when a great storm arises. The people, in fear of shipwreck, proceeded to lash themselves to spars, to oars, and to other heavy and buoyant objects. But the schoolmaster lashes himself to an anchor. A third schoolmaster wants to see what he looks like when he is asleep. Accordingly he stands before a mirror and shuts his eyes.

Literary Notes.

Lord Esher, Sir George Clarke, and Admiral Sir John Fisher—the three men who make up the commission intrusted with the reorganization of the British army—are sketched in the Review of Reviews for February by W. T. Stead.

A very fully illustrated article in the Methodist Magazine and Review for February number on "The Book of the Nations," recounts the history and achievements of the British and Foreign Bible Society, whose centenary is now being celebrated in many lands and many tongues. An article on "The Radio-Active Elements," by Madame Curie, the discoverer of radium, is of special significance. Toronto, Wm. Briggs. Montreal, C. W. Coates. Halifax, S. F. Huestis. $2.00 a year; $1.00 for six months.

Jack London begins in the February number of Wilshire's Magazine a new and striking sociological study, "The Tramp." The editor contributes a review of Alfred Russell Wallace's new book "Man's Place in the Universe," and draws the interesting conclusion that the impulse toward social solidarity is conditioned upon a finite universe. The usual departments and miscellaneous matter are included and various timely topics are discussed in lively fashion from the Socialist standpoint. It is well illustrated.

A Goddess of Africa

A Story of the Golden Fleece.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

from the hated light: but the practiced ears of the cowboy ere long detected something more than this, if the nervous way in which he played with the revolver he held in his hand was any criterion, and one could guess the meaning of his more frequent backward glances.

They were pursued, and the blacks, as if to keep their courage up, were giving tongue occasionally like a pack of hounds.

"Faster!" said Lord Bruno, mentally calculating on the chances of a ruction in the narrow chamber they were traversing.

Evidently matters were drawing perilously near a crisis of some sort, though the wonder of it was how their enemies could make better progress in the dark than they did by the aid of the torch, and Red Eric voiced the impression of them all when he muttered something to the effect that the rascals must have cat's eyes.

Judging from the distance they had covered, it would seem as though they must surely be near the other side of the ancient volcano, and eyes were strained to discover some sign of an outlet.

Louder grew the shouts from the rear, and Bludsoe suddenly discovered there were lights in that quarter, which first explained several things that had appeared strange.

"There's no use talking, we must turn at bay and show our teeth," he declared, and no man ventured to argue the matter.

So the friendly torch was dropped under their feet and trampled upon until the last spark had been stamped out.

Then low words of command were given and the little group of African argonauts threw themselves almost flat, each man taking advantage of what cover fortune threw in his way, perhaps an out-cropping rock, or if nothing better the saddlebags laden with gold. Rex, crouching there with this barrier in front, wondered whether in the history of the world any other man than himself had ever been given a chance to do battle from behind such a precious rampart.

They were granted little time for speculation as to the possible outcome.

A more startling picture could not well be conceived than was presented by these fantastic Zambodi warriors, decked in all the panoply of the warpath, with their ugly black faces painted to resemble fiends of Tophet, and brandishing weapons and torches while they covered ground with tremendous leaps.

Fortunately there were hearts of steel in that little company, and they faced this deadly peril without a quiver.

Jim was to give the word. He had directed them to spare the link bearers with the first tornado of lead, so that light might be afforded them to do as much damage as possible, which course stamped the cowboy a natural leader of men in time of battle.

Closer still, until the very whites of the leader's eyes could be seen in the weird glare of the blazing torches—had Bludsoe forgotten to give the word, or was he paralyzed?

"Now!" suddenly rang out, and the exclamation was drowned in the awful crash of six revolvers, flashing out their fiery contents.

The scene was one that almost beggars description — with the shrieking black devils waving their flambeaux and hurling assegais and spears toward their unseen foes, it was not unlike a page from the history of the Inferno as pictured by the pencil of a Dante.

The roar of firearms again awoke a thousand echoes in the confined space. It was as though some thunder-bolt, forged by immortal Jove, had been hurled upon the earth to be shattered into fragments.

Men were sent bowling down—some fell to lie there like logs, while others rolled over, or else attempted to scramble to their feet, still filled with the battle fervor, since more daring souls do not live than these black barbarians, fetish worshippers that they are.

And the terrible flashes continued to cut the darkness beyond, each seeming like the fiery tongue of some monster serpent that lay in wait to receive the invaders of this haunted passage; while the cruel messengers of lead tore through the ranks of the assailants.

Flesh and blood could stand it no longer. The Zambodi had borne up under the storm with a bravery that would have done credit to the Old Guard of Napoleon, but there was a limit to their valor.

Those who were able turned and fled in terror. The torch bearers even forgot to throw down their lights, and thus screen their retreat; but a considerate foe refused to fire after them once the victory was won.

"How is it with you, boys?" shouted Lord Bruno, making himself heard above the wild death chants of a couple of wounded braves, who doubtless fully expected the first move of the victors would be to knock them on the head, since those were the ethics prevailing among the Zulu races of South Africa.

Reassuring replies came from all sides.

The murderous assegais with their keen points often dipped in poison, had found no victims, thanks to the sheltering ramparts, and the fact that they were cast at random, in the midst of tremendous excitement.

Quick and sharp came Bludsoe's directions, and taking hold of hands for additional security the little party again moved forward.

What lay before them was utterly unknown, since the most intense darkness reigned.

At any moment they might stumble into a gulf the counterpart of that which swallowed up the wretched black scout.

This caused a fearful strain upon their nervous systems, and presently the cowboy refused to sanction it longer.

"We might have light," he declared, firmly.

So the torch was again brought out, and Jim had drawn forth a match which he meant to use in starting a little fire, when an exclamation from Phil directed their attention beyond. No sooner had Bludsoe turned his eyes in the quarter indicated than he cried out in joy:

"The opening of this devil's hole, boys, thank God!"

BOOK III.

CHAPTER XVII.

IN DURANCE VILE.

A faint light had been discovered, which they could reasonably presume came from the Zambodi kraal, and as they drew nearer, the outlines of the mouth of the cavern became visible.

Of course Jim no longer desired to ignite his torch, since the chances were it might betray them to the enemy.

In five minutes they had gained the opening and the scene was spread before them.

Darkness still wrapped the earth in her sable mantle, and while an occasional flash came from the clouds, the rumble of thunder seemed more distant, as though the storm had gone around—indeed, at this time of year such a disturbance was singular enough to attract more than passing notice, since it corresponds to our December in latitudes north of the equator.

Before them was the great kraal of the warlike blacks. Fires burned in many places, and the most intense excitement reigned.

Loud rolled the war drum, and savage shouts from men and women and even children testified to the tremendous influence the presence of our little party had upon the self-constituted guardians of the sacred crater.

Even Bludsoe looked upon the exciting scene with unusual interest. It reminded him of a disturbed beehive, or a giant ant-hill into which a pole had been violently thrust.

"Well, the sooner we get out of this region the better for our health," remarked Lord Bruno, as his eye detected the swarming masses of blacks moving to and fro, many of them passing up the side of the hill as if ordered to join those who had gone to do battle with the profaners of the temple.

"My part of the mission has been completed, but how about yours?" asked Rex.

"Possibly it may have to wait until a more convenient season," was the reply of a practical man, accustomed to governing his actions by the conditions that prevailed.

At any rate it was exceedingly perilous for them to remain where they were, since danger menaced them from several quarters.

Bludsoe crept outside to take an observation and presently rejoined them.

"What are the prospects?" demanded Lord Bruno, as the cowboy came back.

"Bad enough, sir. We're on a shelf again, as it were. To go up is impossible, and I don't see how we can pass down except by using our lariats."

"But the wild beast——"

"Never came in this way—we must have missed his road, I reckon. It is too late now to go back and search for it. Get your ropes ready, pards, for we'll need 'em both."

Always prompt and reliable, Jim set to work in the endeavor to unravel the tangle that now threatened their future.

The double lasso was lowered, with Red Eric as ballast, and he signaled that all was right when his feet struck solid ground below. One by one they went down, taking the heavy saddlebags of gold along.

Jim was last, Jim, upon whom devolved the task of saving the ropes, which might even again come in very handy in assisting them when disaster threatened.

Bludsoe doubled the rope and passing down to its limit found a projecting rock which served as a spur, upon which he again repeated his tactics and reached his comrades in safety, when a pull on one end of the rope recovered it.

They found themselves against the cliff, between which and the kraal the impis had conducted their fantastic war dance under the direction of the witch-doctor.

The situation was full of danger, since at any moment discovery might come. At the same time they were bound to move in spite of a thousand aggressive warriors.

One and all were united with regard to their proper course, for it was easy to decide in which quarter the doctor awaited their coming.

They made a start, and began creeping along at the foot of the cliff, looking like ghouls from another world.

More than once Bludsoe uttered savage anathemas against the fires upon which the children of the kraal were heaping all the inflammable rubbish they could collect, to the imminent danger of a grand conflagration, should the grass conical huts once start burning.

This illumination served to increase the danger of discovery; but a thousand fires would not have kept them back, now that their course had been marked out.

Foot by foot they moved along, while the pandemonium seemed to increase with each passing minute. Perhaps the Zambodi believed in the gospel of noise, and were accustomed to placing as much reliance upon lung power in battle as the force of arms.

An unfortunate event precipitated discovery, and though the fellow whose eyes first sighted the six creeping forms went speedily to the barbarian's paradise, since Bludsoe caught him in an iron grip, his note of warning was taken up by others, so that a rush was made from various quarters, the on-coming impis resembling the spokes of a wheel of which our friends, much to their regret, represented the hub.

Discretion could now be thrown to the wind — speed and valor were the only things that would save them.

Bludsoe gave the word, and throwing aside the mask they sprang forward.

Higher leaped the flames, until the whole region was illuminated. If the clamor had been deafening before, it was now simply diabolical, since every inmate of the kraal seemed to be uttering ear-splitting shouts and shrieks. Half a hundred factory whistles of all keys might have equalled the noise thrown off by the Zambodi when the hunted whites came into full view.

Twice they were compelled to turn at bay and drive back some advance squad of the enemy, that had forged ahead of the rest and threatened to close in upon them.

The saddle bags were heavy yet with a strange obstinacy that was next to madness they refused to abandon the gold.

Rex soon found himself compelled to slip off his coat and carry it on his arm, since it was easier to run in that way. Once he stumbled and fell. Lord Bruno turned to assist him, half expecting to see the shaft of an assegai sticking out between his shoulders; but Rex staggered to his feet, at which the Englishman snatched up his coat and held out his hand.

"Take hold, my dear fellow!" he cried, but Hastings, although somewhat winded, was too proud to accept assistance, at least as yet.

"I'm all right—don't stop!" he gasped.

And the mad flight was resumed.

In such a strange way did Lord Bruno chance to become possessed of his friend's coat, and when subsequent events are taken into consideration this little accident must be set down as a wonderful exposition of the way in which fortune favors her votaries, since Rex had both side pockets of that same garment actually stuffed with precious gems, just as a turkey might be puffed out at Christmas tide.

Fate was not yet done buffeting young Hastings about, but had another experience in store for him that would prove as novel in its way as anything he could remember.

Again the blacks swarmed forward, this time in greater numbers than before. It was positively necessary that the fugitives turn at bay and drive them away.

Once more came the quick percussion of revolver shots, punctuating the hideous clamor that made night dreadful. Each discharge meant a result, for these men were hardly the ones to throw away their ammunition when life and death hung in the scales.

They drove the enemy back, though several of the warriors, fearlessly intercepting the fugitives, had to be met in personal encounter before the way was cleared.

Red Eric had several wounds, Bludsoe came within an ace of being spitted upon an assegai and Lord Bruno found a piece chipped from his arm by the terrible flight of the same species of weapon. They were all present when the desperate rush was resumed. Pellmell they went over the ground, their only hope being to reach the horses and once mounted leave the enraged blacks in the lurch.

Rex was in the rear, but close up, when he caught his foot in some obstacle and fell heavily to the ground. After that all was a blank to him for some time.

When he recovered consciousness, it puzzled the young adventurer to guess where he could be. Darkness surrounded him, and he seemed paralyzed, since upon trying to move hand or foot, he could not.

Sounds rang in his ears, sounds that might have done credit to the imps of the lower regions; and indeed, Rex began to seriously question whether he might not have been transported to the Land of Shades, when the whole truth dawned upon him, and he realized he must be a prisoner of the fierce Zambodi.

It was a position to arouse apprehension.

Though the blacks were not cannibals, their reputation for cruelty toward those whom the fortune of war threw into their power, was well known. Fiends could not invent more devilish methods of torture than those devised by the witch-doctors, whose business it was to appease the anger of the terrible black god whose favor they sought, the demon whose voice rolled in the thunder peals, and the lightning of whose eye shot down from the clouds when he was angry.

Hastings would need all his grit to meet the experience in store for him. With true Anglo-Saxon valor, his thoughts began to grapple with the subject of escape, for he was one of the "never say die" kind of men.

The sounds around his place of confinement did not alleviate his anticipations of evil. So far as he could make out they were wails of mourning, doubtless over the bodies of the slain warriors, and awful shouts for immediate vengeance upon the prisoner.

Hastings worked with frantic eagerness, having discovered that the withes with which his arms were bound had not been secured in a positive manner, and his energy in this quarter speedily met with its reward, since he found a way to free his hands.

A hasty search of his person failed to reveal the presence of a knife that would have been of inestimable value just now.

Apparently his captors had searched his pockets when he fell into their power. Rex might feel grateful they had not carried their investigations still further, and sought to discover where his heart lay. It was something of a fad among the fierce Matabele and their allies to tear the still beating fountain of life from the breast of a fallen foeman, and thrust it in his face as he died.

As a result of Hastings' quick search, all he found was a small pocket match safe, which had escaped the marauder's hand. Even this suggested a desperate idea in his fertile brain, which he lost not a second in attempting. When a man is drowning he will catch most eagerly at a straw, which perhaps under such conditions is magnified to the dimensions of a goodly log.

It were worth while to note the calm deliberation with which the American in durance vile set to work.

He sat up, bracing his back against the wall of the rude lodge, and then igniting one of the matches, deliberately applied the flame to the withes that secured his limbs.

A cord would have given way at once, but the willow-like band was green, and he had to use three matches before it began to weaken.

Rex had just started the fourth, which he believed would finish the business, when he heard some one push aside the suspended mat made of braided grass that served as a door.

Startled, he looked up, at the same instant by a muscular coup de grace bursting his limbs from their lashings, so that he found himself in a condition to spring upon the intruder and battle for his life; but he did not move hand or foot, for by the light of the match he still held he discovered that the person who had entered the lodge was no other than the fair barbarian goddess whose song had enchanted him once before.

CHAPTER XVIII.

WALKULLA, THE MAN-OF-WAR.

The match went out.

Darkness again held sway in that prison lodge in the heart of the Zambodi kraal. The shouts and cries of mourning seemed to partially die away about this time, perhaps to gain additional volume when the chorus swelled again later on.

Rex had managed to pull himself together, which to be sure required quite an effort, for he had nerved himself to meet the desperate rush of a savage foeman, and on the contrary discovered his visitor to be the one person in all the village whom he would if given a choice have selected as his vis-a-vis.

He had seen the startled look upon her face as she beheld his singular action in burning the bands that secured his limbs. Hardly had the gloom again shrouded the interior of the hut than he heard a low voice that said:

"Sir, do not be alarmed—I have come here as your friend."

"Well," returned the American quickly, "it looks as though I needed a friend just now, and I thank you for coming, miss."

She gained new confidence, and Rex, having risen, presently felt her hand on his arm. Of course the touch thrilled him as no other had ever done before. Some of these things are foregone conclusions, and the reader would be dense indeed who could not see the way the finger of destiny pointed when the first mention was made of this mysterious beautiful oracle, whose presence among the tribe of Zambodi drew Rex Hastings back to face again the dangers that lurked among the kopjes near the hidden temple where the three-headed god held sway, lo, these many centuries past.

"Who are you, and why have you returned again after once escaping from this place?" she asked him, for knowing the fanatic hatred which these blacks conceived for the whites of the border, it was very natural she should be puzzled to account for his suicidal policy.

It was a strange place for an interview, with the impis howling outside and demanding his immediate death, and Rex appreciated the novel situation.

"My name is Rex Hastings. I had come here in search of a treasure the secret of which was given me as a legacy. That was when I first saw you. Since then I have returned with a friend whose purpose in visiting this hostile region was to meet you, for he seemed to have some notion that you belonged to him — at least that was what I gathered from his talk," with some confusion, not knowing how she would take it.

"Tell me his name," she flashed, and when he mentioned it she uttered a cry of mingled surprise and dismay.

"It is not strange to you, then?" he asked.

"No, but this is the man whom I was warned against by my father."

"Then he warned you falsely, for a nobler comrade and brother than Lord Bruno never struck Johannesburg. But where is this man you call your father—surely not here?"

"Ah! he did live here, but he has gone to the other world. Once he was a prophet among this superstitious people, ruling them through his knowledge of magic. But he died, and left me alone. I had learned to practice his wizard tricks, and they believe his spirit lives in me. You have seen them prostrate before me. Yes, I am looked upon as a god, an oracle because I have brought men from the verge of death back to life by the use of simple remedies when the witch doctors gave them up for hopeless. I go and I come at will, having my face veiled, and no one dares to touch me. I have yearned for freedom, longed to see my kindred again, and of late my mind has been wholly taken up with plans for escape."

It may be readily understood that Rex listened to her brief story with the keenest interest.

Events seemed shaping themselves in a manner little short of magical, and when fortune takes charge of the helm it is only folly for any human to express a desire to steer the craft of the argonaut.

"Then if the chance offers you will go with us?" he asked, eagerly, just as if he had a sturdy army of colonists and raiders of the dashing Jameson type waiting close by, when the chances were his little group of friends had either been slain by the assegais of the blacks or else driven out of the neighborhood.

"Gladly, sir. This life has become too decidedly monotonous. I shall die if I do not soon see human beings other than rude savages, even if they do treat me as a god. Besides—there is another reason why I must escape—but it does not matter now. We must consider how you are to get out of this death trap."

"And you also!" he added, quickly.

"Do not think of me at present, since I am not in deadly peril. If the chance comes I will seize it; but you must go. First of all you shall become one of them."

"Meaning that the leopard should change his spots—that is a difficult task, I fear."

"Perhaps not so serious as it would seem. At least I have here the means of coloring your face and hands, so that at a glance you might not attract attention. Then here are other things if you care to use them, that will assist the deception. I will wait just outside in the shadow of the lodge, where you can join me. They believe you tied so securely that no guards have been posted. Lose no time, sir, for if ever you had need of haste it is now."

How direct to the point she spoke. Rex could not but notice it, even under the extraordinary circumstances surrounding the case.

He was compelled to work in the dark, but when life is the stake for which he plays, a man is capable of astonishing things, and in a very brief space of time the argonaut had transformed himself into a creditable warrior of the Zambodi tribe, though his rather heterogeneous costume would hardly have borne a close examination.

This done Rex was ready to make his debut in the ridiculous character he had assumed, although were the issues of the campaign less grave he might have felt some delicacy about appearing before that queenly girl in such unbecoming undress; for while retaining his trousers and shoes he had stripped to the waist, and smeared himself as best he could with the greasy compound she left him, so that taken in all he must have presented a formidable appearance after donning the cape of plumes and necklet of teeth, together with the tails of animals dangling from his waist to his feet.

Thus arrayed Hastings made for the exist of the prison lodge, which the girl had so arranged upon her departure as to give him a small amount of light.

Upon emerging, his first act was to sweep a glance around. It could not reassure him to any extent. He saw scores of these cone shaped lodges on every hand crowded very close together, and between them moving figures, each one of which he knew to be an enemy.

Beyond these he remembered lay the stockade of the kraal, and then—the wilderness. Really, a man must possess a stout heart who dared dream of escape when environed by such discouraging conditions.

He went even further and entertained the notion not only of escaping himself but of taking the fair barbarian with him. What is impossible to a spirit of that calibre?

As Hastings turned the corner of the lodge, he reached that side away from the nearest fire. Here the shadows lay thickest, and here he was to look for his fair benefactress. That she did not immediately appear he laid to his ferocious make-up as a full-fledged warrior of the Zambodi, and desiring to reassure her he said aloud:

"I am ready!"

Then a figure, coming from he knew not where, appeared at his side, and touched his arm. She was dressed in black, and with a veil over her wondrous face appeared like a phantom, whereas in white he had deemed her an angel.

A sense of his remarkable appearance almost overwhelmed Rex, and he mentally thanked the friendly shadows that in a great measure concealed his savage garb. He felt more foolish than at any time in the whole course of his life.

However, a man can undergo varied experiences and still live to tell the tale, and by degrees he became, in a measure at least, accustomed to the peculiar role fate had marked out for him.

The girl made no comment—possibly because she was quite accustomed to the sight of Zulu and Matabele and Zambodi warriors in all their weird toggery, since she must have spent years among them.

"We must lose no time, sir—you can hear those savage shouts rising higher all the while. That comes from the widows of the warriors lately slain by your friends. They are singing your death song," she said.

"Come, that is pleasant," remarked Rex, as the chant reached such a ferocious pitch as to send a shudder over him.

"Presently, when they have succeeded in working themselves up to a pitch of demoniac fury, a rush will be made for the prison lodge, with the intention of dragging you out and tearing you to pieces."

"Regular Amazons, I guess; which makes me feel doubly under obligations to you, my good friend. If you will lead the way I shall follow close behind."

"You have the weapons I left—we must hope and pray there will be no occasion to use them; but remember, it is your life that is at stake."

"There's small danger of my forgetting that," answered Hastings, as he moved away just a few steps behind her.

He grasped in his hand an assegai, but the weapon did not give him half the pleasure that sprang from the possession of his own revolver, hidden under the ring of cat-tails around his waist, though how she had managed to secure this treasure was a mystery that puzzled him greatly.

In and out among the lodges they passed, without attracting attention, thanks to the amazing disguise of Rex.

He could see men and women give way before his guide, shrinking back as they caught sight of her sombre garb and in secret Hastings chuckled to think what a great thing it was to have a goddess for a guardian, whose presence caused many to throw themselves prostrate, and thus kept curious eyes from too searching a survey of his person.

The girl while heading for the gates of the kraal, was wise enough to avoid as far as possible any piles of burning wood, which fact Rex could not but note with exceeding pleasure.

His attention was directed toward a group of females indulging in a series of contortions that would have put the best warrior to the blush, all the while shrieking as they tore their hair, in the utter abandonment of grief and unholy rage.

This was not a very pleasing sight for Rex to gaze upon, realizing as he did that these frantic souls were the widows who longed to avenge their loss by tearing him limb from limb.

On the whole he was quite satisfied to leave these warm friends in the lurch, since their interests in his welfare was decidedly too personal.

Thus moving along they drew near the gate of the stockade. Rex remembered how he had seen the river of dancing blacks come pouring forth like a living stream, as they advanced in obedience to the tom-tom signal that called them to the war dance.

Once outside the gate the chances of discovery would be considerably lessened, although he was puzzled to know how their ultimate escape might be effected.

Perhaps she meant to secrete him in the depth of some lonely cavern until the hunt had been given up, when they might arrange to depart together.

Her presence was an incentive to him and he was ready to follow her lead without a question, no matter through what danger she might take him.

There were times when he almost rubbed elbows with stalwart warriors in his passage, and more than once guttural words were spoken, doubtless addressed to him, but he only returned a shake of the head and strode onward, for the language of the Zambodi was worse than Greek to him.

All seemed going well.

The gates were at hand, and open, for warriors came and went, since the advent of the white argonauts had dispelled sleep within the kraal for this night at least.

It was just at this juncture Rex awakened to the fact that trouble lay in store for him. His attention was first directed to the actions of his girl guide, whom he saw turn her head several times, as though peering through her veil toward that side of the kraal nearest the foot of the hill.

It was a Zambodi, in full war dress, though he carried no rhinocerous hide shield. Something in the dancing plumes told Rex he had seen him before, and then he remembered that among the dancers had been one more agile than all the rest, whom Jim Bludsoe marked as the head war chief of the tribe.

What caused him to act in this manner?

Were his suspicions aroused by something lacking in the walk of the disguised paleface?

Upon looking more closely Rex noticed that as yet the ferocious war chief seemed to pay but very little attention to him. His eyes were glued upon the gliding figure of the fair god.

Then light broke in upon his mind, and he began to grasp the true inwardness of the situation.

This great warrior, who had doubtless gained his position through his prowess in the chase, and in time of battle, had dared to presume so far as to fall in love with the beautiful being whom his tribe had set up as a thing to be worshipped.

At the bare thought Rex felt his blood boil within him. Perhaps the time that had elapsed since his first meeting with this fair maid of the wilderness had been exceedingly brief, but it was not jealousy that sprang to arms so much as the sense of repulsion at the bare thought of one so lovely being wooed by a savage.

He gripped his assegai more fiercely and gritted his teeth in a significant way that boded no good towards the war chief should they come to blows in the near future

"I'll keep an eye on you, my hearty, and if you show your hand look out for squalls," was what he muttered.

Thus they passed through the gates.

Rex breathed freer when this occurred, for it was a relief to find himself beyond the limit of those everlasting conical lodges forming streets and lanes that were crowded with excited throngs of the Zambodi.

He was keeping watch and ward upon the war chief, and noticed that Walkulla had moved closer to the girl.

Evidently the stalwart Zambodi had also discovered his presence, and begun to suspect he had a rival in the field—at least Rex saw him glance towards him several times, and once the war chief made an imperious gesture which being interpreted might mean that he was to betake himself off without delay.

The fact that the unknown brave did not appear to notice his mute command seemed to further enrage the chief.

A climax was inevitable.

Beyond them lay the remains of a fire, the ashes still throwing out a dull red glow, and her course promised to take them close by these glowing coals.

As if making up his mind to bring matters to a focus, Walkulla hastened his steps.

So did Rex.

Thus the three came together just beside the smouldering coals of the late council-fire.

If You Have These Symptoms

Send For My Book.

If you want to feel better.
If you want more strength.
If you lack ambition.
If you can't do things like you used to.
If you lack confidence in yourself.
If your nerve—your courage—is leaving you.
If you lack, vim, vigor, vitality.
If something is eating away your constitution write to me for the book you need.

The book tells of my discovery. Tells how after thirty years I found the cause of the symptoms given above—and of many others.

The book tells how by scientific experiment I traced out the causes that bring on chronic diseases. It tells how I perfected my prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

I found invariably that where there was a weakness the inside nerves were weak. Where there was a lack of vitality that the vital nerves lacked power. Where weak organs were found, I always found weak nerves. Not the nerves commonly thought of, but the vital organs' nerves, the inside —the invisible nerves.

This was a revelation.

Then my real success began.

Then I combined ingredients that would strengthen, that would vitalize these nerves. That prescription I called a restorative. It is known the world over now as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. After that I did not fail to cure one case in each hundred. In the extremely difficult cases my failures for five years were one in each forty treated. I found cancer incurable. Cancer is for surgery, not medicine.

Then how to get this prescription to sick ones everywhere was my thought. I must announce it in the public press. But, thought I, will they realize the truth of my discovery—the real power of Dr. Shoop's Restorative? Then a way came to me—like an inspiration. "I will offer it to the sick on trial. Then they will know I am sincere."

I wrote a reliable druggist in each city and village in America. They agreed to co-operate with me. Now by any sick one

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

Can be taken on trial. For a full month I will let you use it entirely at my risk.

Send no money. Just write me for the book you need. When I send it I will tell you of a druggist near by who will permit the month's trial.

Use the Restorative a month. Then decide. If you say to the druggist, "It did not help me," that will relieve you of any expense whatever. He will bill the cost to me.

This is my way of clearing your mind of all doubts as to what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do.

No matter how prejudiced, you cannot dispute this absolute security I offer. You cannot resist an offer like this if you are at all sick.

If you have a weakness, write me. If you can't do things like you used to do them, tell me about it. Write in confidence. As a physician I will tell you a way to help. Get my book now—to-day.

FRUIT CO-OPERATION

ONTARIO FRUIT GROWERS' ASSOCIATION ENDORSES PRINCIPLE.

Practical Working Out of the Co-operative Plan Described by Mr. W. H. Owen, Catawba Island, Ohio—Advantages of the Plan Shown in Twelve Years' Working—Ontario in This Matter Far Behind Several American States.

The principle of co-operation among fruit growers, which has been strongly advocated during the last two years by W. A. MacKinnon of the Fruit Division, Ottawa, received enthusiastic endorsation at the recent annual meeting of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association at Leamington. The address of the president, the report of the secretary and all the most interesting and instructive papers dealt with the question of co-operation.

A typical example of the practical working out of the co-operative plan was described by Mr. W. H. Owen, Catawba Island, Ohio, who is one of the recognized leaders in the movement across the line. He is manager of a co-operative fruit growers' union which does business in a very large way. The Catawba Association confines its attention mostly to peaches, though pears and grapes are also handled. The membership is thirty-four, controlling about one thousand peach trees. The growers all live within seven and a half miles of the large central packing depot, where the grading is done under the manager's supervision. The growers do their own picking, and bring in from three to five thousand bushels of peaches daily. The fruit begins to arrive at the central depot by two o'clock p.m. and packing operations frequently continue all night. Each grower is duly credited with the amount of fruit of each grade which he contributes to the total amount, and he is paid in accordance, as soon as sales are made. Under the business-like system adopted it is possible to make most of the sales direct from the warehouse. Free use of the telegraph, telephone and mail service is made in collecting and disseminating information as to the quantity of each variety and grade available. In this way the fruit is disposed of practically as soon as produced. There is no refrigerator service at the packing house, but refrigerator cars are supplied by the railways, and the fruit is put into them as soon as possible. The cost of carrying on the business is about seventeen to nineteen cents per bushel of peaches, including cost of packages and transportation, as well as administrative expenses of the association.

Among the advantages of the plan which have become apparent during the twelve years that the association has been in existence are: (1.) It ensures better prices for the fruit. (2.) It leaves the grower free to devote his undivided attention to the improvement of production. (3.) It enables buyers to purchase at a central point large quantities of a uniform grade. Thus they can select precisely the sort of fruit to suit various markets. (4.) It gives the members a much stronger position in dealing with commission men, merchants and carrying companies than they could possibly have as individual shippers. (5.) It provides for the proper distribution of fruit, so that one market may not be glutted at the same time that another is left bare of supplies.

This latter point was emphasized by Mr. W. H. Dawson, the Toronto Commission merchant, by a reference to the co-operative system of handling the Texas tomato crop. This is handled by one man stationed at St. Louis, and the system is so thorough that market demoralization is absolutely avoided. The grading is so perfect than a man can order a car of Texas tomatoes by grade and feel perfectly sure of getting just what he orders.

Something has already been done along these lines in Ontario, and we are still far behind California, Ohio, Michigan and other States. One of the most progressive co-operative associations in Canada has its headquarters at Walkerton, in the celebrated Huron apple district. Mr. A. E. Sherrington, the manager, reported that last year the association made its first trial in the co-operative work by forwarding to Manchester, Eng., two cars of Duchess apples, which arrived in good condition. In addition to these three cars of winter apples were packed and sold. This year the association had prospered beyond all expectations. There are now about fifty-five members, with an average of four acres of apples each. Fifteen cars of apples have this year been shipped on the co-operative plan. Not only have the prices been better, but more fruit has been sold than would have been possible under the old system. Even the early varieties of apples were put upon the market in good condition. Just as soon as the Duchess, for instance, were ripe, all co-operators were notified to begin picking at the same time. In this way a car would be started with the fruit within two days of the time the apples were taken from the trees. If we can, said Mr. Sherrington, by this system increase the general returns received from our fruit crop, the producer of poor fruit will almost certainly be led to improve the quality of the output. If he will not do this, he will have to get out of the association.

In the course of the discussion, Mr. MacKinnon said that, in his opinion, no system of co-operation would be complete which did not start at the beginning, and introduce uniform methods in the selection of varieties, in planting and top-grafting, in orchard management, including spraying, and even in the buying of supplies.

THE INTELLIGENCER is printed and published for The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing House (Limited) by CHARLES JAMES BOWELL, of the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, at their Office, No. 403, Front Street, Belleville, Ont.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer Complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation —Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alternative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

Will be Found an Excellent Remedy for sick headache. Carter's Little Liver Pills. Thousands of letters from people who have used them prove this fact. Try them.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED. AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

(Signed),
T. S. McINTEE.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kimloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption.

Much talk, many lies.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

"TASTY TABLET DOSES"

An eminent physician, whose schooling has always been along the line of "strong tonics and bitters" for stomach troubles, now prescribes what he calls tasty tablet doses—Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets.

And he is only one of thousands of the medical profession who are "getting out of the rut" and taking the common-sense view of things, and instead of strong doses are prescribing for stomach troubles and the ills that are akin, this pleasant and never failing treatment. Every day sees the walls of prejudice crumbling, and nature getting the recognition she merits—for nature's cures are surest. Sixty tablets, 35 cents. 16

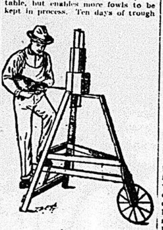
POULTRY FATTENING.

Trough Feeding and Cramming Machine and a Combination of Both.

Abroad, where poultry to many is a luxury, we can readily understand why a fowl must be finished for market with the largest percentage of edible portion compared to bones and offal; furthermore, the texture of the skin, shape, appearance and firmness of flesh to the touch, and entire absence of layers of fat in the dressed bird, and the white, juicy, finely flavored qualities when cooked are the points of excellence. In order to attain this a system of feeding for specific results becomes necessary, says The Orange Judd Farmer. Instead of turning the birds loose to range at will and shoveling out corn to them, the poultry keepers confine them, limiting the exercise to small coops and feed them on material that produces these results.

The method of feeding varies in manner and material in different countries. The most successful and profitable locality perhaps is the Le Mans in Normandy. It is not uncommon for choice specimens to sell for $4 to $5 in the Halles Centrales in Paris, and not over six pounds in weight. Such prices, however, are not obtainable outside of France. The next most profitable district is the counties of Surrey, Sussex and Kent, England, where whole families are engaged in it. They know nothing else, they never have done and their children never will do anything else but fatten poultry for the London market.

The method employed is both trough feeding and the cramming machine, some using one some the other and many a combination of the two. The trough alone is not so profitable, but enables more fowls to be kept in process. Ten days of trough and ten of machine feeding is more profitable, but the best results are obtained by machine feeding from start to finish, care being taken to not overfeed during the first week in gradually getting them up to full feed. These results are secured through the ability of the bird to digest and assimilate two or three times as much feed as it would consume from a trough if left to its own inclination. The food is made semi-liquid and no water or grit is given in addition to it, but it must be ground to a meal and be composed of such grains as will produce these results without sickening or injuring the bird. By this method we are able to add three or more pounds of meat to a four-pound bird in 21 days, at what would be in this country a cost in feed of about 8 cents per bird, and in turn make a profit not only on the weight gained, but an increased price per pound for quality and finish. The perfectly finished bird, having what fat it carries deposited in globules throughout the tissue, is of superior quality.



POULTRY CRAMMING MACHINE.

While the thin chicken will always find sale at some price to the fatters, the greasy ones will go begging for buyers. Canada has for several years been developing rapidly along this line. England naturally looks to her colonies first for what she needs, and they are prompt to act on any suggestions from the mother country, and foster such industries as are susceptible of development on their soil. At Ottawa, Ont., Truro, N.S., and Bondville, Que., the fattening of poultry for the London market is carried on extensively under Government supervision, and they have standing orders for greater quantities than they can possibly supply.

The readers can form some idea as to the quality and appearance of the best dressed poultry produced in England by the following: At the Smithfield (London) table poultry show, held in December, the first prize winners shown and weighed in couples were Buff Orpington pullets, 21 pounds 4 ounces; Dorking cockerels, 20 pounds 8 ounces; farmyard cockerels, 23 lbs. 12 oz.; farmyard pullets, 17 pounds 10 ounces; Pekin ducks, 15 pounds 3 ounces; turkey cocks, 59 pounds 3 ounces, and turkey hens; 49 pounds 10 ounces. There is nothing in the above that we cannot duplicate and even excel in weight and quality. We have only to adapt the necessary methods.

Beets Displace Sheep.

A report from Colorado says that there is not more than 40 per cent. of the usual number of sheep on feed in the northern part of that state this year, the extremely dry weather of last year and the high price of grain and hay having kept many ranchers from feeding. The increased demand for sugar beets and the amount of land which has and will be devoted to this industry will encroach on the land heretofore given to the raising of alfalfa. For this reason few sheep will be seen on the range in the future.

Broiling.

When broiling fish, flour it before putting into the wire broiler. It will prevent the skin from sticking. If the meat or fish to be broiled is thick and requires more time than ordinary sized steak lay over it a baking pan to keep in the heat.

EVENING COSTUMES.

Gowns of Black Tulle—Vogue of Chenille and Accordion Plaiting.

Evening gowns of black tulle and chiffon are considered very smart. These are trimmed with black velvet ribbon or tiny ruchings of lustrous silk. Medallions of black velvet and chantilly lace are also very smart. The hair, being dressed low, requires less ornament than formerly, and when there is ornamentation it takes the form of jeweled pins or combs.

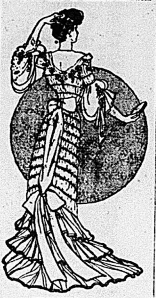
Chenille tassels and chenille fringe are much used in combination with lace. White chiffon combined with jeweled lace is another feature of the moment, and tiny gold tassels brighten up otherwise somber gowns of black.



CREPE DE CHINE GOWN.

A beautiful robe a princesse for the bride's mother at a coming wedding of importance is of pansy colored velvet with a black and gold galloon trimming on either side of a very fine point d'alencon lace vest, which is further beautified by being studded with a design of finely wrought gold. The gown hangs in graceful folds to the ground, and at the feet appears a Greek trimming of gold galloon. Some ruches of old d'alencon form a fitting finish to the sleeves, which are of fairly voluminous proportions. To complete this exquisite toilette de reception is a pale heliotrope beaver hat, its only trimming being a long, sweeping plume which nearly touches the shoulder. A bouquet of parma violets and La France roses will accompany this chic costume.

The picture shows a crepe de chine evening gown made with gaugings.

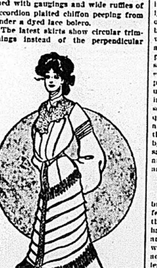
JUDIC CHOLLET.

FASHION HINTS.

Circular Trimmings Are Once More Coming Into Vogue.

One of the daintiest frocks seen recently was of royal blue chiffon trimmed with gaugings and wide ruffles of accordion plaited chiffon peeping from under a dyed lace bolero.

The latest skirts show circular trimmings instead of the perpendicular lines we have become so used to. Fringe plays as important a part in the trimming of the skirt as of the waist.



A SMART SKIRT.

The three piece costume is among the smartest conceits of fashion. This consists of a dress trimmed with fringe or dyed lace and a cape with long chiffon or fur stole ends of the same material as the dress and trimmed with the same dyed lace.

Three-quarter coats of moleskin are lined with cream satin and have fluffy jabots of creamy lace. The tiny skins are so joined together as to produce a plaided effect.

On the whole, fashions are plainer than heretofore, but the materials are more voluminous and more costly.

IN THE DAIRY

A few years ago Professor William Roentgen of the University of Amsterdam became famous the world over by discovering the X rays. Since that wonderful discovery the Roentgen machine has been brought to the aid of various scientific investigations and has proved of incalculable benefit in modern scientific surgery. It now seems probable that the dairy interests are to be benefited through the application of X rays to milk for the purpose of sterilizing. It is claimed the experiment has been tried with success and that the power of the X rays to kill bacteria is remarkable. The time may come when the sterilizing vats now commonly used in creameries will be displaced by Roentgen machines, and every egg packing establishment will have one or more of these machines to "candle" the eggs. When the kerosene lamp displaced the candle for testing eggs, it was considered a vast improvement, and when the modern sixteen candle Edison light was installed it was considered a great leap forward, but if the X rays can be successfully applied to egg testing it may make electric lights look sick. Whole cases of eggs could be exposed to the machine without removing the contents, as quarter inch wood and strawboard fillers could be easily penetrated with the rays of light from the Roentgen machine.—Creamery Journal.

To Determine When Cream Is Ripe.

The following is an excellent test for determining when cream is sufficiently ripe for churning: Litmus paper turns red when exposed to any substance that is in the least degree acid and will show a blue color if the substance is alkaline. It will cost but a trifle and can be obtained of any druggist. Simply immerse the end of a slip of litmus paper in a sample of the cream, and if on its withdrawal the color changes to a bright red then the cream is sufficiently ripe for churning, but otherwise it is not ready.—Dairy and Creamery.

Temperature For Cream.

Cream should be ripened at a temperature of 70 to 85 degrees F., owing to the length of time in ripening and the amount of acidity when started. The texture of the butter depends upon the changes of temperature brought about during the ripening process. To get good, firm texture in butter it is necessary that the cream be subjected to a temperature below 50 degrees F. for several hours some time during the ripening period. Colorado butter makers differ as to the best time to hold cream at this low temperature. Some hold that it should be cooled immediately after separation to below 50 degrees F. and held at this temperature. Others claim that the best plan is to hold the cream at a temperature favorable for the growth of lactic acid germs—75 to 80 degrees F.—until the cream contains the required amount of acidity for churning and then cool to below 50 degrees F. and hold until ready to be churned.

Salt In Butter.

Notwithstanding that good authorities in the dairy claim that salt in butter is a preservative and while it is true that salt is to some extent an antiseptic, it has no appreciable effect as a preservative in the quantity in which it is used in butter. It serves principally as flavoring material. The amount of salt, therefore, to be used in salting butter depends upon the taste of those who are to eat it. If that taste can be ascertained, as it can in the case of private customers or as regards ourselves, the problem of salting can be easily settled. About an ounce to a pound of butter is the quantity of salt usually added to butter that is to go into the general market. However, some butter is salted in double that quantity, but such butter is usually for a special trade. A vast deal of butter that is made on our farms is injured by poor salt. Nothing but the purest salt should be used in dairy products, and the purity of salt can be readily ascertained.

Feeding a Bull.

R. W. Clark of Auburn, Ala., says a bull that fattens easily should not be fed refuse roughage, as seems to be the common practice, but he should have food of the best quality in amounts suitable to his condition, which is determined by his flesh and activity. His food should be more or less succulent and fairly nitrogenous. These two qualities in the food, with plenty of exercise, will very materially reduce the number of slow serving, impotent bulls. Mr. Clark believes the question to be one wholly of food and care, which should vary with different animals.

Take Care of the Calves.

Take as good care of the calves as you do of their dams, for they form the nursery of the dairy. A poor, pot bellied calf raised on slop in a small, bare inclosure, with green pasturage just out of reach, is enough to make an honest dairyman weep, and yet how many such do we see! Is it any wonder that the land is full of "common" cows? They would be uncommon ones indeed if they could evolve from such infancy into robust, profitable animals.

Increasing Value of Feed.

When the farmer produces the best quality of coarse fodders, such as clover, corn fodder, oats, hay and prairie hay, it will not be necessary to feed as large an amount of grain as when poor fodders are used. By good cultivation, the use of manures, selection of seed, cutting at the right time and properly protecting fodders from bleaching and leaching it is possible to increase their feeding value 30 per cent.

SEVEN SUTHERLAND SISTERS HAIR GROWER

SEVEN SISTERS WITH THE LONGEST AND MOST BEAUTIFUL HAIR IN THE WORLD, LIVING PROOFS OF ITS MERITS

The Great Hair Tonic is a Positive and Thorough Antiseptic

and will quickly eradicate all traces of scalp bacteria, which is the cause of hair falling, dandruff and baldness. NO SCALP CAN BE HEALTHY AND NO HAIR CAN BE BEAUTIFUL WHEN CONTAMINATED WITH THESE DISEASE-BREEDING CREATURES. They undermine the hair and devour all the nutriment or life-sap of the scalp, without which the scalp dries up and peels off, forming dandruff and causing the loss of hair. SEVEN SUTHERLAND SISTERS HAIR GROWER AND SCALP CLEANER ARE THE ONLY REMEDIES IN THE WORLD THAT WILL DESTROY THESE GERMS. They penetrate the scalp thoroughly, carrying with them all the necessary properties to quickly regenerate all the impoverished parts. They rebuild the lost tissues of the scalp and renew the growth of the hair in every case. A few applications will make the hair fairly sparkle with new life and vigor. They make healthy hair grow twice to three times as fast as it does normally.

Scalp Microbe magnified 9,000 diameters.

BOWSER WRITES A PLAY

He Imparts the Plot to His Wife, but Does Not Like Her Suggestions, Which He Thinks Are a Bit Sarcastic

[Copyright, 1903, by C. B. Lewis.]

INSTEAD of sitting down to his evening paper and cigar in placid enjoyment, Mr. Bowser was nervous and uneasy, and now and then he looked at Mrs. Bowser in a furtive, inquiring way. She knew that he had something on his mind, but she asked no questions, and dinner had been over a full hour when at last, after walking up and down the room for ten minutes, he said:

"I expect you'll sneer and ridicule, as usual, but I am writing a play for a friend of mine and should like to talk with you a little about the plot."

"I shall be more than willing to talk," she replied as she repressed her astonishment with an effort. "Your friend is an actor, I take it?"

"He's going to be. He's been reading up for the last six months."

"What do you mean by reading up?"

"Why, he's been reading books which tell a person how to become an actor. He's also bought a wig and a sword. If he gets the right sort of play, he's bound to be another Edwin Booth in time."

"I see. And you have promised to write him the right sort of play. That's kind of you. Have you got a plot to match the wig and sword?"

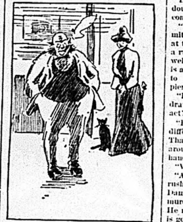
Mr. Bowser didn't exactly like her tone, but after a glance at her he passed it by and replied:

"I think I have struck it the first time, though some little changes may be necessary. I will tell you the plot as I have outlined it. The scene is laid in Rome in the year 1125. The hero is named Kybiffo. He is a young man who has dared to aspire to the hand of a princess, and the emperor has ordered him out of the country. He refuses to go. He not only refuses, but he asserts that he will remain and marry the Princess Dogolsky. That's where the first act opens."

"Does he put on his wig and draw his sword as he refuses to go?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"He don't, but I can put that in. How do you like the names?"

"Why, Kybiffo sounds very romantic, and Dogolsky is something new and ought to make a hit. When Kybiffo is in a hurry to speak to her he can abbreviate her name to Dog, and on her part she can shorten his to Ky or Ky-Ky."



SHE KNEW THAT HE HAD SOMETHING ON HIS MIND.

"Have you started into the funny business already?" asked Mr. Bowser as the red began to show in his face.

"Of course not. How many other characters have you?"

"Well, there's the emperor, the empress, twelve guards, two executioners, three lion keepers, four ladies of the court, a hunchback and a fellow named Damito. He is also in love with the princess, and the emperor favors his suit. I've got to get rid of Damito somewhere in the third act, but I have not settled on just how to do it. Would it look stagy to have him hurled from the edge of a precipice?"

"Who would do the hurling?"

"I thought of introducing a man from Chicago, a fellow who had suddenly gone crazy and was hankering for gore."

"I'm afraid it would look rather stilted. If you are looking for a novelty why don't you have him caught in a cheese press and squeezed to death?"

"Woman, don't trifle with me!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he started up with a glint in his eye.

"But I am not. In writing a play you want to get away from old lines. They have been hurling men and women from precipices for the last hundred years. You have simply to get him into the cheese press in a natural manner. He can take it for a telephone box or a bathtub. However, we can let that go tonight. After Kybiffo refuses to leave Rome what happens?"

"And does he overcome the twelve?"

"He does and leaves every one dead on the stage. I've been thinking that perhaps I had too many dead men lying around at once. Would you reduce the number?"

"I think I should," mused Mrs. Bowser, with her chin on her hand. "It seems to me that I would let at least two get away to go back to their wives and children. I'd be satisfied with ten dead men at once. Does your man Kybiffo stay right there in the slaughter house or go somewhere else to wipe the blood from his sword and rearrange his wig?"

"By thunder, woman, but don't you start in to guy me!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he stood up and towered over her. "I was a fool to expect any help from you, but I won't stand"—

"I had no thought of guying you. Your hero must make some decided move after the ferocious conflict, and I was wondering what it was to be. He shouldn't stay and be seized by a fresh guard."

"He don't stay, of course. The princess, who has seen all from an open window, rushes in and beseeches him to fly from her father's vengeance, and he flies—that is, he consents to go to the house of a man named Bogstoff and wait until there is a chance to bear his ladylove away. He goes just as a new guard of thirty men rush in with orders to kill him on the spot. That's the end of the first act."

"What's the climax?"

"Why, he flies in one direction and the princess in another."

"Doesn't he fall over a chair and she over a sofa?"

"Is that meant for sarcasm?" asked Mr. Bowser as a dangerous light shone in his eyes.

"Of course not. You must have a climax—something to take the breath away, you know, and put the appetite on edge for the next act. If you don't have any falling over chairs or bumping against doors, the end will be rather tame. Where does the second act open?"

"In the house of Bogstoff. Kybiffo is there, and Bogstoff's daughter makes love to him and tries to cut the princess out. She uses a thousand little acts to cajole him, but he turns her down."

"Does he have on his wig and sword at the time?"

"I—I dunno. Should he have them on?"

"By all means. No actor can be a hero without a sword and wig. What does Boggy's daughter do when he refuses her his hand?"

"His name is Bogstoff, madam, and I would thank you to remember it," stiffly replied Mr. Bowser.

"Well, Bogstoff, then. I like the names of your characters as affording excellent opportunities for abbreviation. Kybiffo can be called Ky, Damito can be called Dam, Dogolsky can be called Dog, Bogstoff can be called Boggy, and so on and so on. It was real cute in you to think of such names. Well, what follows?"

"The scheming girl, whom I have not yet named, but shall probably call Hellino"—

"The scheming girl threatens to commit suicide, and when Kybiffo smiles at the idea she starts for the door with a rush. Damito, who knows her father well and wants to borrow $50 in cash, is about to enter, and she is just in time to fall upon his sword and have it pierce her heart."

"How came he to have his sword drawn and ready to do the piercing act?"

"How came he? It don't make any difference to the audience as I can see. That was a time when everybody went around with a drawn sword in his hand, you know."

"Well?"

"As Hellino lies dead her father rushes in, and here is a great point. Damito at once accuses Kybiffo of her murder, and the father believes him. He rushes for his sword, and while he is gone the two rivals taunt each other and begin to fight. When old Bogstoff returns he takes a hand in, and our hero would have been done for by the two but for the princess suddenly rushing in and using her dagger to even things up."

"But how does she happen to appear at such a critical moment?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"Because I make her."

"Oh, I see! And does she kill any one with her jewel hilted dagger?"

"She kills old Bogstoff, while her lover wounds Damito."

"Very good—very good! And then I suppose you have the wounded Damito conveyed outdoors and laid on the street car track so as to make it appear that he has been struck by a car?"

"I have nothing of the kind, madam. On the contrary, I have the princess take him to her house to nurse until he is well again. That's my second great point. Her action makes Kybiffo insanely jealous, and he goes to live in a cave in the mountains. He declares that he will give her up, but"—

"But he lives on roots and barks and cannot efface her memory from his heart," finished Mrs. Bowser.

"Yes, that's about the way of it," sheepishly replied Mr. Bowser, who was rapidly losing confidence in his powers as a dramatist.

"And what else?"

"I—I haven't got any further. How do you like the outline?"

Mrs. Bowser clasped her hands and stared into vacancy for a moment. Then she broke forth into hearty laughter. She couldn't have helped it if there had been a dagger at her throat.

"Madam, what's this?" shouted Mr. Bowser as he sprang up.

She tried to answer, but she couldn't. She went into hysterics and laughed by turns, and after surveying her for three or four minutes he realized that he had been humiliated. He turned and kicked over two chairs and walked down the hall and donned his hat and overcoat. Then he went out and banged the front door behind him and wandered through the darkness of the streets. His dignity had suffered, and he was speechless as he entered the house several hours later and quietly went to his room.

ARIZONA KICKLETS

[Copyright, 1903, by C. B. Lewis.]

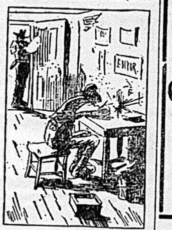
WHEN Jim Carew started for Montana last spring we offered to bet him five to one that he would be hung inside of three months. He ought to have taken the bet, as he lasted ten days over that time.

We would again call the attention of the theatrical people to the fact that the owner of the Opera House here (who is ourself) is also mayor (who is ourself) of the town and has the granting or refusal of licenses. The editor of the Kicker (who is ourself) would, therefore, suggest a liberal display of fraternal courtesy in the matter of leaving complimentary tickets at the office. We do not seek to dictate. We simply throw out a suggestion which is all clear hay and weighs a hundred and fifty pounds to the bale.

We are much obliged to our friends over at Lone Tree and must commend them for their zeal and enthusiasm in our behalf. They did quite right in hanging a man the other day who claimed to be authorized to take subscriptions for the Kicker. Any time a stranger appears in any community in the west and claims to be authorized to take subscriptions for this paper he can be set down as a fraud and treated accordingly. If the boys are put to any extra expense in such cases—digging a grave in clay soil, buying a rope, etc.—they will please forward the bill to us.

While we were over at Pine Hill the other day Steve Watson wanted us to marry him to a girl named Ransom, who has been living in the family of Major Hastings. We knew we couldn't do it as an editor or a postmaster, but we were not so certain in our capacity as mayor. We finally agreed to take the chances on it if Steve and the girl would, and the result was that the couple were made one. We used the regular form allowed by clergymen, but put in a proviso that if Steve ever stopped his subscription to our paper the marriage should be considered null and void.

We respectfully request of those who have a grievance against the editor that they delay calling until his return. Major Henderson came in yesterday to shoot him for an article which appeared two weeks ago, and, although it was explained to him that we were only temporarily in charge and not personally responsible, he shot two bullets through our hat and otherwise unnerved us. We don't want any more such callers. We are a purely agricultural editor from Boston and a man of peace. When our salary has been raised to $30 per week we shall expect to take some chances, but we can't do it on $8.



HE SHOT TWO BULLETS THROUGH OUR HAT.

A letter from an Ohio man to the Kicker asks who is mayor of this town. The editor of the Kicker (who is ourself) would gently reply that we are now filling that honored position for the fifth time by a majority of 730, and filling it a great deal better than it was ever filled before. We have no egotism in our composition, but wish to say in the most childlike and bland manner that we consider ourselves a bigger man than the governor of the territory.

We never bulldoze for advertising or subscriptions, but when an advertiser or subscriber attempts to drop out of sight we want to know his reasons. We want to know wherein we have not pleased and satisfied. We shall start out next week to look up ten or twelve delinquent subscribers and may be out of town a couple of days. Two of them have sent in a defi and may have to be enfiladed out of an earthwork, while three others are prepared to start for the mountains and will probably have to be run down.

Hank Scott, alleged bad man from the Bad Lands, who just escaped the noose the other night, has this to say to the public: "As I stated to the vigilance committee, I struck the wrong town, and instead of trying to play bad man any longer I am going to work. I will put in ten hours a day at any sort of labor for $6 a week, and I trust that I may in time secure the respect and good will of the gentlemen who so kindly refrained from pulling on the other end of the rope. My two guns and my bowie knife are for sale cheap, as I have no further use for them."

The Life of Man.

Thousands of people are suffering for the want of life giving current, which nature intended they should possess. They do not live, they simply exist; in the faces of thousands can be read the story of a wasted life and blighted hopes. Joys and pleasures are unknown to them because their vitality is being sapped away by some disease. Many have sought relief in drugs and patent remedies to relieve their mental and physical sufferings. They are soothed for a day or may be for a week, falsely braced up until the effects of the drugs wears off like the momentary bracing up of whiskey. They sink lower in vitality and with the hope exhausted, lose confidence in themselves and decide to abandon all efforts to recover their power, feeling there is no hope for them All this is caused from a wrecked nervous system or poor digestion, the steam of the system has run down and wants recharging. There is only one thing that will do it and that is electricity. Every nerve in the body is charged by this life giving power and when once lost from over work or other causes has got to be restored before the system works in a healthy state. As we have often said before, don't believe what we say alone, come and get a free treatment to convince yourself. The Gilmour Electric Belt is the only appliance sold to-day which will give the current. A sick person requires to get well. We will show you a list of names of people right here in Belleville who have got cured by the use of this appliance. You can go and see them for yourself, is not that good enough evidence for the truth? You have not got to go to Toronto or any of the other large cities, right here in this city we can refer you to 50. This belt has all the attachments for treating bladder and kidney trouble, varicocele, sexual weakness in any form, rheumatism, neuralgia in the neck and face, sciatica, varicose veins, nervous trouble or paralysis.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

In Peterboro district of the Trent Valley League, a tie exists between Keene and the T.A.S. The secretary of the league has instructed these teams to meet in Norwood on Monday night next to play a sudden death game in order to break the tie. The match will bring together two fast teams.

Queen's hockey team of Kingston will go to New York about the end of February. It is possible a series of matches between Queen's and Cornell, or a picked team of the Inter-Scholastic League may be arranged, to take place at Pittsburg, Pa.

At a meeting of the sub-committee of the O.H.A. yesterday the Burk's Falls club was suspended from the association. In the game on Monday night between Burk's Falls and Bracebridge, Burk's Falls played Robert Morrison, of Guelph. Morrison was also suspended as a professional. Burk's Falls won, but the district was given to Bracebridge, and they will now play home and home games with Midland.

The game on Saturday night between the Tinsmiths will no doubt be the match of the season.

Smith's Falls last night defeated Perth by a score of 7 to 4. This was an intermediate match, and as a result these two teams and Brockville are a tie on the round.

There is a three-cornered tie in the Warkworth Norwood Campbellford district of the T. V. League, those three teams standing even. Norwood has been arranged a bye and Campbellford and Warkworth will play off in Norwood on Friday night.

HIGH PRAISE FOR A FORMER BELLEVILLIAN.

REV. GERALD WILLOUGHBY IS MAKING A NAME FOR HIMSELF IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Rev. W. B. Palmore, D.D., editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, in one of a series of letters which he is writing to his paper from South Africa, has the following item referring to Canada and some of her sons and daughters that many of our readers will be pleased to see:

"Rev. Gerald Willoughby, a son of the Rev. Dr. N. R. Willoughby, of Grimsby, Ont., Canada, now occupies a conspicuous place in the public life of South Africa. He figured gallantly in the great Boer war, and is now a popular preacher and lecturer of the Congregational Church. As president of the Christian Endeavor Union of South Africa, he was lecturing and preaching to great audiences on a tour through the Transvaal and the colony of Natal. His boyhood experience in the great North-West of British America were very similar to those of Ralph Connor. In the large Y.M.C.A. hall of Johannesburg, a great audience was held spellbound for nearly two hours by one of his lectures, in which the point, pathos, wit, and humor of 'Black Rock,' 'Sky Pilot,' 'Man from Glengarry,' and 'Glengarry School Days,' were all combined. Canada sustains in all the civilized world her reputation for splendid speakers. The rolling periods and perorations of Mrs. Douglas and John Potts will live long in the annals and memoirs of Southern Methodism. Canada also leads the world in the war against alcohol. In temperance sentiment she is as far ahead of the United States as we are ahead of the British Isles. Canada not only turned the tide of great battles in the Boer war, but she is also helping in the greater battles of peace. Two of the brightest ladies we met were Canadian teachers in the Transvaal schools."

The Rev. Gerald Willoughby was a former resident here, and the foregoing regarding him will be of interest to his former school-fellows and friends residing in this city, who have expected him to carve out a name for himself somewhere.

The best way to get even is to forget.

WILL PROBABLY FIGHT.

They will reside in Tyendinaga upon their return.

EPWORTH LEAGUERS.

BAY OF QUINTE CONFERENCE MEETING AT CAMPBELLFORD.

The sixth biennial convention of the Bay of Quinte Conference, Epworth League, is now being held in Campbellford. The first meeting was held on Tuesday night, and was attended by a large number of delegates from all parts of the Conference. Preceding the public meeting the Executive Committee, of which Rev. H. B. Kenny, of Millbrook, is chairman, as President of the Conference League, held a meeting. In the general meeting, the devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. B. Greatrix, of Campbellford, after which an address of welcome to the visiting delegates was read by Mrs. G. W. Hammond. Rev. J. J. Rae, of Oshawa, on behalf of the visitors, replied.

The meeting on Wednesday morning opened with devotional exercises, conducted by Rev. H. W. Foley, B.A., B.D., of South Dummer, which were followed by a Bible study on "The Four Gospels and their Writers," conducted by Professor McLaughlin, of Victoria University, Toronto.

The election of the Nominating Committee was followed by the President's address. The representatives of the District Executive then presented their report.

Rev. J. G. Lewis, B.A., of Peterboro, conducted the opening exercises at the afternoon session. The election of officers was held during the afternoon, and a number of valuable addresses given. Among the speakers yesterday were Rev. Dr. Crothers and Mayor Chown, of this city.

MINING IS BOOMING.

SPRING WILL SEE ACTIVITY IN HASTINGS MINERAL PROPERTIES.

It would seem that the mining interests in Hastings had secured a new lease of life from the activity which is being shown. Near Cloyne at the North Star mine a fifty-stamp mill is to be erected. E. J. Cowan, who represents a wealthy Detroit syndicate, has the work in charge. At the old Crescent mine at Malone O. R. Sprague is installing a fifty-stamp outfit in place of the present ten-stamp mill. The tendency is to erect the larger mills, as they are considered to be dividend producers.

GOVERNMENT WILL NOT ACT.

NORTH RENFREW ELECTION NOT TO BE INTERFERED WITH.

Toronto, Feb. 4.—The question raised as to the legality of the North Renfrew election in the Legislature a few days ago, by Mr. M. G. Cameron, M.P.P., has been occupying the Government's attention of late, and they have decided that they will not take advantage of the point raised.

If any further doubt is raised as to the technical right of Mr. Dunlop to occupy his seat, legislation will be introduced, making his return certain.

Evangelistic Services.

The attendance at the Bible reading in the Baptist Church yesterday afternoon almost filled the school room. Mr. Shields gave an address on Ephesians, 1.1-3, taking for his theme "The believers' possessions in Christ." The evening service was largely attended, the church being well filled before the song service had been concluded. The text from which Mr. Shields preached was II Peter, 2-9, in which God stated two things he could do. He knew how to deliver the Godly out of temptation, even though, like Lot, we were in circumstances utterly devoid of moral influences, or even as Noah, the only one trusting Him. God also knew how to reserve the "unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." The sinner out of Christ was condemned, and simply awaiting the execution of the sentence. Mr. Whyte sang several times during the service, and conducted the after meeting, to which a large number remained. The services begin each evening at 7.30 and the Bible readings at 3.30 in the afternoon.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

There will be genuine pleasure in the coming of William Bonelli and Rose Stahl with their tasteful and brilliant production of "A Man of the World" at the Carman Opera House on Tuesday, Feb. 9th. Mr. Bonelli and Miss Stahl are actors and artists of distinguished standing in their profession, and it is said that they have never appeared to such advantage as they do in "A Man of the World." Advices from other cities indicate that the play is nicely staged and the costumes tasteful and beautiful.

German Garrison Relieved By Forces With Two Guns.

Berlin, Feb. 4.—The following cablegram has been received from Swakopmund, German Southwest Africa, from the commander of the German gunboat Habicht:

"The garrison at Windhoek and Okahandja have been relieved by Franke's company with two guns. The relief of Okagandja occurred Jan. 27, Emperor William's birthday, and was without losses.

"On Jan. 28, there occurred a terrific battle between the gallant little German force and the enemy, who numbered thousands. The engagement lasted for six hours and ended with the storming of the main camp of the enemy, situated on Kaiser Wilhelm Mountain. Four Germans were wounded.

"After this defeat the enemy withdrew to the Otjistangati Hills. The enemy devastated all the farms and railroad stations in the Windhoek and Okahandja district, a portion of the Karibb and the barracks of the mountain battery at Johann Albrecht's Heights.

"The losses so far are known to be forty-four settlers, including women and children, killed, and in most cases the bodies were mutilated. The military losses amount to twenty-six and there have been fifty other fatalities.

"It is probable that Gobadis has been beseiged since Jan. 16. The march on Omaruru will begin tomorrow. Col. Luetwein, Governor of German Southwest Africa, is expected here by steamer on Feb. 5. Lieut. Winkler has arrived here with supports from the steamer Ernst Woermann."

MR. REDMOND'S DICTUM

Nothing Short of Home Rule Will Satisfy the Irish.

Irish Leader Tells Liberals They Are Laboring Under a Delusion If They Think An Alternative Scheme For Home Rule Will Win Irish Votes—Must Have Appreciable Advance on Home Rule Road.

London, Feb. 4.—"For the Irish party there is no such thing as an alternative policy to Home Rule," declared John Redmond, the leader of the Irish Parliamentary party in the House of Commons yesterday as he resumed the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne. Mr. Redmond proceeded in a speech of great length to detail the various grievances of Ireland, incidentally informing the Liberals that it was a delusion to suppose they could count on Irish support by promising an alternative policy to Home Rule. Because the Irish obtained a valuable act last year remedying some of the evils of past Government some persons seemed to think that the Irish question was shelved, but no concession could weaken the demand for self-Government. On the contrary, every concession they had obtained or might obtain would be used for the furtherance of the contest for Home Rule. The Irish would rather govern themselves badly than be governed well by another nation.

Land Act a Failure.

Referring to the land question, Mr. Redmond said the failure of last year's act proved that this Parliament had neither time nor capacity to legislate satisfactorily for Ireland. The act must be amended forthwith, alike in the interests of the tenants and the landlords. It would be the duty of the Irish to oppose the Government unless the latter foreshadowed some appreciable advance on the road to Home Rule.

Will Clear Up Doubtful Points.

Mr. Wyndham, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in reply, announced the Government's intention to introduce an act to amend the Irish Land Act, and clearing all the doubtful points.

With reference to Mr. Redmond's demand for Home Rule, Mr. Wyndham said Mr. Redmond's object seemed to be to prove that he was the real head of the third party in the House of Commons, and that it demanded a separate Parliament for Ireland. The Chief Secretary denied that he ever had proposed Irish legislation with the view of giving Home Rule to Ireland, or as a concession for the purpose of changing the views of the Nationalists. He also denied that he had any understanding with the Irish party for any purpose. He had been careful not to delude the Irish by rosy, ambiguous periods, but he would insist that Ireland derive a fair share of the financial resources of the Empire.

Mr. Wyndham did not believe the Irish question would be settled for at least fifty years. Even if Ireland had her own Parliament she could not, in the present state of the money market, find $750,000,000 for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Land Act.

The debate continued until the sitting was suspended at 7.30 p. m., a number of Irish members participating.

At the night session of the House, Joseph Devlin bitterly denounced the Government as "double-faced and hypocritical," and said the only remedy for the Irish grievances was a measure of self-Government.

E. J. Saunderson replied that the greatest difficulty of supporters of Home Rule was explaining their attitude of the last 10 years, during which the Nationalists had shown their loyalty by rejoicing at every British reverse.

Mr. Redmond said the present Government of Ireland was a dismal failure.

What Mr. Blake Wants.

London, Feb. 4.—(C.A.P.)—The Hon. Edward Blake, M.P., speaking in the House of Commons yesterday, said he wanted to see a university in Ireland agreeable to the bulk of the Irish people. Instead of the views held in the Londonderry quarter, home rule did not mean Rome rule. It would remove the differences of religious beliefs, make Ireland united and change the whole front of the national life.

MAGUIRE AND LOUDEN HELD.

Magistrate Demands Bonds For Their Appearance—Assessment Department.

Toronto, Feb. 4.—The announcement of Special Investigator Riddell that he would not close the examination into the Assessment Department until all the evidence had been received in the other branch of the trial before Judge Winchester, the issuance of subpoenas for first witnesses to be brought before Judge Morgan to-morrow, and the selection of A. F. Lobb as the assistant to Mr. Riddell, were new features in the scandal yesterday. The holding for trial of Deputy Returning Officer Maguire and Poll Clerk Louden for irregularities in the third division of the Third Ward, and the preparation to try Cahoon, the Grays and the Giannellis yesterday, were the developments in the police court end of the case yesterday. Samuel Thompson is still protected by the physician certificate, and may escape trial until Monday.

When the counsel for Maguire and Louden suggested that the accused be released on their own bond when held to trial, the court replied very promptly that he would do no such thing, and placed each at $600, or two sureties of $300 each. Alfred and Thomas Maguire signed the bond for the returning officer, and Geo. Briggs and Wm. Hassard for Louden.

EXPRESS OFF THE TRACK.

One Woman Killed and Several Others Probably Fatally Hurt—Many Others With Less Serious Injuries.

Halifax, Feb. 4.—The C. P. R. Montreal express, leaving Halifax at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, met with disaster yesterday one mile from Milford, the second car breaking away and all the other cars going off the track.

The dead: Mrs. John Glassey, Halifax.

The injured: Mr. and Mrs. Neil A. Campbell, slightly injured; they were married in Halifax in the early morning and were on their bridal tour. Miss Ethel Bentley, organist of the Truro Methodist Church, leg broken; E. J. Hudd, body injured; G. W. Marsh of Toronto, a fruit merchant, injured about the head; an Armenian pedlar, probably fatally injured; Mrs. Vance, wife of Conductor Vance, Truro, and Conductor Vance's mother, slightly injured; Mr. Halstead, cut about the head; Mrs. Morrison and child, bound for British Columbia, slightly injured; A. B. Barton, express messenger, St. John, slightly injured; Joseph Frawley, St. John, leg broken; F. A. Bustin, express messenger, St. John, leg broken; Conductor R. D. Duncan, head cut; J. E. Blair, Truro, cut on head; W. H. Hilchey, Stewiacke, cut about face; two Italians, names unknown, one with broken rib, other had scalp wound; T. Appleby, news agent, cut in head and shoulder; P. Kelley, brakeman, cut face, leg injured; G. Bessett, St. John, traveler for Manchester Allison, ribs broken; John Redford, traveler, head cut; James S. McDonald, Halifax Herald reporter, cut head and shoulders; Mrs. Picke, Jeddore, on way to meet husband in Vancouver, injured about limbs; sister-in-law of Dr. Archibald, Musquodoboit; Hutley, traveler for Perfumery Company, London, Eng., cut about face. Conductor Duncan may not recover. Car Porter J. B. Simmons had a miraculous escape. Forty persons were on the train.

All the six cars of a heavy vestibuled train were derailed, went over the bank and are piled in heaps of debris. One of the passenger cars rolled down the embankment, and is half submerged in the river alongside.

The train was in charge of Conductor Robert Duncan, the oldest employe in the Intercolonial service. Relief trains with wrecking crews and corps of doctors were sent from Halifax and Truro, and the injured and dead were brought to the hospitals in this city.

The cause of the wreck is believed to be the spreading of the rails, a result of Tuesday night's severe storm. The engine passed safely over and did not leave the rails.

Driver Killed By Train.

Toronto, Feb. 4.—James Dillon, who lived at 49 St. David street, was killed yesterday by a C. P. R. engine at the foot of Church street. Dillon was a driver for the Elias Rogers Coal Company. While driving his load of coal across the tracks the train ran him down. He and the horse were thrown a considerable distance. The deceased leaves a widow, two sons and a daughter. Coroner Grey opened an inquest last night and adjourned until Friday.

In Moving Peril.

Barrie, Feb. 4.—Alexander McLaughlin, an elderly hardware traveler from Hamilton, while attempting to board the moving North Bay Express, slipped and fell backward. His foot caught and he was dragged on his back almost under the wheels of the following coach for nearly half a mile. When the train was stopped, and he was extricated from his terrible position, it was found that the only injury he had sustained was a slightly sprained ankle.

String Attached to Rifle.

Port Arthur, Feb. 4.—William Snyder, with two companions, was out hunting Tuesday, following a hunter's trail. He inadvertently kicked a string which crossed the trail and was attached to a rifle suspended in a tree at full cock. The rifle was discharged, the bullet entering Snyder's leg. He was carried through the bush to the railway track and brought into Port Arthur Hospital.

Took Strychnine Pills.

Hamilton, Feb. 4.—Arthur Truman, the young son of Arthur Truman, the East King street barber, got hold of a box of strychnine pills yesterday morning, and swallowed three. The doctors at the City Hospital said at a late hour last night that he would not live till morning.

Municipal Ownership.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Secretary Emil W. Ritter of the Referendum League, has informed the City Council that the petition for submission of the following question to a vote of the people were filed yesterday: Immediate municipal ownership of the street car lines; licenses to operate instead of franchises. These questions appeared on the "little ballot" at the April election. Mr. Ritter says the number of names he will file exceeds 100,000.

Ironworkers and C.N.R.

Port Arthur, Feb. 4.—Disagreement exists here between Superintendent Doe of the Barnett and Record Company and the iron workers employed on the C.N.R. elevator. A meeting of the iron workers will be ordered, and if the firm do not grant concessions, a strike will be ordered on the Milwaukee works. Union men here are all out on strike, only the non-union men working.

Kingston Without Cars.

Kingston, Feb. 4.—The deadlock between the citizens of Kingston and the Kingston, Portsmouth and Cataraqui Electric Railway Company has been precipitated sooner than was expected, and the result is that the car service has been discontinued. There is every probability the cars will not start running again until spring.

ARGYLL ON SPENCER.

Says He Is Unjust to the Canadian Preference Given Britain.

London, Feb. 4.—(C. A. P.)—The Duke of Argyll, in a letter to The Times, declares that Lord Spencer is unjust to the colonial preference given the Motherland. Lord Spencer does not understand the necessity felt by a colony to foster its territories. Manufactures were [illegible] in Britain also under a tariff. Canada, New Zealand, Australia were all pressing forward in the lines of the conference of Premiers. Instead of minimizing colonial efforts towards preferential trade within the Empire, "we should acknowledge the hearty brotherhood which in peace and war desire to work with us." The Duke adds: "Booth's five per cent. preference against foreign manufacturers is quite enough to show our good will and withdrawal would not be resented if it was proved that it harmed home interests."

Liberal Unionists Stand.

London, Feb. 4.—(C. A. P.)—The Liberal-Unionists at a meeting of their executive council held here yesterday, decided to maintain their organization. The meeting was called to discuss the situation arising from the publication Jan. 11 of the correspondence between Joseph Chamberlain and the Duke of Devonshire, former Lord President of the Council. Mr. Chamberlain presided and made a speech setting forth the necessity of the existence of the association. Only two members voted against the resolution providing for the maintenance of the association.

Bounty of Wheat.

London, Feb. 4.—(C. A. P.)—The Standard this morning says it understands that the Government and Joseph Chamberlain are considering a suggestion which has been made that instead of a duty on foreign wheat a bounty should be given on wheat grown in Great Britain and the colonies, as a proposal less objectionable than a protective tax.

Duplicity Was Present.

London, Feb. 4.—(C.A.P.)—The Glasgow Herald (Unionist) says the action of the American Government in the Alaska case suggests an amount of duplicity it is not pleasant to impute, either to nations or individuals. It is certain that in any future arbitration, whether the Dominion Government obtains the treaty-making power Sir Wilfrid Laurier sought or not, it will drive such a bargain as will give duplicity no chance.

Foster New Markets.

London, Feb. 4.—(C. A. P.)—At Friday's meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce a resolution will be moved urging the Government to foster by every possible means the systematic creation of new markets by enabling emigrants to be drafted to free homesteads in Canada.

Smart Gone to Paris.

London, Feb. 4.—(C.A.P.)—James A. Smart, Deputy Minister of the Interior, says the prospects for a very large increase of Scottish emigration during the year 1904 are exceedingly promising. Mr. Smart went to Paris yesterday.

Provincial Board of Health.

Toronto, Feb. 4.—The quarterly meeting of the Provincial Board of Health interrupted its routine business yesterday for the purpose of presenting Dr. Bryce with a grandfather's clock. Much regret was expressed on Dr. Bryce's removal to Ottawa. Dr. Hodgetts presented his report, giving a general review of the infectious disease cases dealt with during the past year.

Kidneys and Liver Affected by Colds.

BACKACHE AND PAINS IN THE LEGS THE COMMON SYMPTOMS—CURE COMES WITH THE USE OF

DR. CHASE'S Kidney-Liver-Pills.

Exposure to damp, cold weather is a frequent cause of kidney disease. Sitting in a draught so as to chill the feet and legs is frequently enough to bring on congestion of the liver.

Colds settle on the liver and kidneys as well as the lungs. The results are diseases of the most dreadfully painful and fatal sort.

As yet there has never been discovered a preparation equal to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as a prompt and thorough cure for derangements of the great filtering organs.

Mrs. E. Henthorn, whose husband is of the firm of Marsh & Henthorn, founders and machinists, and who lives at 286 Ann street, Belleville, states: "Some years ago I was taken with a pain across the small of my back, caused no doubt from deranged kidneys, and my system generally was very much run down. I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and I must say I found relief from my troubles at once. They proved thorough and effective in action and soon brought about a complete cure. We have also used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in our family and found them very helpful."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 1 pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

SESSION'S FIRST VOTE

Ontario Government Sustained By Three of a Majority.

The Vote on Mr. Hoyle's Amendment Was 48 to 45, and the Same on Mr. Foy's—Mr. Whitney Calls Mr. M. G. Cameron "A Willing Sacrifice" on His Voting Against the Last Amendment—Address As Amended.

Toronto, Feb. 5.—A majority of three was recorded for the Government in the first vote of the session in the Legislature yesterday. There were no pairs, but two members were away on each side—Cameron of Fort William, and Barber, Government supporters; and Carscallen of Hamilton and Beck of London, Opposition supporters. The vote was 48 to 45.

When this was announced the Government benches led in applause, which was taken up immediately by the Conservatives, amid derisive laughter from the Government.

The first vote was on the amendment of Mr. Hoyle, censuring the Government for calling the House together in advance of the election trials. This being disposed of, Mr. Pense of Kingston, moved an amendment to the amendment of Mr. Foy in the following words:

That all the words after the word "and" in the amendment be struck out and the following be added:

"We also desire to express our pleasure that every electoral district in this province is now represented in this assembly."

Satirical Applause.

Mr. Foy's amendment, which this was calculated to get rid of, was a condemnation of the Government for the long disfranchisement of North Renfrew. When it was read there was satirical applause from the Opposition, which lasted for a minute.

"That's hard on West Huron," came promptly from Mr. Foy, remembering M. G. Cameron's constitutional point that North Renfrew is now without a member.

Mr. Whitney was on his feet, "I understand the debate to close here. There was no intimation of any such a performance as this. I'm sure the member for West Huron will want to speak on the amendment as it puts him in a most peculiar position."

The yeas and nays were again called for, although the Opposition had not intended to ask that the vote be again taken. When it came to Mr. Cameron's turn to rise, the Opposition benches resounded with loud applause.

"A willing sacrifice," shouted, Mr. Whitney.

The Address As Amended.

The amendment was carried by the same vote as before, and the same division was recorded for the original motion. The address to the Lieutenant-Governor reads, as amended:

We, His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honor for the gracious speech which Your Honor has addressed to us, and we also desire to express our pleasure that every electoral district in this province is now represented in the assembly.

Debate Lasted Three Weeks.

Thus ended the debate. It lasted three weeks. The last speech was by W. J. Hanna of West Lambton. It was an exceedingly powerful and well-reasoned disquisition. He spoke for an hour and a half and was attentively listened to. Though he touched on several matters of moment, he made the Soo election and the betrayal of the principle rights by the Premier the main themes for a slashing arraignment of the Government. He charged that the Government took advantage of the distress caused at the Soo by the closing down of the great industries there to deceive the people and coerce them into supporting its candidate. Twice he was interrupted, but he was prepared for this, and the Attorney-General and C. N. Smith came out decidedly second best.

The Premier announced that the estimates would be down to-day and that he would deliver his budget speech on Tuesday next.

CANADIAN HORSE BREEDERS.

Toronto, Feb. 5.—The tenth annual meeting of the Canadian Horse Breeders' Association was held here last night.

One of the principal matters dealt with in the secretary's report was the result of the interview the association had with the Minister of Agriculture in regard to admission of cayuses, culls and undesirable stock to the country from the United States. The Minister had promised that he would at once notify the department in Manitoba and the Northwest, and instruct them to adhere strictly to the letter of the law governing the admittance of such horses.

F. W. Hodson spoke in reference to the difficulties that he encountered at St. Louis. Several members of the association commented upon the undesirability of an exhibit there, and strongly advocated that no Canadian showing be made. The association adopted a resolution against the Government making any grant. A deputation will attend the meeting of the National Association of Canadian Stock Breeders.

The financial statement showed receipts to be $8,552, and the balance on hand $5,396. A grant of $500 was made to the Ottawa Horse Show, and $1,000 to the proposed Stallion Show in Toronto, if it is held.

Clydesdale Horse Breeders.

Toronto, Feb. 5.—The Clydesdale Horse Association of Canada met here yesterday in eighteenth annual meeting, with a crowded representation from every part of the country. The reports all pointed to one of the most successful years that the breeders have ever enjoyed. President W. Smith presided. The report of the secretary-treasurer noted a very large number of Clydesdales imported, there being 132 stallions and 57 mares recorded, but this was considered a very small percentage of the number that actually came into the country. During the year 1,196 pedigrees were recorded and 661 transfers and Scotch registrations made an increase of 426 registrations over 1902. The officers were elected, W. Smith, Columbus, Ont., being president.

TOLD IN A FEW LINES.

New York—The Grand Jury indicted for forgery in the third degree James Abeel, who has left Welland, Ont., in custody, for this city.

Syracuse—John Van Ever, 45 years old, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed the Cottage Hotel. His brother found the body.

Denver, Colo.—Six persons were massacred by Yaqui Indians at Ortiz, Mexico. The stage which runs between Ortiz and Las Craces was held up by fifteen savages, and all on board killed.

New York—Mayor McClelland has ordered the closing of the Grand Opera House, Madison Square Theatre, Princess Theatre, Vaudeville Theatre, Hurtig and Seamans, and the theatre part of Huber's museum.

Richmond, Va.—With a card pinned on his coat asking that he be not buried until it was certain he was dead, General John A. Gills of Amelia, has been found dead with an empty bottle marked "Laudanum" by his side.

To Grind Canadian Wheat.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Representative Stevens yesterday introduced his much-talked-of bill for the improvement of trade with Canada. The bill provides that when wheat is imported into this country to be ground in bonded mills and then exported as flour, bran and other by-products may be withdrawan for domestic consumption after the payment of such duties as would have accrued had these by-products been imported direct. Treasury agents are to appraise the duties. Mr. Stevens statement is significant because he represents in Congress the Minnesota section of the Great Red River spring wheat belt.

One Man Burned to Death.

Fernie, Feb. 5.—A work train was wrecked at Hosmer, the next station east of here, on Saturday, by which one man lost his life. One of the worst wrecked cars was the boarding car. The car turned over, and it is supposed that the oil from the lamp started a fire, burning the car and several others. One occupant of the car was burned to a cinder. The dead man was a Swede laborer well up in years.

W. H. Allison, K.C., Dead.

Picton, Feb. 5.—W. H. Allison, K. C., died here yesterday in his 67th year. He had been in poor health for a number of months. Mr. Allison had been a Liberal. He was clerk of the court and registrar of the Surrogate Court to which office he was appointed in 1893.

Hyman to Be Called.

Ottawa, Feb. 5.—Chas. Hyman, M.P., was in town yesterday. Mr. Hyman had a chat with the Premier, and the presumption is that it had reference to the former's admission into the Cabinet. That Mr. Hyman will soon be called to the Ministry now appears to be beyond doubt.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

Montreal, Feb. 4.—About 300 head of butchers' cattle, 6 calves and 80 sheep and lambs were offered for sale at the East End Abattoir to-day. The continued severe cold winds and bad weather had a depressing effect on trade and as pretty high prices were asked the butchers bought sparingly in hopes of more liberal supplies next week. Three prime steers were sold at 5c per pound; good mediums sold at 4¼c to 4½c; ordinary mediums at about 4c and the common stock at 2¾c to 3¾c per lb, while some rather lean cows were sold at about 2½c per lb. The calves were all small and sold at about $3 each. Sheep sold at 3½c to 4c and lambs, at about 5c per lb.; good lots of fat hogs sold at from 5⅜c to 5½c per lb. Two loads of good western cattle, which had been detained on the road arrived late for to-day's market and were put into the stable to recruit before being offered for sale.

THE PLIGHT OF THE HORSE BREEDERS.

Canadian horse breeders have again brought to the attention of the Government the disadvantages under which home stock breeders labor, as compared with their United States competitors. The deputation was assured by Messrs. Sifton and Fisher that as it was a serious if not dangerous experiment to revise the tariff, no definite promise of relief could be given by the Government.

That there is need for a revolution in the Canadian tariff so far as it applies to horses, is evident from the trade returns of 1903. From the United States Canada purchased 29,891 horses, valued at $860,672, or approximately $29 per head. On these the Canadian Government collected $158,033 duty, or $5.28 per head.

To the United States Canada sold 1,907 horses, valued at $340,239, or $178 per head. But the United States collects $30 duty on every horse valued under $150 and 25 per cent. on all worth $150 or over, or $37.50 on a $150 animal. Taking the best view of the case, the 1,907 high-class Canadian horses were taxed $57,120 by Uncle Sam.

Yet the Minister of Agriculture, when his attention was drawn to the facts, admitted his inability to provide a remedy. It is not only a question of protecting the horse breeders, but preserving the standard of Canadian stock. If this country is to be persistently drained of $178 horses and flooded with Yankee scrubs worth $29, it will not take long for horseflesh on this side of the border to go to ruin. If Mr. Fisher, Mr. Sifton or the Government cannot provide a remedy and are afraid of the tariff, it is high time that they gave way to men who have sufficient courage to right national wrongs.

MEETING OF THE GAS COMMITTEE.

A GENERAL DISCUSSION OF TOPICS OF INTEREST — PRESENT RATES TO BE CONTINUED.

A special meeting of the Gas Committee was held last evening, presided over by the Chairman, Ald. Sinclair. The other members present were Ald. McFee, Green, Paterson and Gordon.

Whilst the committee were in session for some time, nothing of great importance was transacted, there being a general discussion upon several matters appertaining to the works. It was, however, decided to continue for the present the same rates for gas as at present charged. The question of changing the retorts so as to manufacture gas from coal was discussed and the general opinion was that this would be done as soon as estimates as to the cost, etc., could be secured.

Evangelistic Services.

At the Bible reading yesterday, Mr. Shields continued his address on Ephesians, 1.4-6, the attendance being larger than the day previous. There was a good audience present at the evening service, and Mr. Whyte's solos made a fitting introduction to the impressive sermon preached by Mr. Shields. The text was Luke, 12.4-5, and the theme, "Fearing God." Many who were really anxious to be followers of Christ, were like Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea, afraid of men and of their criticism. Jesus in the text reminds us that men by doing their worst can only kill the body, while God had power to kill both soul and body. According to the word of God, he was angry with the wicked every day, and there was every reason to fear the wrath of Him who had not spared even angels, when they had displeased Him. A soul that would treat the Son of God shamefully, and refused to receive Him when he sought admission to its life and affection, would of a certainty be under the wrath of God. In the after-meeting several decided for Jesus. A large audience is expected at the service this evening which begins at 7.30. There will be no services to-morrow.

A Great Singer's Career.

Madame Melba was Helen Porter Mitchell, daughter of David Mitchell, a successful Victorian contractor and squatter, who hailed from Forfarshire, Scotland. The lady is consequently a Scottish-Australian. She was born in 1865 at Burnley on the Yarra Braes, close to the city of Melbourne, but she was reared in the bush, on a station then owned by her father, called Killara.

Miss Mitchell came of a musical family. Her father had a rich bass voice, her mother was an accomplished musician, and her two sisters had fine voices. Her first lessons in music were the lullabies of her mother. It was her mother, too, who was her first instructor on the piano. Speaking recently on this subject, Madame Melba said:—"It seems that I was fond of music when a mere baby. I learned to play the piano by ear, listening to my mother. I think it was first discovered that I possessed a voice—a real voice—when I was twelve years old."

In 1886 she went to London, and made one or two essays at concert-singing in public, with no very marked success. She was not, however, discouraged, but commenced a course of training under the great Parisian teacher, Madame Marchesi. Twelve months after her first lesson Madame Melba appeared as Gilda in "Rigoletto," at the Brussels Opera. Later on she was engaged for the Grand Opera at Paris, and appeared there with M. La Salle, the famous baritone, in "Hamlet." In this instance she appeared as Ophelia, and was very warmly praised by the press. While studying with Madame Marchesi she learned the leading roles of ten operas in ten months.

Madame Melba's initial appearance on the Covent Garden stage took place in May, 1888, as the heroine of Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor." Her success, both with the critics, and with the public, was overwhelming.

In 1891 she sang at St. Petersburg with the brothers De Reszke, by special command of the Czar. Since then she has scored many notable successes.

CHAPTER XIX.

DUEL UNDER THE STOCKADE OF THE KRAAL.

The war chief spoke to the girl—his language seemed warm to Rex, even though he failed to understand its tenor. He believed Walkulla had allowed his passion for the fair god to overcome the reverence he was expected to pay her as a deity.

As he talked rapidly he made extravagant gestures. Rex could not but note his graceful carriage, and his stalwart form, even while critically eying his figure as might an athlete in the Roman arena, upon discovering a gladiator with whom he believed the fates were destined to speedily throw him in personal contact.

She answered the war chief in his own strange tongue, which she spoke fluently, but her cold manner, perhaps the stinging rebuke in her words, did little toward quenching the new fever that had begun to run amuck in Walkulla's veins.

That fever was jealousy.

It finds lodgment in the breasts of untutored savages, as well as among people of cultivation and refinement—indeed, the closer we draw to the natural state the more prominent does this failing appear.

The war chief seemed to be unsatisfied by the answers she made, for he suddenly whirled upon Hastings.

What he said could not be written—the English language does not contain sounds with which to express Zambodi words.

And indeed, Rex could only faintly guess the meaning of the tirade. Did some learned linguist fire a torrent of phrases from Sanscrit or another dead language at his poor head, he could grapple with it just as successfully as with what Walkulla declaimed.

Perhaps the war chief demanded why he dared follow the fair god when she ventured to walk forth, or it might be he went even further and threatened all manner of evil if the venturesome warrior ever again cast an envious eye upon his prize.

Hastings ventured upon no response. It was not that the impassioned harangue had taken away his power of speech, but his inability to grapple with the Zambodi tongue made him just as helpless with regard to replying as he had been in understanding the drift of the torrent poured upon his head.

His silence showed considerable discretion, though it evidently inflamed the anger of the chief, who pressed him with what appeared to be another question, if one could judge from the rising inflection.

Rex remained as mute as the sphinx that surveys the Egyptian desert under the shadow of Pharaoh's pyramids.

At the same time he prepared for the worst.

Walkulla, despairing of drawing a reply from his mute unknown rival, tried other tactics, which proved somewhat more successful in discovering life in the black statue.

He suddenly bent forward and thrusting out his hand caught the other's nose between his fingers and gave it a vicious pinch that brought the tears to Hasting's eyes.

That was quite enough.

Walkulla accomplished his end, though the result may have somewhat surprised him.

Such an insult no self-respecting argonaut could put up with, and the pugnacious spirit that prompts every Anglo-Saxon to use his hands in a like emergency, caused Rex to land a blow squarely in the war chief's face.

It came straight from the shoulder with all the muscular vim and power of which he was capable. The Zambodi went flying backward as though shot from a gun, and landed on his back with a thump that must have caused him to see stars.

He was like a cat in his ways, and could not be kept down. As though made of Indian rubber he bounded to his feet. The light of the embers gave Rex a good view of his face, and such a physiognomy he never in all his life hoped to look upon again—distorted by passion, smeared with paint, and now streaked with gory stains as the effect of the sledge-hammer cut he had received.

Of course they were in for it now, since nothing but death could wipe out the insult of that blow.

Rex would certainly have avoided the encounter had he been alone, but it was thrust upon him, and he had no alternative.

A duel with a savage chieftain, enraged to a point of demoniac fury, and within a few hundred feet of the stockade surrounding his kraal, where some scores upon scores of black impis moved restlessly about, was not a consummation of his adventure devoutly to be wished.

Straight as the arrow flies from the bow, Walkulla went at him. One of these tigerish Zambodi braves springing to the attack is an object that might well inspire some little alarm in the stoutest breast; but though Rex may have felt such a thrill, it did not prevent him from meeting the attack of the black as should a brave man.

Of course Rex was not an adept in the use of the assegai, but at close quarters where the weapon could not be thrown and would have to be used as a sword or spear, he hoped to successfully meet the attack of his on-rushing enemy.

Taken in all it was quite a neat little affair, and Hastings really did himself proud. Perhaps the fact that a pair of bright eyes watched every movement, and that the sympathies of the fair god were extended to him, nerved that good arm of his.

He knew something of sword play, fortunately; and applied this acquaintances with arms to advantage.

Walkulla may have engaged in many a fierce fight in which the deadly assegai of the Zulus was employed at close quarters; but he certainly never met an antagonist who gave him so much concern, and sprung upon him such a variety of surprises as this one.

All the same he proved himself a fighter worthy of the name, and if the tactics to which he was accustomed were met by a superior play of the keen-pointed weapon, he never once faltered nor looked over his shoulder with the air of a man who conceives the idea of retreat.

The assegais writhed and twisted like battling serpents. Rex applied his knowledge of sword tactics toward keeping his antagonist from utilizing any trick he might wish to bring into play, and Walkulla seemed tremendously surprised at being unable to even raise his weapon when he saw a chance to bury its point in the unprotected breast of his enemy.

His surprise turned to amazement as he found himself several times made to give way, giant that he was, under the strategic rushes of the other.

Rex was in no humor for play.

He knew this thing had to be settled in a desperate hurry, and since the war chief was bound to accomplish his destruction if he could, Rex made up his mind to return the compliment.

Besides, his danger was very great, since at any instant a swarm of hostile blacks might come dashing out of the kraal, attracted by the clashing of arms or some signal cry to which the war chief might deign to give vent.

Walkulla dared aspire to the hand of this delightful being whom a strange destiny had made a goddess in exile—therefore Walkulla must die—it was decreed, and his the arm to write the sentence of the powers that be.

From mere defensive tactics the change to offensive was but a step.

The war chief proved game, for up to this time he had scorned to call assistance, even though one shout would have resulted in the undoing of his foe.

When Rex started the new regime the Zambodi for the first time began to have suspicions of the truth—that under the paint of his enemy's face there might lie the white skin of a hated Anglo-Saxon.

What might be deemed a startled exclamation broke from his lips, indicating that he had made a discovery.

Pressed back as he was by the rush of his adversary, it could be seen that while he struggled against the threatening assegai that whirled about his head with dazzling rapidity, it was something else that caused him to fasten his keen black eyes on the arms of Hastings.

Perhaps there may have been some spot which Rex unconsciously neglected when using the ointment in the dark, and it was this patch of white skin that had riveted the native's attention.

At any rate as he suddenly became aware of the truth, his scruples with regard to sounding the alarm vanished, and from his lips pealed a far reaching shout that echoed from crag to crag overhead.

It was Walkulla's last slogan.

Hastings had discovered his chance, and nerved to the deed by the desperate nature of his situation he sent the steel of the assegai cushing through bone and muscle, until the keen point protruded from the back of the unfortunate war chief.

The Zambodi staggered back and fell to the ground—he endeavored to once more gain his feet, while his painted face looked like that of a devil from Tophet; but now the blow been swift and sure, and Walkulla could only scowl and shriek for reinforcements.

CHAPTER XX.

THE RETREAT OF THE FAIR GOD.

To have conquered so valiant an adversary with his own weapons, was something of which young Hastings might speak with pardonable pride at some future day, always provided he survived the dangers that seemed to be gathering around his head in such limitless numbers.

Just then his one thought was escape.

No sooner did he see his determined foeman disposed of than he snatched up the assegai that had fallen from the palsied hand of Walkulla at the time the weapon of the adventurer pierced his vitals.

"Come, oh, come!" cried the girl, in an agony of apprehension, lest he should linger just a little too long, and once the blacks came sweeping through the gates to surround them, she could guess the horrible fate that must overtake this bold white man.

Really Rex needed no urging, since it was far from his intention to waste any time, in a case where every second counted.

He saw his guide start swiftly away, and being light of foot himself, found little difficulty in reaching her side.

Then again in his heart he found cause to thank heaven for the friendly darkness that received their flying figures in its gentle embrace, and immediately blotted out all indications of their presence.

Back in the direction whence they had come there arose a mighty shout and Rex, even while risking a stumble in the gloom, could not keep from turning his head to take a flying glance over his shoulder.

The picture that met his startled vision was doubtless an exceedingly strong one; but it might have appealed more heartily to his artistic temperament if he had seen it from a place of safety, instead of filling the position of the hunted fox.

Again that human black stream was pouring through the gates of the kraal, with many extravagant gestures, and brandishing of arms.

The signal cry of their war chief had been heard, and to a man they obeyed his call, possibly expecting to discover a host of enemies in battle array, since the shout had been one of extreme urgency.

Leaping and tossing they kept pouring forth by scores, and advancing in the direction of the late council fire.

As they came these warriors formed a very peculiar flying wedge, quite unlike the usual crescent or horn shape adopted by the Matabele in their attacks.

The smouldering fire seemed to leap into new life at the thunder of their approach; as though startled from slumber flames sprang up and in a measure illuminated the scene.

As he looked, Rex saw the form of the stricken war chief stagger to his feet with the deadly assegai still fastened in his body.

If he uttered any sound it was impossible to catch it, such was the awful clamor, but there could be no mistaking the action of Walkulla as he pointed in the direction taken by the fleeing fugitives.

He even attempted to lead his warriors as of yore, the game spirit remaining to the last, but death had too firm a grip on his life, and ere he had taken three steps Walkulla pitched forward on his face to rise no more.

Then Bedlam was let loose.

Such fiendish yells as emanated from the throats of those Zambodi warriors as they rushed pellmell hither and thither in a mad search for their unseen foe, would have won recognition among the adherents of a modern football game. Higher praise is impossible since the supporters of rival latter-day colleges are supposed to have reached the limit of lung capacity with regard to volume of sound and variety of slogans.

The impis advanced in the shape of an open fan, extending their lines continually; but with a fair start there was at least a chance of eluding them.

Expecting to run against foes in hiding at any minute the warriors did not move as rapidly as under other conditions, they might have done.

Rex discovered that his fair guide knew what her course was to be, and that she had undoubtedly mapped it all out beforehand.

His hopes increased.

What if they should throw the Zambodi off their trail, and escape—oh, the rapture of that thought—in its contemplation he even forgot the treasure contained in the side pockets of his coat, the whereabouts of which he had recently been bemoaning, since the last time he saw it, Lord Bruno had snatched it from the ground.

At least they held their own, and even that was a satisfaction to the fugitives.

The greatest danger menacing them lay in the many small squads of warriors, returning from the hunt of the little band of argonauts—to run slapdash into the arms of such an ambush would doubtless prove very unpleasant, to say the least.

But the fair guide was wonderfully cautions, and could hear sounds ahead that never reached Hastings' ears. Only in this way could he account for the sudden turns she would make.

They were all the while ascending the mount, and presently he began to suspect that she was taking him to some refuge where she had lived aloof from the tribe since the death of her father, whom they had regarded as a wizard.

This was soon proven to be the truth. To his startled eyes there appeared a little cabin on the side of the hill, partly hidden by encroaching trees—a structure that had been doubtless erected by the hands of the man she called her father, in the days of "Auld Lang Syne" when as a child she came with him into this wilderness, this strange man who seemed to desire to hide himself from his kind.

Nor did his surprise end there at the threshold, for as they entered he found himself amid many of the comforts of civilization, which had doubtless been brought here into the wilderness to make life more endurable for the girl.

The lodge was not untenanted. A figure sprang up and stood before them, with flashing eyes. Rex saw it was a young girl of the Zambodi tribe, though long association with the white maiden had caused her to renounce many of the strange customs of her race, and adopt those of the whites.

When she saw who entered she fell on her knees, proving that in common with the rest she also worshipped at the shrine of the white beauty.

Then her wondering eyes fell on the disguised Rex, and she seemed almost overcome at the discovery; but her mistress spoke quickly to her, and she dared no longer let her eyes rest on his face, for she believed him also a god, perhaps even the terrible M'limo.

Obeying the command given her she went outside the door to watch.

And now Rex felt confused because of his heathen disguise, but he put a bold face on the matter and even laughed at it as a huge joke at his expense.

"Come," he said, with a lugubrious smile, "what would my aristocratic friends of the Racquet Club in New York say if they saw me in this war dress. Really, it gives me the queerest sensation. But whether I look like a fool or a full fledged Zambodi warrior does not matter. I am deeply in your debt, miss, and only await a fitting opportunity to repay the account."

A man may even be polite when his arms and face and chest are smeared with what might be called plumbago, with cat-tails dangling at his waist and a feather ruff around his neck that gives him the sensation of wearing a ladies' ostrich boa—circumstances do not make the man, for a gentleman is born such and his natural instincts crop out despite contrary environments.

His eyes were fastened upon her face, as though it exceeded his power to withdraw them. Who could blame him, for it was a fair countenance upon which to gaze—such as artists love to paint in connection with hovering angels, with more than a little wisdom and determination also written there.

The girl smiled at his words—perhaps the sound of his voice was like music in her ears, for since the death of the wizard, her protector, she had not heard an English tongue frame speech.

"Do not concern yourself about that, sir. What I have done is small enough, Heavens knows, when you have declared one of the objects that brought you to Zambodiland was my release, my rescue from this distasteful bondage," she said, quickly.

"Then your are not happy here?" he asked.

"Happy—no, no. True, I have little to complain of except of late the unwelcome attentions of Walkulla, and the evil plottings of Hassaje, the old witch doctor, who hates me in secret because I cure those who are beyond his skill. The people worship me as a spirit; but I have not been happy. Time was when as a girl I sang the whole day long—when the carol of the birds and the ceaseless murmer of the waterfall were the sweetest music in all the wide world to me. Alas! it is no longer so. Everything has changed. I hear strange voices in my sleep and while wandering alone in the forest—voices that seem to come to me from across the sea—voices that speaks in my native tongue and urge me to seek the fair country where I first saw the light of day. Oh! sir, I have begun to yearn to see my mother's home, to learn who she was, and whether she be living or dead. It is a terrible thing to be alone in this great world, and never to have known your mother."

She seems overcome for the moment, and tears glistened in her glorious eyes; but Rex knew not how to comfort her, for Rex was only a stupid man; and quite helpless to assuage a woman's grief.

His face expressed his deep sympathy, but he could only stand there and be mute, much as he might have enjoyed taking the lovely angel into his arms and whispering that she need never again believe there was not at least one honest heart that was most intensely interested in her welfare.

Presently she seemed to recover her composure, and endeavored to smile.

"By degrees then, I have determined that when the proper time came I would fly and seek my own people. My heart has grown weary of contact with these poor, wretched blacks, for although I have endeavored to teach them many things, they are wedded to their idols, and naturally turn to the medicine man with his horrible customs which seems to have a fascination over their souls.

"I have been sorely puzzled how to escape, for Walkulla as if suspecting my designs, has seemed to watch me day and night. So you see, deliverance from this bondage will be very welcome. Heaven takes strange methods to accomplish a result.

Rex felt very glad to be concerned in her escape, although he winced a little when he recollected how very helpless he was, now that his companions had been forced to flee. Still, her words of gratitude were pleasant to hear, and his resolve to take her from the land of the Zambodi if it were within the power of mortal to do so, was strengthened. The determination was there, and a kindly Providence, watching over the affairs of those devoted to a noble purpose, would supply the means in good time.

He had much to tell, and many questions to ask, remembering the face in the locket worn by Lord Bruno.

This fair goddess of the Zambodi was no doubt a long lost sister of the English lord. In no other way could he account for her great resemblance to the picture of Bruno's mother. Such things occur in real life as well as in fiction, and as Rex looked upon her face in the light cast by the lamp which burned some crude oil of the wilderness, he was endeavoring to see his friend there.

It was no time to ask questions, however.

Danger still hovered nigh. To his ear was borne the clamor of excited multitudes, showing that the kraal was seething with a tumultuous upheaval, doubtless resulting from the death of the war chief Walkulla. He could easily imagine that grim old humbug the witch-doctor, clad in all his hideous paraphernalia, arousing the superstitious blacks to a state of frenzy.

And even while he listened and marveled at the fearful sounds, the little Zambodi girl came plunging into the retreat to declare that the whole populace, led by the witch-doctor himself, was advancing up the side of the mountain.

CHAPTER XXI.

HASSAJE AND THE FIRE-DEVIL.

Hastings, as soon as he heard in the Zambodi girl's broken English what new disaster hung over their heads, put his hand under the dangling cat-tails and drew out his revolver.

It was mute testimony as to his intentions, and yet what folly to think he could stand off ten score of fierce black warriors with a puny weapon like that.

Down in his heart he knew full well that if deliverance came it would have to be through the influence of the fair being to whom he already owed so much.

Therefore, while showing the front of a brave man, whom danger could not daunt, he cast a quick glance not unmixed with apprehension in the direction of his companion. What would she do to meet this crisis—could her influence outweigh that of the vicious old demon of a juggler Hassaje?

To his relief he found that even such alarming news did not seem to overwhelm the young goddess who had dared set her power up in opposition to that of the necromancer claiming to have intimate dealings with the Evil One.

"I have anticipated something of this sort and in a measure prepared for it," was what she hastily said to Rex as she moved toward the exit of the retreat.

He saw her go with considerable apprehension, for while the Zambodi might believe in her as a being not of earth, the high priest was crafty and vindictive, and would exhaust every means in his power to accomplish her downfall.

"If I can assist you in any way, call upon me to the utmost," he said, and she gave him a rare smile that would haunt him for many a day.

The native girl had followed her mistress, carring several things. Evidently she had been well drilled for this emergency.

Left alone, Hastings examined his revolver which he found in first-rate condition. Then he reached out and picked up the assegai to which he had clung while escaping from the vicinity of the scene where his deadly duel with the war chief had occurred.

It was Walkulla's assegai, and as fine a stick as could be run across from Zululand to Damaraland on the west coast.

His next move was to extinguish the light so that the little cabin should be wrapped in darkness.

This done he too stepped outside, desirous of being a witness to the strange scene about to occur.

The first thing that attracted his attention was the weird light arising from a myriad of blazing torches carried by the crowd of blacks on the steep hillside.

Rex stepped forward to find a place where he could see without exposing himself, for the tumult was enough to arouse his curiosity, even if his life had not been in peril.

What he saw he never forgot. It was a picture to haunt an artist's dreams—a page from the nether world, a mingling of countless black and painted faces, grotesque forms and flashing smoking flambeaux.

Ye gods, what a weird spectacle. He forgot for the moment that it was his life they sought, and only measured the scene as a basis upon which a masterpiece fit for the best hanging at the Paris Salon could be built.

This sensation gave way to one more practical. What was about to happen—would the mad impis forget their veneration for the fair goddess, and overwhelm her in their search for the person who had slain their chief?

Rex noticed with uneasiness that some of those in the advance were bending over as they advanced.

He did not require the training of Bludsoe to understand what this meant—that these men were the expert trailers of the tribe, and that they had followed his tracks from beside the smouldering council fire where the valiant Walkulla fell, to the retreat of the white god.

Did they know the war chief had been slain by a hated paleface—perhaps Walkulla had retained sufficient strength to inform them with his

A Distinction That Puzzled the Little One

AUNT EMMA was upstairs putting her five-year-old niece to bed. It had been a hard day for Bessie. Everything had seemed to go wrong in her little world, but to the rest of the family it appeared that the tot had simply tried to do all she could to make herself generally disagreeable. So it was with a decided feeling of relief that Aunt Emma, who had been one of the principal sufferers from Bessie's caprices, gave a final tuck to the sheet.

"Good night, Bessie," she said. "I hope you will get out of the right side of the bed tomorrow and that you won't be so cross as you have been today."

Bessie had settled herself for the night, but at this speech she flounced to the other side of the crib and said indignantly, with the weary sigh of the misunderstood:

"I wonder why grownup people treat little girls so. I notice when it's me every one says 'cross,' but when it's you they say 'nervous.'"

And Aunt Emma went downstairs pondering.—New York Times.

The Bishop's Good Yarn.

Bishop Potter says that years ago, when he lived in Boston, Colonel Higginson was running for congress. On election day he met a negro going to the polls and was astonished to learn that the negro wasn't going to vote for the leader of the black regiment.

"I said to Tom," said the bishop, "that I thought every consideration should lead him to support the man who had given to the negro race its greatest opportunity in the civil war.

"Tom replied: 'I don't see it that way. I think chivalry and honor constrain me to vote for the gentleman who gave me $5 this morning.'"—New York Telegram.

The Hard Part.

"Try to bear up, dear," said the great man's wife as he lay moaning in bed. "The doctors say you are much better today, and they think you may live for at least a week."

"Oh, it isn't the thought of having to go so soon that worries me," he sadly replied. "Not one of the papers has referred to me this morning as the illustrious patient."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Insomnia.

"Are you ever troubled with insomnia—sleeplessness?"

"I should say I am. Some nights I don't sleep three hours."

"That so? I've got it awfully bad. I've been afflicted now about two years. The doctor calls it neuris insomnis paralaxitis."

"I've had it about eighteen months, and we call it Ethel."—Schoolmaster.

TIMELY TOPICS.

While Joseph Jefferson was brewing a toddy for himself and his distinguished guest, ex-President Cleveland, he descanted at length upon the high art of preparing a hot Scotch, says the New York Times.

"If I do say it myself," observed the host, "I have an especial gift for serving hot Scotch. Billy Florence used to say I should have been a barkeeper. Now try this, Mr. Cleveland, and let me know your verdict."

Several times Mr. Cleveland tested the steaming liquid, thoughtfully, naming the ingredients as he identified them. "Nutmeg—lemon—water—sugar," he mused approvingly. "But I don't imagine you would hold a position as a barkeeper very long."

"What's wrong?" queried Mr. Jefferson, anxiously.

"You might be a great success as attendant in a hot water hospital," said the ex-President. "But as a compounder of delectable drinks you're certainly a failure. You've forgotten to pour in the Scotch."

"The recent 'twenty minute' revolution in Panama," said an American lady who has just returned from a visit to the Isthmus, "reminds me of a revolution I witnessed there one morning while we were at breakfast. We were at Colon. One day we had hardly taken our seats at a table, when we heard a tramping of feet and men shouting in the street. I hastened to the window and saw a half-dozen barefooted and bareheaded men in greasy, ragged shirts, running toward the plaza. They were waving machetes and muskets. 'What is the matter?' I asked in great alarm of our host, Raimundo Gabriele Cabreza y Guiterrez.

"He hurriedly came to the window and looked at the band of ragamuffins who were brandishing their rifles and shouting 'viva' this and 'viva' that, I couldn't tell what.

"'Why, I am afraid that is a revolution!' said he.

"'Raimundo Gabriele,' called the smooth, unruffled tones of his senora, who was still sitting at the breakfast table, 'did I put enough sugar in your coffee?'"—New York Times.

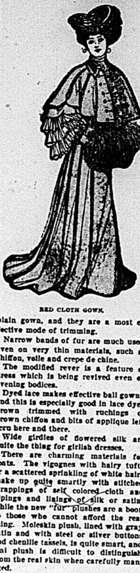
FOR WINTRY DAYS

Dyed Lace Makes Effective Ball Gowns—Red Is Much Worn.

Red, both in light and dark shades, is very much worn this winter, and pretty red cloth gowns are trimmed with flat braid, bias velvet or fringe.

Black silk tassels appear, plentifully besprinkled, on many an otherwise plain gown, and they are a most effective mode of trimming.



RED CLOTH GOWN.

Narrow bands of fur are much used, even on very thin materials, such as chiffon, voile and crepe de chine.

The modified rever is a feature of dress which is being revived even on evening bodices.

Wide girdles of flowered silk are quite the thing for girlish dresses.

There are charming materials for coats. The vigognes with hairy tufts or a scattered sprinkling of white hairs make up quite smartly with stitched strappings of self colored cloth and pipings and linings of silk or satin, while the new "fur" plushes are a boon to those who cannot afford the real thing. Moleskin plush, lined with gray satin and with steel or silver buttons and chenille tassels, is quite smart, and seal plush is difficult to distinguish from the real skin when carefully managed.

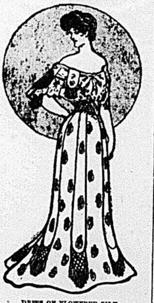
JUDIC CHOLLET.

SMART WRAPS.

They Are Made of Zibeline, Pale Tinted Cloths and Lace.

The fashionable wraps of the moment are plentifully trimmed with embroidery, silk braiding and stenciled cloth. These are employed both on day and evening wraps, and the colorings are exceptionally delicate.

Zibelines in all the dainty colorings of silver gray, pale fawn, biscuit and ivory are much used for carriage and evening coats. The coarsest dyed lace lined with heavy silks and velvets makes the most elaborate wraps of all.



DRESS OF FLOWERED SILK.

Handsome buttons of ivory, jewels and old brocade appear on evening wraps. These can easily be made from small pieces of dress goods which would otherwise be thrown away and can be embroidered and elaborated during the hours devoted to fancy work.

Three-quarter length loose coats of pale colored broadcloth are very smart trimmed with embroidered lace, gold and silver motifs or chenille tassels.

There is no doubt that many of the lesser dressmakers are getting good effects at moderate cost by using chine silks, although, of course, some of the really old patterns command a very fair price.

The cut shows an evening dress of flowered silk trimmed with chenille.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation —Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alternative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED. AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption.

THE CHIEF WEEDS.

Proportion and Kind Found in the Clover and Timothy Analyzed by the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The spread of noxious weeds can be attributed to no single cause. They seem to be naturally adapted to rapid spreading, and besides there are various natural and artificial agencies which aid in their dissemination. Not the least important among these agencies is the seed grain trade. Almost every farmer purchases yearly seed of grain or grasses and clovers with little thought of introducing weed seeds in this way. As a matter of fact, however, he seldom gets seed perfectly free from weed seeds of some kind. Occasionally these are not particularly injurious, but not frequently they are most undesirable, and, being introduced unconsciously, gain a strong foothold before their presence is suspected. In this connection some particulars of the analysis of seeds from the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa should be of interest as they show to what extent these conditions prevail.

Of over two hundred samples of Timothy analysed during 1903 only four had no weed seeds in them; in the others over thirty different kinds of weed seeds were represented. Of these Cinquefoil, Peppergrass, Sheep Sorrel, Ribgrass, False Flax, Lamb's Quarters, Canada Thistle and White Cockle were most commonly present, often at the rate of several thousand per pound. In Red Clover and Alsike, of each of which there were several hundred samples analysed, there were upwards of forty species of weed seeds, those being commonest whose size approximated that of the clover seed. Thus in Red Clover were commonly found Curled Dock, Canada Thistle, White Cockle, and Ribgrass, while in Alsike, False Flax, White Cockle, Sheep Sorrel, Cinquefoil and Black Medick were prevalent.

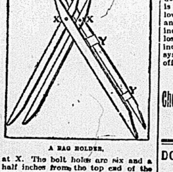
The primary cause for this prevailing condition is no doubt the growth of weeds with the crop for seed, and the tendency of farmers to buy improperly cleaned seeds because they are cheaper than, and to a casual examiner, equally as good as dearer grades. It is usually safe to regard cheap seed as of inferior quality and on this account to avoid buying it.

Dodder was present in twelve samples of Red Clover at an average rate of 418 seeds per pound; this is considerably more than was the case a year ago and was no doubt due to more seed being imported from the south where this parasite thrives much better than here. The analysis of several samples obtained from Chili showed that Dodder is a very common impurity in seed from that country, one sample having upwards of seven hundred seeds per pound and others somewhat less. There is no probability of Canada ever having to import seed from Chili, but as both countries have a common market for their surplus supply, the presence of this impurity in the Chilian seed should afford the Canadian product a considerable advantage. Were it not for this circumstance the Chilian Red Clover seed would prove a dangerous competitor, as it is well colored, plump and of high vitality, and with few other objectionable impurities.

Several samples of exported Canadian Alsike and Red Clover were obtained from English seed merchants. All these showed a uniform quality, none of them free from weed seeds but had apparently been well cleaned as there was a notable absence of such impurities as light seeds, chaff, or weed seeds either larger or smaller than the bulk of the sample. Small numbers of Cockle, Black Medick, and False Flax still remained in the Alsike, and of Foxtail and Ribgrass in the Red Clover. The germination was uniformly over ninety per cent. The average quality was therefore considerably better than that of the seeds retailed in our own markets. It should always be remembered, however, by buyers that while the average quality of our seeds may be low, the highest grades are always offered for sale, and this quality is in the end the most profitable.

How to Make a Bag Holder.

The bag holder shown in the cut is one which an Ohio Farmer correspondent says he has used for some time and found satisfactory. The back standards are four feet long. The others are three feet eight inches. There are cleats at Y and bolts at X. The bolt holes are six and a half inches from the top end of the back and eight inches from the top of the front standards. The width at the top should be just as wide as a common scoop shovel, say eleven inches. Spread the bottom to sixteen or eighteen inches to make it stand rigid.



A BAG HOLDER.

Manure Benefits.

Manure does not give full benefit in one year. It is something that shows good effects for several seasons. The reason is that manure does not decompose very quickly, and as the plants can only utilize it as it becomes soluble the manure lasts from one to three or four years, according to the materials of which it is composed.

THE BEST COW.

We have heard persons say that "a cow is a cow, and it is of no use to pay these fancy prices for something that folks say is a little extra. Some give a little more milk than others, but, then, may be they eat more than the others." This is true enough, but we always found that the cow that would eat the most and digest her food was the best cow, says the American Cultivator. She either turned the food into milk or butter or beef, and when we knew which she was best adapted to do we knew the most profitable way to use her. And this soon convinced us of the folly and wastefulness of feeding all the cows in a herd the same rations, and showed the necessity of the feeding being done by one who knew something of the needs of each animal.

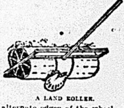
Foddering the cattle at the barn is not boy's work, but one that needs all the experience and good judgment that the dairyman has, and more than we think some of them have. But the difference in cows was well shown by the records furnished to the Illinois Experiment Station, as published in a late bulletin. There were eight herds, numbering 144 cows, and the records were complete for a year. While some herds gave a good profit for the year's work, others gave but little, and one herd was kept at a loss. In making these estimates, it was assumed that the calf paid for the cow's feed while dry, and the skim-milk paid for the labor, assumption not exactly correct, but certainly more favorable to the cow that went dry three or four months in a year than to the cows that gave milk eleven months.

The cows that yielded the most product gave 8,949 pounds of milk and made 472 pounds of butter. The poorest cow produced 1,482 pounds of milk, 68 pounds of butter, and the average production for all the herds was 4,721 pounds of milk, 3.67 per cent. of fat, 173 pounds of butter-fat, and 202 pounds of butter. The most profitable cow gave a net profit of $57.22, and the poorest cow was kept at a loss of $17.83. The average net profit was $9.96 per cow.

We do not doubt that there are as poor cows in other States as in Illinois, and probably as good ones, and the cow that will make 472 pounds of butter in a year and give a profit of $57.22, and the one that gives but little over 700 quarts of milk and makes but 68 pounds of butter at a cost for feed of $17.83 more than the butter will sell for, are certainly not in the same class. The first is worth a fancy price, for she gives a profit equal to the interest of $1,000 or $1,100 for the year. The other takes about 34 cents a week out of his pocket during the year, and if he gave some one his note for $300 at 6 per cent. to take her away, he would be better off, because he would not have to take care of her.

How to Build a Land Roller.

A roller is almost indispensable for some kinds of farm work, and a good one may be made by covering mower wheels with 2 by 4's, as shown in the illustration. The roller can be made any desired length, but seven feet is a very good size. Cut the projections from the surface of the wheels with a heavy hammer and cold chisel. This is not as great a task as one would think. Have your blacksmith drill the holes if you have no drill, one every four inches on alternate edges of the wheel. The holes and bolts should be half an inch in diameter.



A LAND ROLLER.

It is best to have boxes bolted under the frame for the journal and set screws in the hubs. Make the frame of 4 by 4 inch stuff. Cut tenons in the end pieces to fit the mortise in front and back and cut mortises in the end pieces eight inches from the shoulder of the tenon for the second front and back pieces. These second pieces make the frame rigid if properly put together. Notch the tongue one inch where it crosses the frames and brace it with heavy iron straps. A seat can be made by bolting on two light wagon wheel rims as shown and bolting an old mower seat on a board on top. This roller properly made and cared for will last a lifetime, according to a writer who submits the design in American Agriculturist.

Farm Poultry.

The farmer is the real fancier by nature and location, says T. E. Orr. All he needs to do is to rid his premises of all oddities in the feathered line. Kill, eat or sell every specimen not known to be pure bred of his chosen variety, and he has made a good stride on the road to success as a fancier. So soon as his neighbors and even the passerby see a flock of hens in his fields "as much alike as peas in a pod" they will respond to this effective advertisement and stop to buy breeding birds or eggs for hatching.

He does not need to build expensive poultry houses or high fences to keep his varieties from getting mixed. If he has but the one variety the mixing of these is not dangerous. Let me urge for the farmer some pure bred variety and but one. Two years' careful experience will convince him that he cannot afford to go back to the mixed flock of a dozen different characteristics and colors.

There is less difference between the the ancient and the modern Greek tongues than between Chaucer's English and the English of to-day.

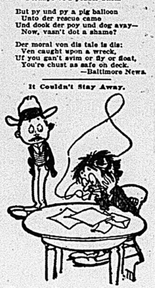
It Couldn't Stay Away.



The Poet—I've been sending this poem around for ten years, and it always comes back!

Apt Lessons.

"Little Johnnie," the fictitiously bright boy of the daily press, is more often rude than witty in his conversations with older folk. When he is polite as well as witty, as this latest bit which his Boswell has recorded, he is a very delightful boy.

"Well, Johnnie, how are you getting on with your French?" asked uncle.

"Oh, very well, uncle. We translate nice sensible things now, like 'My uncle never allows my birthday to go by without giving me a present,' or 'It is certain that my uncle will give me something splendid this time.'"—Youth's Companion.

One Way to Do It.

"The problem is this," said the teacher. "I have fifteen apples, which I am to divide among twelve boys. Now, how shall I distribute the apples?"

After considerable chewing of pencils and scratching of paper the little wise boy raised his hand.

"Well, Johnny?"

"You should give one apple to three-fifths of a boy."—Judge.

Results Unknown.

"The old, old story!" exclaimed the husband, with a long drawn sigh, as he laid down his paper. "Another man committed suicide because his home was unhappy."

"And did that make his home any happier?" asked his wife. "Or doesn't the paper say?"—Kennebec (Me.) Journal.

Very Practical.

"What makes you think your landlady is lacking in sentiment?"

"Because she has taken down the old motto of 'Home, Sweet Home,' which hung over the dining room mantel, and put in its place a placard reading, 'No Trust.'"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ultra Sensitive.

"Didn't somebody faint in the lecture room last night?"

"Yes; it was that young woman from Boston, who is a guest of the Billingtons. She fainted right after the lecturer said he would lay bare the facts."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Easily Achieved.

"How did Wiggins manage to get a reputation for being so wise?"

"By confining himself to two words. He waits till one of his superiors expresses an opinion and then says, 'That's so.'"—Washington Star.

Rebuking the Thoughtless.

Hettie—I think it's awful mean to make me practice two whole hours every day.

Papa—But what do you think of your mother and me, who are chief sufferers?—Boston Transcript.

Absentminded.

Gentleman—What do you mean by putting your hand in my pocket?

Thief—Excuse me, sir, I'm so absentminded. I used to have a pair of trousers exactly like yours.—Woman's Home Companion.

Useful.

"Katie got the first prize at our summer cooking class."

"How proud she must be! What was it?"

"A useful book, 'First Aid to the Injured.'"—Judge.

You May Find It Hard to Stop Him.

When you are alone with a man and the conversation languishes, get him to talk about himself. You won't find it difficult.—Somerville Journal.

Winter.

The sky agray; athwart the clouds all fluffy
The sea gull scuds with many a frightened squawk;
My neighbor, justifiably huffy,
Has just apostrophized my icy walk;
The coal bin's empty; I've no single splinter,
And fuel's just gone up—by gum, it's winter!

JOHN MORLEY DEFINITE

Will Introduce His Fiscal Amendment to the Address Feb. 8.

Questions Concerning Situation in Far East Practically Unanswered—Russians Removed Employes of Sir Robert Hart For Their Own Nominees—Secretary Wyndham Defends the Government From Attacks Regarding the S. A. War

London, Feb. 5.—John Morley announced yesterday in the House of Commons his definite intention to introduce Feb. 8 his fiscal amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne, even if Premier Balfour is absent.

Previous to this announcement, Home Secretary Akers-Douglas, on behalf of the Government, said he was willing to give facilities for an adequate discussion of the fiscal question if the amendment was withdrawn. But a storm of protests which issued from the Opposition benches, decided Mr. Morley to carry out his original plan.

Several questions were put with the object of eliciting information regarding the Far Eastern situation; the steps taken to avert war, and whether the Government alone, or in conjunction with the United States Government, had pressed Russia to evacuate Manchuria, etc.; but the questions practically were without result.

Earl Percy, Under Secretary of the Foreign Office, declared that in view of the present state of the negotiations between Russia and Japan, it would be manifestly improper to make any observations on the situation. The British Government, he added, had made frequent representations to Russia in regard to the delay in the evacuation of Manchuria.

Earl Percy confirmed the reports that the Russians had removed several of the employes of Sir Robert Hart, the Inspector-General of Customs and Posts in China, from the native customs office at New Chwang, and had replaced them by Russian nominees. Representations, the Earl added, had been made on the subject at St. Petersburg.

Replying to another question, Earl Percy said the communications which had passed between the British and Russian Governments before the British expedition had been despatched to Thibet would shortly be published.

Mr. Rollinson (Liberal) moved an amendment to the address, setting forth that the evidence presented to the War Commission disclosed grave mismanagement and negligence on the part of the Government during the South African war. In a lengthy review of the propositions for the earlier conduct of the war, Mr. Rollinson severely criticised Premier Balfour and former Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, and at the conclusion of his remarks asked if ministers capable of such conduct were fit to conduct the affairs of the nation.

Mr. McNamara (Radical) seconded the amendment.

Mr. Wyndham, Secretary for Ireland, in reply, defended the Government. He admitted mistakes had been made but insisted these were due to an inadequate army system. Acting with the machinery of those days, he said the Government did not stand condemned. It must stand or fall by the report of the commission, which discredited some of the evidence, but it was conflicting.

Joseph Chamberlain declined to accept the individual responsibility for the South African war or its conduct, and said that peace was made impossible because Kruger hoped for foreign assistance, and was misled by the attitude of the British Parliamentary Opposition into believing that Great Britain was not in earnest.

TORONTO'S MUNICIPAL SCANDAL.

Six More Election Officers Sent Up For Trial.

Toronto, Feb. 5.—The submission of evidence sending six more election officers up for trial, the announcement of Ald. McGhie's refusal to attend further sessions of the Council until he was relieved of the suspicion attaching to his election, over fourteen bogus votes being discovered to have been cast for him in Div. 9 of Ward 6, and the assignment of Inspector Stark and three of his sleuths to the work of the running down clues for the civic investigators were the interesting developments of the city scandal yesterday.

The following election officials were bound over by Magistrate Denison in the sum of $600 yesterday, on the charge of conspiracy to corrupt the elections:

Div. 2, Ward 5—D. R. O. A. Cahoon; clerk, Thomas E. Kerr.

Div. 3, Ward 6—D. R. O. Frank Gray; clerk, Col. John Gray.

Div. 4, Ward 6—D. R. O. Alfred Gianelli; clerk, Louis Gianelli.

Bondsmen—Cahoon, his brother, Samuel Cahoon, Kerr, Ald. Frank Woods; the Gianelli brothers, Victor Gianelli, a brother; the Grays, J. F. Connolly.

Frozen to Death Near Galt.

Galt, Feb. 5.—John Turnbull, aged 66, was found frozen to death on the roadway, near Glen Morris, yesterday morning. Deceased had been in the employment of Mrs. George Rutherford for about six months, and was sent on an errand some distance in the country. Wednesday afternoon the body was found frozen solid.

Three Burned to Death.

Montreal, Feb. 5.—At an early hour this morning fire broke out on Cadieux street, and is raging fiercely. Three people have already been taken out dead, and it is feared that many more lives have been lost, for a large lodging house is on fire.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE

IN STORE FOR THOSE WHO DOUBT.

When you read that a sufferer of many years' standing has been completely restored to health by using Smith's Cure-all, you are inclined to doubt the statement and, in fact, have no belief in it whatever. The reason for this is that so much is claimed for the Cure-all it is impossible for anyone to believe it; if the advertiser confined his claims to the curing of one disease, as do the proprietors of Pyramid Pile Cure, readers would have much more faith in published testimonials. Those familiar with this great remedy know that testimonials as to its merit may be relied upon implicitly, also that the cures brought about by its use are little short of marvellous. The genuineness of the testimonial here given is vouched for and is but one of thousands received:

"I wish to write to you and tell you what your Pyramid Pile Cure has done for me. I have been troubled with piles for the past five years and used every remedy that was recommended to me. While some would give me relief for a while they never have cured. I was so bad this summer I could not get up or down without pain; could not attend to my household duties. Finally I got a 50 cent box of your Pyramid Pile Cure at the druggist's and it is now two months since I used the last of the box, and have had no trouble since. I can say it is really and truly a good remedy.

"I am so thankful I tried it as I know it has cured me, and if at any time I should have such trouble again I would use it at once. Since I am cured I have recommended it to my friends, whom I know to be afflicted as I was, and I know they will use it too. I am so thankful I ever learned of your cure." Mrs. F. Hutt, 460 2nd street, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Pyramid Pile Cure is sold by druggists for 50 cents a package, or will be mailed to any address upon receipt of price by Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich. Write this firm for their book describing the cause and cure of piles.

TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

The best way to get even is to forget.

LA GRIPPE COMING AGAIN.

The doctors believe another epidemic of Grippe is here, and already many are suffering. The medical men are not afraid of Grippe since Catarrhozone was introduced, and claim that no one will ever catch this disease who inhales the fragrant, healing vapor of Catarrhozone a few times daily. Catarrhozone kills the Grippe germ and prevents it spreading through the system. "Last winter I had an attack of Grippe," writes C. P. Mackinnon, of St. John's. "I bought Catarrhozone and got relief in short time. I found Catarrhozone better than anything else and was cured by using it. Catarrhozone prevents and cures Grippe, colds and catarrh. Two months' treatment $1.00; trial size, 25c.

A Chance for Investors.

The Cherry Creek Copper King Mines, Ltd., owns and operates the O.K. group of six mineral claims situated about four and a half miles south-west of Kamloops, B.C.

The property has exceptional advantages and is exceedingly valuable, and as the surface indications on this vein are identical with those at the workings on the Iron Mask, a property owned by the B.C. Exploring Syndicate, and adjoining it on the west. The following extracts from the Chairman's address to the shareholders at their general meeting held in London, Eng., on the 18th Sept. last, will give an idea as to the prospective value of the O.K. group:

"On the Iron Mask at Kamloops we have expended £26,000 and I think we may allow that this item is splendidly represented by the mine we have in process of development at Kamloops, and I believe you will credit us with having given you twenty shillings for every pound expended on that mine. • • • • •

"If it is true that we have as we believe we have, a practically unlimited body of 5 per cent. ore in our mine at the Iron Mask, then in the words of one of the most eminent smelting millionaires in America, whom I had the pleasure of meeting at Salt Lake City, 'You have got millions.' • • • • "Kamloops is an absolutely ideal position for the erection of a smelter and the working of a mine. The railway, the water, the fuel and the grade of the earth surface, and the self fluxing nature of the ore all seem about as desirable as they could be. • • •

These extracts are from an address by a hard-headed London financier to equally hard-headed business men, who are developing their property with a view to large profits, under the direction of an expert mining engineer.

Owing to the proximity of the mine to the railway, a short line of aerial tramway would be easy of construction and would enable the company to transport their ore to the railway at a cost not exceeding ten cents per ton. Freight and treatment charges for the class of ore obtained are exceedingly favorable and are quoted by the Trail and Granby smelters at $6.25 per ton, so that the entire cost of mining, freighting and smelting would not exceed $5.00 per ton. The ore is a high grade copper gold assaying from 10 per cent. to 24 per cent. copper and from $6 to $22 gold per ton, and is in great demand at the smelter owing to its fluxing qualities.

The near future will see the erection of a large copper smelting plant to treat the ores of this district, both the B.C. Exploring Syndicate and the Inland Smelter Company having already selected and purchased sites. The completion of these enterprises will insure the lowest possible rates for reduction of local ores. The company has secured a clear title to the property on the most favorable terms, the former owners showing their confidence in the mine by accepting the entire purchase price in fully paid up shares of the company.

After paying all the expenses in connection with the incorporation, the amounts due on options secured by the company and the purchase price of the O.K. group, there remains in the treasury two hundred thousand shares, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be applied to the development of the properties, now owned or to be hereafter acquired by the company. There is absolutely no promoters stock, and the issue advertised in another column is the first opportunity offered the public to invest in the shares of

HARD ON THE MINISTER.

Capt. George Archer, who recently gave up his post of bodyguard to John D. Rockefeller, heard during his nineteen years of service many interesting and odd things.

"Yes," he said the other day, "I had some strange experiences while I was working for Mr. Rockefeller. I halted a good many queer people at Mr. Rockefeller's outer door.

"I remember a Baptist minister I held up there last year. He hailed from a little town in Vermont and he talked like a brother to me. He told me all about a minister's life in the country.

"It isn't an easy life. You'd be surprised to hear how some country people treat their ministers. Why, this man said that one cold winter night he was hustled out of bed by a woman he didn't know and ordered to come right away to her house two miles off, because her son was sick.

"'But I don't know you,' the minister grumbled. 'Are you a member of my church. Am I your pastor?'

"'No,' said the woman. 'I'm a member of Mr. McWade's church. Mr. McWade is my pastor. I don't care about calling him in though. My son's case is contagious.'"

Toronto, Feb. 3.—During the past year, according to the returns received by the provincial board of health, the total number of deaths in the province from all causes was 25,267, making the rate 12.6 per thousand, the population reported being 1,918,093, or 92 per cent. of the total.

In 1902 there were 25,208 deaths recorded, with 2 per cent. less population reporting, so that there is practically no change.

Hope of Peace Now Abandoned

WAR MAY NOW BREAK OUT AT ANY MOMENT WITHOUT NOTICE.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

London, Feb. 5.—Despatches to the Central News Agency from Tokio say that the newspapers there published telegrams saying that 20,000 Russian troops have concentrated on the Yalu Valley, with the probable intention of seizing North Corea.

It is added that the hope of maintaining peace has been abandoned.

Sports and Pastimes

HOCKEY.

It is scarcely possible that the Belleville's will play the winners of group No. 1 before Friday next.

Teams representing Trenton High School and Belleville High School will play a match here to-morrow afternoon.

A juvenile hockey match between the Beavers of this city and a team from Trenton will be played here to-morrow afternoon.

The Picton E.V.L. team defeated Napanee last night on Picton ice, thus leaving them a tie for the group championship.

The Peterboro ladies defeated the Lindsay ladies on their own ice on Wednesday night by 10 to 0.

The Picton Pirates have not disbanded, after all, but Picton has no further use for them. The Kingston Whig says: The Picton intermediate hockey team is to be taken on an eastern tour by Con. Millan and John C. Hamer, of Kingston. Brockville, Perth, Smith's Falls, Cornwall and other places will be visited. A match will also be arranged to take place in Kingston, with Queen's probably.

The three-cornered tie in intermediate O.H.A. group No. 1 will be decided in this way: Perth and Brockville will play at Smith's Falls on Monday, February 8, and on that date the clubs will draw to see on what ice Smith's Falls plays the winner on February 10. Belleville will play home and home games with the winner of this group on February 12 and February 15, the last game at Belleville.

HORSE AND TRACK.

The second day's ice races at Kingston finished with these results:—2.30 class, purse $175 — Gilsey, W. J. Gibson, three firsts; Nellie Bay, A. W. Hanley, Napanee; Nellie Garner, Frank Gilbert, Brockville, Helen D., Geo. Darragh, Kingston. Time, 2.38. Named race, purse $100—Maud Wilkes, D. Lake, Napanee, three firsts; Wm. Knight, W. J. Lyons, Harrowsmith. Time, 2.38.

A despatch from Glen's Falls, New York, dated Feb. 4th, says:—A new world's pacing record on ice of 2.16 was established on the ice at Lake George to-day in the free-for-all race, when Vince, owned by John J. Cunningham, of Sandy Hill, broke Gesner's record of 2.16 1-2 made at Ottawa last winter. Vince went the other heats in 2.17 1-2 and 2.19.

Some of the ice horses have been going very fast—on paper. A mare named Carinna was credited with a mile in 2.15 at Carthage, New York, on January 13th. She was taken to Ottawa and could not go there in much better than 2.25, which proves once more that short tracks make fast miles—on paper.

The great Onward, 2.25 1-4, a son of George Wilkes, now leads all sires of standard speed with 171 in the list.

MISSION WORK IN AUSTRALIA.

DANGERS THAT THE MISSIONARIES HAVE TO ENCOUNTER—NATIVE BARBARITY.

The Band of Little Helpers in connection with the City Mission here, recently sent to the Rev. Dr. Paton a contribution of $3.60 to assist him in his mission work in Australia. The gift was fittingly acknowledged by the Rev. gentleman in the following letter which he sent here:

71 Princes St., Kew, Victoria,
Australia, 10th Dec., 1903.

Dear Miss D. Booth,—Let me most cordially thank you and the "Little Helpers" of "The Little Helpers of the City Mission Band" for the money you and they have so kindly sent me for our mission. It is from them a handsome sum. The Lord Jesus reward and bless you and them with every joy in Him in His service for time and eternity.

You will be glad to hear that our Mission prospers much of late. At one communion a missionary baptised 44 adults; at another 32, and at another 23, etc., etc., and in extending our work we are much helped by our converts in the schools and at inland stations, but the heathen give them a good deal of persecution, and take the life of some one every now and again. Lately at night they entered a house at Ambrim, lifted and carried away two lads who were in it sleeping, broke the neck and legs of one of them, and brought and threw the mangled dead body into the bed where he had been sleeping. They so twisted the neck and cruelly used the other boy, and did something to him, that after it, when he attempts to speak, he dies. The boy was carried to the doctor, who did all possible for him, but he died, and many a little girl dies from their cruel treatment. The parents sell all their little girls in the Northern New Hebrides Islands at the price of from six to twelve large, fat hogs, and generally the girl is taken away surrounded by savages with loaded rifles, ready to shoot her if she attempts to run away. And if she runs away afterwards they burn three holes in her breast or in her side, and if she runs away a third time they put a burning stone behind her knee or knees to lame her that she cannot run away again, but is cruelly lamed. So the $3.60 of your Little Helpers helps to tell them of Jesus and His salvation. The Lord bless them all. Will you and them pray for the poor little girls and for us and our work on the Islands? I will pray for you and them, and I hope they will all be happy all through life serving Jesus, and when we die I trust we will all meet in heaven, to be forever with our dear Lord Jesus.

Wishing you and each of them a happy New Year and many happy I remain,

Yours faithfully,
JOHN G. PATON.

BUSINESS LECTURE ON BILLS AND NOTES

LUMINOUS EXPOSITION OF AN IMPORTANT SUBJECT BY J. W. JOHNSON, F.C.A.

The largest audience of the series attended the very interesting and practical lecture delivered by Mr. J. W. Johnson, F.C.A., Principal of Ontario Business College, at the Y.M.C.A. lecture rooms last night. Several ladies interested in preparing themselves for a future business career, were present. The enthusiastic applause and the hearty vote of thanks unanimously passed at the close of the lecture showed that Mr. Johnson's well-known clear and lucid style of imparting instruction and information was appreciated. The lecturer's long experience enabled him to concentrate in one full hour a store of business knowledge that would have taken his auditors weeks of reading or experience to accumulate. The forms to be followed, the formalities to be observed and the consequences resulting from the mistakes of ignorance and negligence in connection with these forms of negotiable paper, were carefully explained. The liability of makers, endorsers and third parties was exemplified, and the subjects of presentment, protest, interest, powers of attorney, days of grace and banking generally were introduced to as eager and attentive an audience as any lecturer could desire. All were well satisfied, and expressed their appreciation of the public spirit of the Y.M.C.A. in establishing the course, and of the various lecturers who have each week contributed to make it a success and full of benefit both to students and to business men.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"A MAN OF THE WORLD."

There is a treat in store for the feminine portion of the theatrical portion of the theatre-going public, who will go to see William Bonelli and Rose Stahl's handsome production of "A Man of the World," which is announced at the opera house on Tuesday, Feb. 9th. Miss Stahl's gowns are described as being singularly beautiful. Most of them were purchased while the actress was in Paris last summer. In the first act Miss Stahl wears a beautiful confection in gray. In the second act she wears pink, but in the third act she appears robed entirely in white, making one of the most beautiful pictures ever seen on the stage. In the fourth and last act of the play the actress wears a creation of tan, which is the envy and despair of every woman who sees it.

A Giant Elm.

The Norwood Register says: The big swamp elm tree on the farm of Mr. Patrick Fallon, referred to in these columns some weeks ago, has been cut down and two pieces of this king of the woodland have been hauled to the railway station here for shipment, we are informed, to St. Louis, Mo., as part of the Canadian exhibit at the World's Fair, to be held in that city from April 30th to Dec. 1st, 1904. The larger of the two pieces selected measures 12 feet in length by 5 feet 2 inches across the top end and 8 feet 8 inches from point to point at the widest part of the butt end. The tree measured about 50 feet from the ground to the first limbs. It took the greater part of two days to fell this giant and two good teams of horses were required to deliver the log at the railway station here.

The scratch of a pin may cause the loss of a limb or even death when blood poisoning results from the injury. All danger of this may be avoided, however, by promptly applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It is an antiseptic and unequalled as a quick healing liniment for cuts, bruises, and burns. For sale by all druggists

A CONFLICT IMMINENT

Alarmist Reports From the Far East Now So Indicate.

General Impression in Tokio That "All Hope of Peace Is Gone"—The Elder Statesmen of Japan Have Reached a Weighty Decision—6,000 Troops Have Sailed From Port Arthur—How the Wind Blows.

London, Jan. 5.—The news that Russia has already despatched her reply to Japan has not yet reached the English newspapers, which are beginning to believe that Russia has no intention of sending a reply. The most pessimistic views are taken of the situation.

Reports are current that prominent commercial houses having relations with Japan have received private despatches intimating the belief that a rupture of relations between Russia and Japan is imminent, but nothing of an official character is obtainable, the alarmist views of this morning being based solely upon the reports of yesterday of the sailing of the Russian fleet from Port Arthur and the rumored Japanese move on Corea, which are repeated from different points in the Far East.

The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Chee Foo says a Russian fleet comprising all the battleships excepting the Sebastopol and six cruisers and two destroyers, is cruising along the coasts of the peninsula.

Russian Army Moving.

The Seoul correspondent of The Daily Mail says that a Russian army is moving south from Mukden, while the correspondent of the same paper at Port Arthur says that both Russia and Japan have placed an embargo upon coal shipments.

A telegram received here from Copenhagen declares that eighteen foreign steamers have just been chartered by Russia to convey war material from Odessa and Libau to the Far East.

No confirmation of the alarming war reports current here could be obtained at the Japanese Legation here last night, and Legation officials profess ignorance of any new decision on the part of the Japanese Government or fresh departures in the negotiations. The officials admitted, however, that the Legation had received official confirmation of the reports of the greatly increased Russian naval and military activity in Manchuria.

Russian Views.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 5.—The feeling here is that Russia has offered substantial concessions, but that she cannot meet Japan's wishes regarding Manchuria, or agree to Japanese fortifications in Southern Corea. It is intimated in certain unofficial quarters that if Japan should offer a counter proposal, that Russia guarantee China's Manchurian treaties, irrespective of the ultimate sovereignty of the province, there might be a chance of reaching such a compromise. It is argued that this settlement would safeguard the existing conditions of all the powers in Manchuria, and it is contended that if Japan demands more in the last resort this would betray to the world her ulterior ambitions in Asia, which would be inimical to the interests of not only to Russia but of the very powers which now sympathize with Japan.

Much anxiety and doubt prevails here with regard to the future, but one thing is certain, Russia will not declare war, nor will she initiate hostile action if the negotiations break down. Russia will remain quiescent until attacked.

The postponement of the war impost in Japan is interpreted favorably.

The Novoe Vremya says that America is the real foe screened behind Japan. The British, the paper continues, have assumed the task of betraying Europe by truckling to the United States and speeches at the recent banquet of the Pilgrims' Society are cited as examples of British servility. In conclusion, The Novoe Vremya says:

"When Great Britain has quite gone over to the United States, the rest of Europe will realize the urgency of united action against America."

No Hope For Peace.

London—A despatch to The Reuter's Telegram Company from Tokio says: "The general impression here is that all hope of peace is gone. The Elder Statesmen had a conference yesterday afternoon, at which the Emperor was present. It is believed a weighty decision was reached."

London.—A despatch from the Central News Agency from Seoul, Corea, says that about 6,000 Russian troops have sailed from Port Arthur, and will endeavor to land at Chemulpo, the port of Seoul, to-day.

London—The ominous rumors circulating here of the imminence of hostilities in the Far East caused the rates on war risks at Lloyds to bound upward from 40 to 70 guineas per cent.

Reply on the Way.

St. Petersburg—The Russian response to the latest Japanese note was sent to Tokio last night.

Tokio—The Government has been informed that the Russian fleet has left Port Arthur. Its destination is not known.

Tokio—The Japanese commercial agent at Vladivostock was notified Wednesday by the commander of the Russian garrison that he might at any time, in accordance with orders from St. Petersburg, have to proclaim a state of siege.

How the Wind Blows.

Port Arthur—The Russian fleet left the harbor and was manoeuvring, it was reported, against 60 Japanese warships against Wei-Hai-Wei. This report was put afloat as an attempt to see "how the wind blows." The quarantine against Che Foo has been annulled. The fleet under Admiral Stark put to sea at dawn, Feb. 3. It has taken up its anchorage outside the harbor.

COLONIAL AUTONOMY.

Colonial Secretary Littleton Not Disposed to Interfere With It.

London, Feb. 5.—(C.A.P.)—Right Hon. Alfred Lyttleton (Colonial Secretary), informed Dr. Shipman yesterday that the Agents-General of the colonies possessiong responsible Governments were entirely under the control of colonial Ministers, and that in matters falling under colonial Governments' consideration he was not disposed to interfere.

No Tax on Land Values.

London, Feb. 5.—(C.A.P.)—Right Hon. W. H. Long, M. P., President of Local Government Board, yesterday informed the representatives of the Association of Municipal Corporations that he had learned of no arguments as yet nor was their any evidence laid before the Royal Commission or speeches made in the House of Commons to justify the taxation of land values. Ground taxation was a branch of a much longer subject.

Australia's Militia.

London, Feb. 5.—(C. A. P.)—Australia's military strength will amount to a total of 25,800 men on a peace footing and 39,760 on a war footing. With the reserve and the unattached officers and cadets and rifle clubs, the full total will be 60,000. The new army scheme of organization provides for division forces, a field force, interstate defence and garrison troops for state defence. The peace establishment proportions are for field purposes 13,831 men and for garrison purposes 11,896.

Against the Asiatic.

London, Feb. 5.—(C.A.P.)—The political committee of the new Reform Club has issued a twenty-page pamphlet entitled "British Workmen or Chinese Slaves." It argues that the real cause of the demand in South Africa and Chinese labor is due to fear that the influx of white laborers would speedily end the political influence of the mining magnates. The New South Wales labor party has emphatically protested against the introduction of Asiatic labor into South Africa.

Keep Russia Down.

London, Feb. 5.—(C. A. P.)—Premier Seddon of New Zealand, speaking on the crisis, said that for the essential safety of New Zealand, Russia should not be allowed to become a great naval power in the Far East. The revenue of the colony for the ten months ending Jan. 31 showed an increase of £481,000, compared with the corresponding period in the previous financial year. The Premier said he anticipated a thumping surplus.

THE FOURTH ESTATE.

Canadian Press Association Holds Its 46th Annual Meeting—Officers.

Toronto, Feb. 5.—Yesterday morning the forty-sixth annual meeting of the Canadian Press Association convened in the Council Chamber of the Board of Trade. There was a good attendance, despite the difficulties in transportation, and members continued to arrive at irregular intervals during the day.

In his opening address the president, H. J. Pettypiece, M.P.P., congratulated the members on the reduced rate of portage granted on newspapers transmitted to other parts of the Empire. The association in this point had been of Imperial service. After paying respectful tributes to the memory of these members who had passed away during the year: Honorary members Dr. E. H. Dewart, Pres. of the Association in '88; James Innes, President in '77, and James Shannon, President in '78. Active members, Andrew Pattullo, President in '90-'91; A. F. Pirie, President in '93; J. A. Tucker and George Young. The president concluded by emphasizing the nobility of the pressmen's calling.

The meeting elected the following officials by acclamation: President, John A. Cooper, editor of The Canadian Magazine, Toronto; first vice-president, Archibald McLee, Windsor; secretary-treasurer, Joseph L. Clark, Toronto (re-elected); auditors, Messrs. Gibbard, Toronto, and Dillon, St. Mary's; representatives on Toronto Industrial Exhibition Board, Messrs. Cooper, Clark and Scott. To-day voting will take place for the offices of second vice-president, assistant secretary, and for the five seats on the Executive Committee.

The discussions during the forenoon and afternoon session were on many topics connected with the craft and the speeches were valuable inasmuch as they were the result of actual experiences in technical matters. In the evening the association dined together, the speakers of the evening being Prof. Goldwin Smith, the Sage of the Grange.

MAKE PEACE WITH YOUR STOMACH.

YOU ARE CERTAIN TO LOSE IF YOU ATTEMPT THE USE OF FORCE AND VIOLENCE.

You cannot force your stomach to do work that it is unable and unwilling to do. It has been tried time and time again with always the same result. The stomach is a good and faithful servant; but when pushed beyond the limit it rebels. Some stomachs will stand much more abuse than others, but every stomach has its limit; and when that limit is reached, it is a very dangerous and unwise proceeding to attempt to force it into doing further work. The sensible and reasonable course is to employ a substitute to carry on the work of digestion and give the stomach an opportunity to recuperate and regain its lost strength.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the only perfect substitute to take up and carry on the work of tired, worn out stomachs. They are natural and easy in their work and cause no disturbance in the digestive organs. They contain all of the essential elements that make up the gastric juice and other digestive fluids and will digest any food that a strong, healthy stomach will, and do it in the same way. They work independently of surrounding conditions, and the fact that the stomach is weak or diseased does not influence them at all in their useful and effective work. They will digest food just as well in a glass jar or bottle as they will in a stomach. You can see that for yourself by putting one of them into a jar with a square meal and some water to enable it to work.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by thus relieving the stomach of its work, enables that organ to rest and recuperate and regain its health and strength. The process is perfectly natural and plain. Nature will heal the stomach just as she heals a wound or a broken limb, if she is not interfered with and is permitted to do her work in her own way. All interference is prevented by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by druggists everywhere at 50c a box, and if you are afflicted with dyspepsia, one box will make you feel fifty times better. You will forget you have a stomach and rejoice in the forgetfulness. No druggist would be so shortsighted as to try to get along without Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, for they are so popular and are so well known for the good they have done and the happiness they have caused that any druggist caught without them would lose the confidence of his customers and be regarded as below the standard. His business would suffer as a result and his patrons would go to other stores and buy their other drugs there as well as their Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine

Thousands of mothers feel grateful to Dr. Chase because this great medicine has been the means of saving a darling child when frantically struggling for breath — a victim of croup.

It also frees the asthma sufferer from the dreadful paroxysms which cause him such keen agony and cures asthma, as has been proven in a hundred cases.

The effects of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine are both thorough and far reaching and it cures when ordinary cough medicines have little or no effect.

From childhood to old age this great treatment for ailments of the throat and lungs stands as a guard which prevents coughs and from reaching the lungs and developing into pneumonia and consumption.

Mrs. A. A. Vanbuskirk, Robinson street, Moncton, N.B., states:—

"For years I have used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for my children whenever they take cold. I used it first with a severe form of asthma. We have never tried anything in the way of a cough medicine that worked so satisfactorily. It seemed to go right to the diseased parts and brought speedy relief."

C.P.A. Would Like Protection Afforded Through Postage.

Toronto, Feb. 6.—The Canadian Press Association disposed of business in short order yesterday. A. McNee of Windsor moved for a reconstruction of the postal laws to make United States papers, magazines, circulars, etc., pay the same rates as British and other publications, as the royal mails carried 100 bags of Yankee papers to one of Canadian, and he urged that the newspapers should share in Government protection. President Cooper related the present system, but agreed that a change would bring the American matter through the express companies instead of the mails. Then a duty could be imposed. A. H. U. Colquhoun was elected second vice-president and J. R. Bone assistant secretary by acclamation. The following were elected to the Executive Committee: Messrs. D. Williams, J. F. McKay, W. E. Smallfield, W. A. James and W. Ireland.

A HOPELESS SITUATION

Elder Statesmen Said to Have Decided Final Measures.

Russian Relay Post Established and All the Railway Bridges Guarded—What Russia Proposes—The Japanese Panic Stricken—Russia Rushing Railway Supplies—Baron Hayashi's Ultimatum Warns England Not to Butt In.

London, Feb. 6.—The Tokio correspondent of The Times says the situation is regarded as hopeless. It is generally believed, he continues that the councils of the elder statesmen held February 3 and February 4 decided upon the final measures to be taken in the event of an unfavorable reply from Russia.

The voluntary subscriptions to the war fund exceed 2,000,000 yen ($1,000,000), the correspondent says, and little credence is attached to the persistent rumors that Russian troops are about to proceed to Corea at the request of the Corean Government.

Russian Relay Post Established.

Port Arthur, Feb. 6.—Military reports declare that all the railway bridges are guarded and that the bridges over the Sungar River are defended by infantry, artillery, and patrol boats.

A relay post has been established on the military road from Lian Yang to Antung in anticipation of an advance. The railway is almost entirely at the disposal of the commissariat in order to allow for the free passage of troops later when their movement is urgent.

What Japan Proposes.

London, Feb. 6.—The statement is published here that the draft of the treaty which Japan originally submitted to Russia contained several articles, the first of which provided for the mutual recognition of the integrity and independence of China and Corea. The second recognized Japan's right to advise Corea on finances and general administration. The third stipulated that Russia should not hinder the development of Japan's commercial interests in Corea. The fourth recognized that Japan was entitled to send troops to Corea in the event of disturbances, such troops to be withdrawn when peace had been restored. The fifth article provided that no fortifications be erected on the southern coast of Corea, and guaranteed the freedom of the Straits of Corea. The sixth article arranged for the eventual junction of the Corean and Manchurian railroad system, while the seventh denounced all previous Russo-Japanese treaties relating to Corea.

Japanese Panic Stricken.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 6.—"The Japanese are flying panic-stricken," cables the Vladivostock correspondent of The Novoe Vremya, "and Japanese storekeepers are sacrificing all they possess in their haste to escape to Japan. Cases of oranges are selling for 5 cents, and furniture is being literally given away. They are practically ruining themselves in their hurry to get away before the outbreak of war."

Rushing Railway Supplies.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 6.—A semi-official despatch received here from Irkutsk says: "Telegraphic orders have been received here to forward immediately to Baikal a consignment of rails sufficient to lay thirty miles of track with all necessary material for the construction work across Lake Baikal."

Cables at Own Risk.

New York, Feb. 6.—The significant announcement that telegrams for Japan and Corea can be accepted only at sender's risk was made yesterday by the Commercial Cable Company, which has received the following despatch: "From to-day telegrams to Japan and Corea can only be accepted at sender's risk."

Baron Hayashi's Strange Interview.

Paris, Feb. 6.—An interview published here with Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister to Great Britain, has attracted marked attention in the highest Government quarters.

Baron Hayashi, besides reiterating his former published statements that the Japanese will insist on a signed treaty recognizing China's rights in Manchuria, is quoted as adding:

"If Russia refuses this treaty we will fight."

"Is your Government unalterably determined on this course?" the minister was asked.

"Absolutely," he is said to have replied.

"We will not take promises. Too many promises have been broken, and now we insist upon a signed treaty."

The interviewer then asked: "Suppose Russia's answer is conciliatory and reasonable but refuses to go to the extent of signing the treaty you desire, will your Government then have recourse to arms?"

"That is precisely what I mean," replied the minister.

"If the Government of King Edward VII. asks Japan not to make war," continued the interviewer, "and requests her to accept Russia's reply, what will Japan do?"

"We shall greatly object to such intervention, even coming from the King. We desire to be left alone in our duel with Russia. We do not want support or assistance. We desire to settle our own account with Russia."

In terminating the interview, Baron Hayashi was asked: "Then you say that if Russia refuses to sign a treaty recognizing China's rights in Manchuria that means war?"

"That will be war," replied the minister.

Baron Hayashi added to the foregoing that he believed it to be the view of his Government, and that authority had been given him to announce it.

Coaling the British Fleet.

London, Feb. 6.—There is renewed activity at Cardiff owing to the demand for coal. The Admiralty agents yesterday received instructions to secure the prompt loading of coal cargoes for the British fleet in Japanese waters. Steam coal is so freely sold that it is impossible to obtain spot cargoes. There is considerable pressure for the immediate shipment of coal already purchased by Russia and Japan and for the European navies, hence several days are likely to elapse before the British Admiralty orders can be filled.

BRITISH ELECTIONS.

Gerald Balfour Hints That They May Soon Be Brought on.

London, Feb. 6.—(C.A.P.)—Speaking at the dinner in the Hotel Metropole the Right Hon. Gerald Balfour, president of the Board of Trade, said he would apply for the appointment of a special committee for the purpose of enquiring whether the Board of Trade regulations could be applied to foreign ships. He hinted that a general election might soon be held.

Question re Canada.

London, Feb. 6.—(C.A.P.)—Mr. Black, M.P., will on Monday ask Right Hon. Alfred Lyttleton, Secretary of State for the Colonies, whether Germany has offered to restore to Canada the most favored nation treatment on terms which include the recall of Canada's preference to the Motherland; also, if he will state the present position of the negotiations.

Will Hurt British Trade.

London, Feb. 6.—(C.A.P.)—The English Building Trades say that if Canada is after a preferential rate on timber, which will likely be demanded as well as that on corn, a crushing blow will be given to the British trade, and the occupation of a million persons will be imperilled.

Dinner to Cement Coalition.

London, Feb. 6.—(C. A. P.)—Lord Wimborne gave a dinner and reception at Wimborne House last night, which is regarded as signalizing the coalition of the two sections of the free traders and possibly the return of the Liberal-Unionists to the Liberal fold.

To Be Married in the Abbey.

London, Feb. 6.—(C.A.P.)—Lady Grizel Winifred Louisa Cochrane, eldest daughter of Lord Dundonald, commanding the militia of Canada, has been accorded the special privilege of being married in Westminster Abbey to the Hon. Ralph Gerard Alexander Hamilton, Master of Belhaven, son and heir of Lord Belhaven and Stenton. The privilege is due to the fact that an ancestor of Lord Dundonald is buried in the Abbey. The wedding will take place in Henry VII. Chapel on March 1, next.

Laurier's Jejune Idea.

London, Feb. 6.—(C.A.P.)—Sir Charles Tupper writing to The Times anent Canada and her liberty to carry on treaty negotiations, says that since his letter of Jan. 26, Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his interview with H. W. Lucy has qualified his position, now insisting only on the right to arrange preliminaries. Sir Charles Tupper quotes from a despatch of Lord Lansdowne to the British Ambassador at Washington in 1901 re the difficulty in amending the Clayton-Bulwer treaty in the face of American opposition to the Alaska settlement, and Sir Charles adds that Canadians will not soon forget that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, instead of seizing the golden opportunity and requiring the Alaska boundary to be submitted to a properly constituted tribunal, unfortunately declared that Canada had no interest in the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. Sir Charles continued: "I unhesitatingly deny that Canada demands treaty making rights with foreign powers. If Sir Wilfrid Laurier's present jejune scheme is practicable it involves the most effective means of inducing hostile feelings between Canada and the Crown."

St. Catharines, Feb. 5.—Thomas Blake, charged with stealing a money letter, was sent up for trial yesterday.

THE SPOILS OF OFFICE.

It is a blue look out for a ship, the crew of which mutinies as she is drifting towards rocks which are close aboard. This is what has happened with the partially dismantled craft which is commanded by Mr. G. W. Ross. The trouble is over appointments to office recently made, which have not been satisfactory to the Toronto Liberals. For more than thirty-two years the Grits have been in power in Ontario, and during that time an army of placemen have been appointed, but never until now has the appointing power been accused of showing favor to their political apponents. It remained for Ross & Co. to thus do violence to the susceptibilities of the Toronto Reform Association. On Wednesday last a deputation from that body interviewed Messrs. Ross and Gibson and in plain language charged that some of the spoils had been given to Tories, and demanded that none but gems of purest ray serene from the dark unfathomed caves of Gritism shall be allowed to shine in the comfortable chambers of the public service. But we will allow the Globe to tell this story in its own way. Our contemporary said in its issue of the 14th instant;

Recent appointments to public office made by the Ontario Government have not met altogether with the approval of some active members of the Liberal party, and this morning a deputation representing the Toronto Reform Association had an interview with the Premier and the Attorney-General. The opinion was expressed by them that when suitable men belonging to the party were available they should be given precedence over others when vacancies in the public service had to be filled. Three instances were referred to where it was considered this generally-accepted rule had been broken—the appointment of Dr. A. Jukes-Johnson as chief coroner of Toronto, of Dr. Chas. A. Hodgetts as Secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, and of Mr. H. L. Drayton as Crown Attorney for York County. These gentlemen, it was stated, had been Conservatives all their lives, and consequently not entitled to special consideration at the hands of the Government, when among the supporters of the Administration could be found men equally competent. In the deputation were Dr. J. E. Elliott, W. O. McTaggart, F. S. Mearns, L. V. McBrady, K.C.; W. J. Elliott, Dr. McMahon, Adam Ballantyne, J. W. Mogan, G. C. Campbell and Thomas Reid.

Mr. Ross and Mr. Gibson may take comfort in the reflection that they will not much longer be called upon to answer such charges, as they will soon be called upon by the people to relinquish the cares of office.

EXPANSION OF TRADE.

The increase and expansion of the trade of the country, as shown in the imports and exports of the Dominion is constantly dinned into the ears of the people. It is true that the trade of every civilized country has increased and flourished during the past few years.

Before boasting too much, it would be well for people to study the character of that increase in imports and exports, and then ask themselves whether a more protective policy than Canada now enjoys would not have added in a greater extent to its wealth and prosperity.

During the six months ending the 31st December, 1902, there was imported into Canada from foreign countries goods to the value of $103,201,614, and from June 30th to December 31st, 1903, goods to the value of $121,532,008, showing an increase in that six months of $18,330,394 in the importion of foreign goods.

Unfortunately, Canada's exports have not kept pace with her imports. From 30th June to December 31st, 1902, she exported goods of all kinds to the value of $125,301,466, and from June 30th to December 31st, 1903, only $122,983,954 worth, a falling off of $2,317,512. From these figures it will be seen that instead of Canada gaining in wealth and in trade, she is going behind more and more each year. Imports are swamping exports—and with such progress another 1878 will soon be at hand. This might be averted to a great extent if a proper readjustment of the tariff were made, so as to encourage the manufacture of the greater portion of the goods imported in the country, thus keeping our people from migrating to foreign countries to find employment.

This will have to be done, and that, too, soon, if financial disaster is to be averted.

TIMELY TOPICS.

A great extension in the city's permanent walks is to be made this year. The Aldermen have acted in a business-like manner, and the public will approve their action.

There are 49,000 coffee plantations in the world. The total annual production of coffee amounts to 21,500,000 bags, of an average weight of 134 pounds each, or 2,881,000,000 pounds. This production represents a total value of more than $255,000,000 annually from more than 1,800,000,000 coffee trees in full bearing. The land used exceeds 3,000,000 acres. The value of the property is more than $1,350,000,000. The industry gives employment to 2,220,000 men, women and children.

Canada has the oldest legislator in the world, namely, Senator Wark, of New Brunswick. The venerable gentleman is a Liberal, but people of all parties are uniting to do him honor, after he shall, a few days hence, have passed his one-hundredth milestone on the road of life. The St. John, N.B., Sun remarks: "In a few days Senator Wark, of Fredericton, will be a hundred years old. His fellow-citizens at the capital propose to recognize the event by presenting him with a complimentary address. It is right that they should do so, for not many men live to be so old, and of those who do few are men in public positions. It is believed that Senator Wark is the oldest man in public life in the world, and this opinion is supported by the claim, recently made in Europe, that the oldest was a member of the Danish Parliament, who is Senator Wark's junior by several years."

A VETERAN INDEED.

HALE AND HEARTY AT 85 — A TYPICAL NORTH COUNTRY IRISHMAN.

Who in this city is better known and who has a greater right to the distinction, than our old friend Mr. John McCutcheon? Born near Strabane, in the County Tyrone, Ireland, on St. Patrick's Day, in the morning, 1819, he is now at nigh eighty-five years old, as well a kept man as walks our city, with all his faculties unimpaired and scarce a grey hair in his head. And mind you this is not because he has led any easier life than the average of us, but rather that the stout, light heart he brought with him to Canada in 1816, is, as of yore. Amongst the first lessons he learnt around his father's fireside were "Fear God, honor the King, love the brotherhood. No wonder then that he was the fourteenth man who signed his name at the re-enrolment of the famous 1st Belleville Rifles. With this company he served on the frontier at Amherstburgh in 1864 and Aultsville in 1866. For the latter he has the Fenian Raid medal of 1866, and yesterday he received the Long Service medal. Long may he live to wear them.

It is not that we have any particular lenses or frames to offer you which others can't get; in fact you might get the exact articles from almost anyone "selling glasses." A Goddess of Africa

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

last breath, or possibly the footprints revealed this much to their keen eyes.

The main thing of course was the means to be employed in baffling their fury.

All depended on the girl.

Rex drew back and glanced toward her as she stood upon an elevation. A peculiar glow began to surround her form, an unearthly white light very like that produced by electricity. Her figure stood out like a pale statue. She had discarded the black robe and was now as he had first seen her, an angelic being in purest white.

As the peculiar light increased even Rex was astonished—it seemed to proceed from the figure itself, just as may be seen in the glow-worm or the fire-fly. Of course he knew the cause was some ingenious contrivance which had been arranged by her father, with the purpose in view of controlling the superstitious blacks.

The shouts began to grow less in volume as those below caught sight of the girl at whose shrine they had worshipped these years.

She spoke to them in their own tongue, and an answer came back.

What was said Rex could only surmise, but he felt sure it concerned him.

Curiosity again urged him to glance over the edge. A few of the blacks were on their knees, but the main throng stood erect. Rebellion was in the air—the evil influence of old Hassaje had made itself felt, and only by a supreme effort could the fair god regain her superiority over these wavering superstitious minds, so prone to be led by sophistry and a show of power.

Could she do it?

Somehow he had a great faith in her ability to cope with this new dilemma.

One thing he noticed, and this was the absence of the witch-doctor. Why had he not kept up with the procession—was he deep in some scheme for the overthrow of the white god?

Apparently she was explaining the presence of a stranger in some way to excite their wonder—perhaps she even hinted that it was the spirit of the departed returned to hold communion with her. They were inclined to scoff at the idea, and she felt called upon to draw on her resources, as bequeathed to her by her father.

These were simple enough in the eyes of one accustomed to the wonders of the latter end of our present century; but when a hand mirror or a string of colored beads arouses the cupidity of a savage beast, small things appear gigantic before their vision.

So with a wave of the hand she caused the white light to turn into a ruby glow, and then gradually into a pale green.

More heads went down, while those figures that still held forth were wavering between the dread that made their hearts sick, and a sullen dependence upon the crafty witch doctor who had assured them he had the wires laid to overcome this woman spirit whose influence had ever been in the line of peace, rather than the natural aggressiveness of their race.

Then the girl brought about a climax—it was such a little thing that Rex would have laughed only for the grave consequences resting upon it—merely the commonest of all fireworks, known far and wide as a Roman candle, but to those black warriors a sputtering fire-demon bearing flaming messages of red and blue from dread M'limo.

At any rate its effect on the most obstinate of the Zambodi warriors was profound.

They gazed awe-struck upon the spouting shower of sparks, but when with a bang a fiery red ball shot up over their heads, to mysteriously disappear, there was a howl of mortal terror, and to a man they threw themselves upon their knees.

And with each report, the flight of the colored ball was accompanied by a chorus of groans and cries that promised poor returns for the prophet Hassaje's future dealings with his wretched people.

The victory seemed won, for the blacks would not dare advance upon the retreat of their white god after this exhibition of her intercourse with the terror by night, the spirit of the hills, dread M'limo himself.

When Rex arrived at this pleasant solution to the problem, he suddenly remembered there was one person not taken into consideration when thus settling the matter.

The witch doctor!

Where was Hassaje the cunning manipulator of charms, the magician who would invoke a blessing or a curse, who talked with M'limo in the thunder of the storm, and received his messages on the forked lightning that scorched the towering oak or brought death to the huddled cattle!

Rex knew, and the information came to him with a shock.

He caught sight of a skulking figure that crawled and crept along foot by foot in the rear of the shining form of the girl; and he knew this must be the desperate conqueror who had resolved to stake his all upon one effort to regain his lost hold on the minds of his former slaves, in danger of being emancipated by the stronger influence of his girl rival.

Yes, he had crawled up a secret path while the others advanced along the face of the hill, his object being to come upon the white object of worship from the rear, to take her by surprise as it were, and thus bring her reign to an end.

Heaven looked not with favor upon his dark plans.

No sooner had Hastings discovered the crafty witch man than he knew to what use he could put his six-shooter. To trust to an assegai with so much at stake would be taking too many chances.

Nearer crept Hassaje, like a tiger that creeps upon its prey—low he bent until he was almost flat upon the ground; but his glittering eyes never left his intended prey.

No doubt his flesh crept at sight of the myriad sparks that fell like rain apparently from the extended hand of the being he hated and feared; but he had primed his soul for this one supreme effort to assert his authority, and would not allow the coward flesh to control his actions.

Nearer still.

Rex raised his arm, and allowed his weapon to cover the wretched charlatan. He felt no pity — the fellow had conspired to take the life of that beautiful being, and thus merited his doom.

Had it been a chimpanzee of the African woods he was about to shoot down Rex would not have aimed more deliberately.

He saw that Hassaje had slowly arisen—that he held something in his hand, something that glittered in the flash of the fountain of sparks. It was a knife, perhaps a poisoned blade. Some of these Zulus and Zambodi warriors show amazing skill in casting such a weapon even at a distance of ten yards, and it was evidently the intention of the zealous witch-doctor to send this blade hurtling through space, directed at the beautiful figure in white, emblematic of purity.

Hastings' intentions were all right, but he did not have occasion to use his firearm.

The girl suddenly turned and pointed directly at the magician, who had even drawn back his arm as if to make the cast.

Rex caught his breath, but Hassaje caught something more, for a sputtering fiery cotton ball of intensest scarlet hue shot out of the little tube she held—its last stroke as it proved—and struck him fairly between the eyes, as though directed by a sharpshooter.

It was a beautiful sight.

He gave a scream that would have shamed a terrified elephant, and forgetting all about his desire to regain his old-time supremacy, thought only of escape.

When Rex saw him scrambling over the brink, while still covering the squat figure he refrained from firing. It was just as well, since the magician's one idea was to put a little space between his precious body and the spouting fire-god. He fairly tumbled over the edge, and Rex could hear him rolling down the steep, now on his head and anon on his back, shrieking imprecations and incaptations in the Zambodi tongue as only a sadly demoralized priest would be capable of doing.

At all events the evil machinations of the desperate sorcerer had been brought to naught, and for the present at least the refuge of the fair goddess remained sacred.

CHAPTER XXII.

MAID MIRIAN.

Gradually the sounds of excitement died away. The black warriors, when their lovely goddess had vanished, lost no time in sneaking down the hillside, as though afraid to remain longer near such sacred ground. But they did not return to the kraal. Rex could see the glow of their torches through the trees, and now and then a puff of air from that quarter would bring to his ears the sound of a high pitched voice which he knew belonged to the demoralized charlatan. Hassaje was not yet ready to give up the fight, while an arrow remained in his quiver or his scheming mind could plot new designs.

The girl had discovered Hastings' presence near by, and seemed affected by it, as though she could understand what motive had influenced him to thus issue forth. Perhaps she had also known of his design upon the life of the necromancer, for he still held his weapon in his hand when, garbed again in her sombre robe, she came to his side.

Again they were in the little grotto and the quaint lamp threw its light around.

Rex had been greatly impressed by the charming simplicity of his companion; who, being free from the conventionalities which continued intercourse and the restraints of civilization throw upon the sex, spoke so frankly of her past life and the longing she entertained for the future that he readily entered into the subject with a zest.

Gradually too he told her of his friend and aroused her deepest curiosity when he spoke of the locket Lord Bruno wore, containing the picture that looked like her.

"You spoke of him as your enemy—what reason have you for believing that?" he asked, determined to know more, for the Englishman was very dear to his heart, and he could not believe such a thing could be unless there was a gigantic misunderstanding somewhere.

"Ah! that I cannot explain. I only know that I have heard my father speak the name in his sleep many times, and always with bitterness, as though his sufferings had come from such a source. Gradually I came to believe some one named Lord Bruno had wronged him, and I tried to hate the name. That was why I shuddered when you mentioned it. I am unable to say more, because all his papers connected with the past he destroyed."

"Does it not strike you there was something like guilt about that act—might it not be possible that it was he who had done the wrong to my Bruno or his father? Men hate those they have injured—there is no hate that is more blighting. Perhaps his bitterness came from that source," he ventured.

"It may even be so. Surely, he would have told me something, unless he had reason to be ashamed of it," she admitted, as though Rex stirred up thoughts that had once troubled her, now long since dormabt.

"Do you even know positively that he was your father?" he asked, boldly.

Startled by the question she allowed her eyes to seek his.

"Oh! why do you ask me that?"

"The same doubt has arisen in your mind at some time?" he continued, following up the advantage gained, with the persistence of a lawyer.

"I cannot deny it. He was always kind to me, and yet there were times when something seemed to tell me he did not love me as a father should his child. It is shrouded in mystery. I do not even know why he came among these savage tribes, burying himself from all his kind."

"But you shall soon know, for I am sure Bruno can tell all. Even at the end he maintained the same awful silence with regard to the past?"

"Yes, because as you know he died suddenly. A tree fell upon him during a terrible tornado. They brought him home to die. I nursed him tenderly, but he had only one lucid moment before death claimed him. Then he drew my head down and tried to tell me something but it was too late."

"You see, my speculation may not be such a wild one after all; but this is no time to be indulging in confidences. Our situation is desperate while that old rogue lives to stir up the heathen, and it would be well if we talked of escape. Would you mind telling me yout name—since we are to be friends and companions it would be better if I knew how to address you, and I have already given you mine."

"He always called me Maid Marian," was the simple response.

Rex repeated it — strangely enough that had always been a favorite of his. Once he had known a little sister whose name was Marian, but death had claimed her as a shining mark, and she remained only a precious memory in the minds of those to whom she had been attached on earth.

At the same time he thought how strange and appropriate that his favorite name should belong to this girl who had entered his life in such a remarkable manner, never to be effaced from his memory.

Then they fell to talking of flight.

She had had such a contingency in her mind for a long time, and by degrees prepared for what seemed the inevitable conclusion of the whole matter.

Rex knew the folly of delay, and urge immediate action.

While the girl was just as anxious to get away, she showed him the folly of such haste, telling him time had passed while he lay senseless in the prison lodge, and that the morning would soon dawn.

Delay was therefore imperative. She had a hidingplace where he could spend the hours that must elapse ere another night fell, as there were duties that would take her to the village, for she must pay a visit to the sick under her charge.

Rex stowed himself away in the secret niche which the hermit had evidently fashioned against a day of danger, when the blacks might invade his sanctum, under the lead of some disgruntled witch doctor.

Plenty of food was given him, and there were robes made of loin and giraffe skins, upon which he could rest and woo the coy goddess of sleep. He was tired enough to sleep standing, and once he closed his eyes he knew nothing more for hours.

When he aroused himself it was still daylight, as he could see, thanks to a chink in the wall above.

Had Maid Marian returned? He fancied he heard some one moving in the refuge, but it might be the native girl?

Upon making an investigation, however, by means of the little peep holes made in the wall on purpose for such a service, he discovered that the same old danger menaced him.

It was Hassaje again. The shy old dog had taken advantage of his rival's presence in the kraal, nursing certain sick women upon whom his incantations had failed to produce any effect, but who were now on the road to recovery, thanks to common sense and a few simple drugs.

He had crept up to the eyrie bent upon some diabolical purpose.

Hastings was glad of an opportunity to pay back some of the debt he owed this ugly old sinner,and he might even have taken more severe measures but for the fact that he was averse to shedding the miserable old reprobate's blood in the charming little boudoir of his hostess.

He watched the movements of Hassaje, and speedily became convinced that the sorcerer had paid this sly visit in the hope of discovering some of the terrible secrets of the whits god, which were beyond his ken.

Being an arrant humbug himself he could give a shrewd guess to the effect that these wondreful qualities that produced so powerful an effect upon the ignorant impis were of this world—hence his desire to learn their nature, so that he might destroy the influence of the fair mystery.

Rex had been placed in possession of a remedy for such a visit of curiosity. At his hand was a long tube, which could be gently thrust through a hole in the partition, and aimed at the intruder, when successive puffs would release a flight of tiny darts, each with its needle-like tip dipped in some substance which when thrust under the skin burned like fire.

With right good will he opened his batteries on old Hassaje, who jumped a foot high, as the first dart struck him and gave vent to a blood-curdling shriek.

Then they came thick and fast, as Rex pumped and blew with might and main. Never man pranced as that necromancer. It only needed the screech of the bagpipes to mark his performance as the premium Highland fling. No whirling, dancing dervish was in the same class with this artful dodger, who believed his flesh was filled with fire, and who bellowed and jumped and butted into the walls in his mad search for the exit, which finally discovering he plunged through, to repeat his acrobatic feat of the previous night in descending the hill head over heels and vice versa.

Rex had come out of hiding and fallen into a chair weak from laughing when he heard a sound and looked up to see the girl there in her sombre mantle, hooded and veiled.

CHAPTER XXIII.

CROSSING THE ZAMBODI TROCHA.

There was little need to tell Maid Marian what had taken place,for the amused smile upon her face declared plainly enough that she had been a witness to the ridiculous antics of that amusing though vindictive clown, the witch-doctor, and upon seeing him take such a reckless header down the steep hillside, regardless of cuticle and bones, she could readily supply the motif for such strange action, even if his shrill cries to the effect that he was burning up, and his skin full of fire had failed to reach her.

The day being pretty well spent, it was now high time they prepared for flight.

While carrying out her gentle and merciful mission to the Zambodi kraal, Marian had not forgotten to listen to what talk was going the rounds.

She repeated her little budget of news to Hastings, and there was good as well as bad.

First of all his companions had undoubtedly escaped, since none of those who hunted for them had returned with the news of their capture or death, as would undoubtedly have been the case had such an event followed the chase.

This fact of course pleased Rex greatly, and set him to wondering whether the daring little band had set out for Buluwayo or returned by some new route to search for him.

Many of the impis were absent from the kraal, and yet no general expedition had been undertaken against the whites, so that it could be set down as positive that these braves were scouring the surrounding country for the fugitives, or else formed a trocha around the hill where the white goddess had her retreat. Hassaje being determined to prevent the escape of the party she had assisted from the prison lodge.

Even this state of affairs did not appear to daunt the girl, who evidently had gained assurance by long being compelled to rely upon her own powers.

She conversed quietly on the subject, and her manner gave Rex the utmost confidence in the probable result.

A meal was cooked and set before him.

In many ways it was a strange a supper as he had ever sat down to in all his life, but with that delightful being on the opposite side of the board that served as a table the whole affair was charming. Association has much to do with one's enjoyment, and under this bewitching presence, the decoction that went under the name of tea, and which Rex as a connoisseur might at another time have deemed an extremely bitter herb, now tasted like ambrosia, nectar fit for the gods.

He was already under the influence, and in a fair way to be hard hit.

Their plans were speedily arranged, and the docile Zambodi girl entered into them, ready to do all that her beloved mistress said. She owed her life to Marian who had saved her when a mad parent in obedience to the promptings of the witch-doctor, had been about to sacrifice his own child at the stake, in order to propitiate the terrible god M'limo.

Although the girl would have met her sad fate with the remarkable fortitude of her race, possibly with songs on her lips as the fire curled up around her, just as martyrs have done in the years gone by; at the same time life was sweet to her, and when Maid Marian dashed the burning fagots aside, cut the thongs that bound her, and declared defiance to Hassaje and all he represented, carrying the intended victim off to become her attendant ever after, it was natural that this young heart should worship her as a being sent from Heaven, and only await an opportunity to make the sacrifice of her life if in that way she could repay the debt.

Darkness had come again.

From in front of the shelter Rex could look down upon the stockade surrounding the great collection of huts. Fires were burning here and there, but extreme care was always taken, for a spark might at any time set the whole kraal in a blaze.

This thought crept into Hastings' mind, and he remembered it as a suggestion put forward by Jim Bludsoe when he first gazed upon the home of the Zambodi.

In the hands of desperate men fire is a terrible weapon, and the most daring savage in the world becomes panic-stricken when a sea of flame sweeps over forest and prairie or licks up his lodges like a whirlwind; for to him there is a majesty in the outstretched arms of the fire-fiend, since most of them have at some time or other worshipped the mysterious agent that leaves but ashes after it has dined.

With Maid Marian to assist him in making his escape, it hardly seemed probable he would need to apply so drastic a remedy as touching a torch to the kraal.

Besides, he felt no animosity towards the blacks, remembering that his mission had been to despoil the ancient temple of its precious legacy.

One wish he entertained, and really believed it would do him a world of good to be given a chance to finish Hassaje before shaking the dust of Zambodi land from his feet.

The ancient reprobate and charlatan had aroused within him an ugly feeling, such as he could not remember entertaining towards any other human being. Perhaps, if the truth were diligently sought, the reason for this might be found in the fact of Hassaje's hostility towards Marian, and his evident desire to seek her dethronement.

Had the witch-doctor exorcised his deity and learned a little ordinary common sense he might have found a clear field long ago by secretly aiding and abetting the escape of the white girl; but such a solution to the vexatious problem had probably never entered his dense head.

Book 5 for Men (sealed).
Book 6 on Rheumatism

It is my experience as a specialist of 30 years. In the book I tell how at last I found a way to reach difficult, deep-seated diseases. Thirty years of earnest, ardent toil in hospitals and at bedsides, made it possible for me to write these books.

The books tell how I perfected my prescription — Dr. Shoop's Restorative. How by scientific experiment I traced out the causes that bring on chronic diseases.

I found invariably that where there was a weakness, the inside nerves were weak.

Where there was a lack of vitality, the vital nerves lacked power.

Not the nerves commonly thought of, but the vital organs' nerves. The inside, the invisible nerves.

This was a revelation.

Then my real success began.

Then I combined ingredients that would strengthen — that would vitalize these nerves.

That prescription I called a restorative. It is known the world over now as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. After that I did not fail to cure one case in each hundred. In the extremely difficult cases, my failures for five years were one in each forty treated. I found cancer incurable. Cancer is for surgery not medicine.

Then how to get this prescription to the sick ones everywhere was my thought.

I must announce it in the public press. But, thought I, will they realize the real truth of my discovery — the real power of Dr. Shoop's Restorative? Then a way came to me—like an inspiration.

"I will offer it to the sick on trial," said I. Then they will know I am sincere —that my prescription is unusual."

I wrote a reliable druggist in each city and village in America.

They agreed to co-operate with me. Now by any sick one

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

Can be taken at my risk. For a full month I will let you use it entirely at my risk.

Send no money. Just write me for the book you need. When I send it I will tell you of a druggist near you who will permit the month's trial. Use the Restorative a month. Then decide. If you say to the druggist, "It did not help me," that will relieve you of any expense whatever. He will bill the cost to me. This is my way of clearing your mind of all doubt as to what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do.

No matter how prejudiced, you cannot dispute this absolute security I offer. You cannot resist an offer like this if you are at all sick. If you have a weakness, write me. If you can't do things like you used to do them, tell me about it. Write in confidence. As a physician I will tell you a way to help.

Brain Controls Every Muscle

INJURY TO THE BRAIN OR NERVES, DEFICIENCY OF NERVE FORCE, MEAN PARALYSIS AND HELPLESSNESS.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Every muscle of the body is controlled by the will if connected with the brain, and every muscular action is originated by nervous force, generated in the brain and transmitted along the nerves to the muscles.

When the nerves are injured or diseased, when there is a deficiency in the supply of nervous energy, paralysis, locomotor ataxia, or some form of helplessness results because the brain no longer has control of the muscles.

It may be weak heart action, inability to digest food, failure of the lungs to purify the blood, or impaired action of any of the vital organs, but the cause of the trouble is with the nerves.

The restorative action of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is soon felt throughout the entire system, because it restores the vigor and vitality of the nerves—fills them with new nerve force, the vital power of the body; weakness, nervousness, irritability, sleeplessness and low spirits disappear and new energy and strength take their place.

Mrs. A. Robinson, 237 Foster Ave., Belleville, Ont., States:—"For some time I have been troubled with severe pains in the top of my head, was quite dizzy at times, could not sleep and found that I was getting nervous. Since taking a treatment with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food my health has been very much improved. I rest and sleep well and feel better in every way."

Dr Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cts a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, of all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

THE BLOOM OF HEALTH.

Little children always need careful attention—but they do not need strong drugs. When any ailment comes they should not be drugged, into insensibility with the so-called "soothing" medicines, nor should they be given strong nauseous, griping purgatives. The very best medicine in the world for such troubles as colic, sour stomach, indigestion, constipation, diarrhoea, worms, colds, simple fevers and teething troubles is Baby's Own Tablets. If your little ones suffer from any of these troubles give them the Tablets and see how quickly they will bring back the bloom of health. Give the little ones an occasional dose of the Tablets and you will keep them well. Mrs. Robt. Hanna, Elgin, Ont., has proved the truth of these statements and says:—"I find Baby's Own Tablets the best remedy for indigestion and teething troubles.". The Tablets cost 25c a box and may be had from druggists or by mail from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

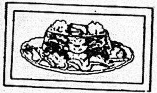
A DAINTY DESSERT.

One of the Concoctions of Gelatin, So Easily Made at This Season.

Pare, quarter and core five apples. Make a sirup of one cup and a half each of sugar and water and the thin yellow rind of an orange. In this sirup cook the pieces of apple, a few at a time, until tender, taking care to keep them whole. As the apples become tender, lift them with a skimmer to a plate to drain. While the apples are cooking let a scant half of a two ounce package of gelatin soften in a cup of cold water. Over this pour the apple sirup, strain the liquid and measure it. There should now be two cups and a half—add water if necessary to make this quantity. Have ready a mold standing in ice and water. Put in a few spoonfuls of the liquid and arrange slices of apple on the bottom of the mold in the jelly. Turn in a little sirup, then add more slices of apple, with here and there a slice of orange and, if at hand, a bit of freshly candied peel. Continue until the mold is full.



JELLIED APPLE AND ORANGE.

When ready to serve turn from the mold and decorate with whipped cream and candied orange peel. Sweeten and flavor the cream before whipping. For a cupful of cream use a scant fourth of a cupful of sugar and a few drops of vanilla extract.—Boston Cooking School Magazine.

Chocolate Cake.

One-half cupful of butter, two cupfuls of soft sugar and two eggs stirred quickly together; one-half cupful of buttermilk, in which dissolve one even teaspoonful of soda, two cupfuls of flour, one-fourth of a cake chocolate dissolved in one-half cupful of boiling water. Ice with vanilla icing.

The Very Source of Life.

In these days of brain exhaustion from continued overpressure fresh air is the very source of life to us, and it is far better for the neurotic woman to run the chance of an occasional cold than to accustom herself to become a coddle in hot rooms.

How to Care For Brass Bedsteads.

Brass bedsteads, to preserve the lacquer and its brilliancy, should be dusted daily with a soft cloth and occasionally rubbed with a cloth slightly moistened with sweet oil. A polishing with chamois should follow the latter treatment.

According to a despatch from Ottawa, Prof. E. Stone Wiggins says that the "abnormal spasm" of cold weather this winter is due to astronomical conditions. He said that the proximity of Jupiter and the occultation of that planet by the moon was the prime cause of the prevailing frigidity of the weather. The earth's position in regard to its orbit around the sun was also mentioned as a contributory cause. Just how these astronomical juxtapositions caused the present meteorological conditions the professor had not the time to discuss.

The death of Dermot Kavanagh, ex-Warden, removes one of the landmarks of the far northern townships. Mr. Kavanagh—"Darby," as he was familiarly called—was one of the early settlers in and one of the first representatives of his municipality and was widely known. He was a very shrewd and capable man.

Value of the Kangaroo's Tail.

So important is the kangaroo's tail in his rapid progress that experienced hunters with guns are accustomed to fire at the point where this appendage joins the body, when, the tail being disabled for its office of balancing, the animal is as effectually stopped as if hamstrung. Hit elsewhere, except with a rifle bullet or at point blank range, the kangaroo is pretty likely to get off. One peculiarity of the kangaroo is that, after being started up, he very rarely swerves from his course, through which peculiarity he is easily "potted" by hunters, who conceal themselves while a man on horseback drives the herd toward them.

He Watched the Cow.

When Sir Stafford Northcote, afterward the Earl of Iddesleigh, was an officer in a yeomanry regiment in Devonshire one of the men who was leading a small force across the country was taking a rather circuitous instead of a straight course.

"Why don't you keep your eye on a given point?" asked his officer.

"I do, sir."

"Well, what point?"

"That old cow, sir," replied the man.

The earl was often known to use this anecdote when political leaders did not go straight.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer Complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation. —Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralising the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

Will be Found an Excellent Remedy for sick headache. Carter's Little Liver Pills. Thousands of letters from people who have used them prove this fact. Try them.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED. AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

(Signed),

T. S. McINTEE.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kimloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

Much talk, many lies.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

CARE-LINED FACES

Are not always the sign of mental worry, for many a person goes silently along day in and day out, suffering almost beyond telling from bodily pain, and the only sign that betrays it is the care-lined face.

Stomach out of order? Indigestion with its cutting acids making every breath you draw a dagger pain? Dyspepsia gnawing to almost the point of distraction? Can't sleep? Nervous? You needn't suffer—South American Nervine puts "all things to rights," chases the seams from the brow, and instead of the care lines there'll be the glow of health. First bottle helps; a few bottles cure.

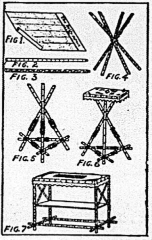
PAPER FURNITURE.

Entertaining and Useful Winter Evening Work For Young Folks.

An instructive and entertaining employment for the young people during the winter evenings is the making of furniture out of old newspapers. The Household has told something about it, as follows: The materials required are a sharp pair of scissors, a bundle of old newspapers, some sheets of tissue paper, also gloss paper, a bottle of mucilage or paste, some bits of string or ribbon and a few sheets of stout cardboard.

To construct a pretty table, smooth a newspaper out flat on an ordinary kitchen table, and, taking up a single sheet, roll it tightly, beginning at one corner, as shown in Fig. 1. When tightly rolled, as shown in Fig. 2, paste the last corner down smoothly, making four of these "spills," which form the legs of your table. Place them together and cut off the loose ends, making them of equal length. Now roll up smaller sheets of paper and insert them in each leg in order to strengthen them. Push them down as far as possible at each end and cut off the protruding parts. By this means the legs may be almost as hard as wood, and a little varnish or sizing will help make them still more firm. Cut black and gold paper into long, even strips and paste them neatly around the legs, as shown in Fig. 3, having previously covered them with a sheet of tissue or gloss paper of some chosen color, or give them a coat of light enamel before adding the black and gold paper. When the legs are finished bind four of them together, using ribbon or wire covered with ribbon, as shown in Fig. 4. Three crosspieces must next be made in a similar manner and attached to the legs, as shown in Fig. 5. These crosspieces can be decorated with curled tissue paper and tipped with gold or silver paper if liked, and the intersections can be concealed by bows or rosettes of the tissue paper. Next cut a piece of cardboard of suitable size for the top of your table, having it either square or round. You can often find a box cover that would do nicely. Paste a fringe of tissue paper around the edges. Cut fancy patterns from gloss paper and paste on top of the table to give it the appearance of inlaid work.



BUILT FROM NEWSPAPERS.

The table top is fastened to the legs by means of a needle and strong linen thread, the stitches being concealed by the stars or other patterns cut from the gloss paper and pasted over them, and the table is complete, as in Fig. 6.

Fig. 7 shows another variety of table. Other articles that can be made are flower stands, fern baskets, music racks and bookcases. The strength and durability of these articles will surprise those who have not tested the toughness of paper. They are strong enough to hold a plant or book or any other small article, and are really quite pretty.

A feature of a church bazaar held recently in a western city was a booth where paper furniture was sold. Dainty specimens of handicraft brought unlooked for prices, their neatness and novelty attracting attention.

A Bit of Fancy Work.

Very handsome squares for the tops of pillow covers may be made by taking repped cretonne of fine coloring and large, bold design and darning in all the background uniformly in one colored filoselle. When this is done the effect is that of painting and embroidery combined. Any person who can darn can do lovely work in this direction.

Items of Health and Beauty.

Fresh air and plenty of sunshine are absolutely indispensable to give the bloom of health to the skin.

In endeavoring to improve the complexion it is a good plan to sometimes substitute boiled fish or eggs for meat and to eat raw apples, grapes and figs regularly.

If womankind half realized the beauty benefits of plenty of restful, refreshing sleep all femininity would be crawling into bed at sunset.

Insufficient air, rich diet, overclothing and even want of cleanliness are too often the cause of the muddy, unwholesome complexion.

A daily bath in cold or tepid water is an indispensable aid in keeping the skin of the body in good condition. The complexion also very often suffers from insufficient washing in pure water, or, for preference, in rain water.

The bedroom windows should be kept open a little even during the coldest winter nights. Whether the weather be wet or fine a quick walk in the fresh air should be taken at some part of the day, even if it involves a risk of catching cold.

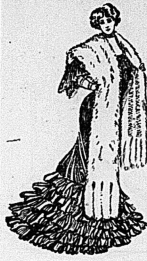
DRESS AND FASHION

THINGS FOUND IN FAVOR AT THE TURNING OF THE YEAR.

Still the Talk Is All of Ermine—Elegant Fur Wrap For Evening Use. Subdued but Rich Colors—The Becoming Wrist Frill.

The ways of introducing ermine at present to make it appear as a note of effective originality in the costume are many. A Paris fashion correspondent tells that it is there arranged on shawl shaped mantles of sable or moleskin as a stole, or it appears in cravat form, decorated with lace and black ribbon velvet quilling. When composing cape fashioned boleros a white silk passementerie or chenille garniture is used to embellish the pretty fur.

Every conceivable notion is thought out to present ermine to advantage.



WRAP OF WHITE FOX SKINS.

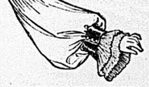
The tails in some cases do not appear excepting as a fringe mingling among lace. Another item is gold braid arranged in military fashion, strapped crosswise and finished with large black velvet buttons, having from each button a couple of ermine tails.

An illustration of the elegant manner in which fur is exploited in evening dress this season is given in a wrap of white fox skins which are arranged in rows on a silk lining faced with chiffon in white, pink, turquoise or any delicate tint.

The popularity of rich colors in velvet, cloths and hat garnitures is evident. The few white or cream cloth fur decorated toilets are devoted to receptions and indoor functions. The most fastidious dressers are tending more toward the French fancy for somber shades in the costume, especially for out of door use.

Browns, from rich golden to russet tones, and the greens and reds composing cloth or velvet walking gowns are more or less rich, yet subdued in tone. The point of brilliancy is more frequently noticeable on the headgear. A feature is made of the bright emerald green feather or royal blue or brilliant red plumes, but these usually appear on white, black or dark toned chapeaux.

The many old time features in present styles come from no particular epoch, but are the inspiration of as many different periods. Few are more picturesque than the wrist frills that droop so becomingly over the hands.



WRIST FRILLS IN MUSLIN AND LACE.

The lace bertha of our grandmothers is still another important accessory and very useful because in the present day it may be applied to any kind of bodice, coat of fur or cloak and especially to the decolletage of an evening gown.

Lace and hand work of all sorts abound on dressy afternoon gowns, for all except very dressy wear skirts may escape the ground, and the cut of them is now so clever that they are graceful despite their curtailment.

In the midst of the general elaborateness of furs many decidedly smart and stylish short cravats and necklets afford a comparatively inexpensive means for conforming to the prevailing fashion.

Mix a little flour in the cooked hominy before pouring it into a dish to cool. It will then be easy to fry it a nice golden brown.

Popcorn, popped, then ground in a coffee grinder and eaten with cream is considered very palatable by some people.

Try using a thin paste of whiting and cold tea for cleaning mirrors.

To remove ink spots from white goods wet the spots with a little oxalic acid, rinse thoroughly in clear water and, lastly, in ammonia and water. Remember the acid is poisonous.

Improperly cooked rice, tapioca, sago and arrowroot are all very difficult to digest. They should be cooked to a jelly.

Meats to be roasted or broiled should be given the greatest amount of heat possible at first that the surface may be hardened and the juices retained.

Before whipping cream add a little gelatin dissolved in cold water.

VARICOCELE
HYDROCELE
CURED IN FIVE DAYS

H. J. TILLOTSON, M.D.,
The Master Specialist of Chicago, who cures men only, who sees patients personally. Established 1880.

24 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

Those who receive treatment from me are guaranteed a safer, surer and more rapid cure than can be obtained elsewhere. My methods are original. Every formula, apparatus and devise used in my extensive practice is of my own discovery. Consultation either in person or by mail is ABSOLUTELY FREE.

Besides, I have earnestly devoted twenty-four years of my life to the exclusive study of Male Maladies, during which time I have discovered and developed various forms of treatment for them which make the cure of the sufferer as certain as it is that he employs my services and follows my directions.

My professional ability is recommended by leading physicians as well as by my cured patients, while my financial standing is endorsed by the best banks, business houses and commercial agencies in this city.

My specialty and modes of treatment are more fully commented upon below, and are well worth the careful perusal of all in need of medical attention.

Varicocele—Hydrocele

Impairs and destroys the elements of vitality.

I daily demonstrate that Varicocele and Hydrocele can be positively cured without cutting, burning, or any other form of operation.

Instead of the vital parts being maimed and mutilated, they are preserved and strengthened, pain ceases entirely and almost instantly, swelling subsides, healthy circulation is rapidly re-established and every part of the organism affected is thoroughly restored.

Rupture

Disregard of existing rupture has cost many human lives. Strangulation of the bowels and old-time methods of operating with the knife have contributed to this fatality. My methods obviate this and cure with absolute certainty and safety, and entail no suffering. The smallest hernias are the most dangerous to life, because of the increased liabiltiy to strangulation.

Specific Blood Poison

Prompt and heroic treatment is the only kind that should ever be used in combating this loathsome disease.

Only temporary relief can come from hot spring baths, specifics, mercury, potash, or other mineral mixtures and poisons.

I have originated and perfected a cure for Blood Poison that is absolutely safe, rapid and permanent, and leaves no injurious effects.

Every external symptom soon disappears, while the blood, the tissues, the nerve fibers, the bones and the whole system are cleansed, strengthened and restored to perfect health and purity.

Stricture

Of all the diseases peculiar to man none requires more skilful, painstaking and conscientious treatment than Stricture.

I have discovered and developed a system of my own which gives all the benefits of surgery without imparting the pain and peril that surgery involves; a bloodless, painless system of curing Stricture which does not disturb the sound mucous membrane, but acts only upon the affected parts.

It attacks and thoroughly dissolves abnormal growth, dislodging every tissue of diseased, hardened or scarred tissue, which comes away in strips of shred-like fiber.

Nervo-Vital Debility

CEREBRAL—When the mental forces are impaired.

SPINAL—When the spinal centers are involved and motor power is diminished.

VITAL—When the Great Sympathetic Nerve System is affected and the forces that govern the organs of life are reduced by the baneful reflex effects of disease incident to the organs of the pelvis.

I cure all weakness induced by specific nervous complaint and put you on the right track to complete health or restore the conditions essential to your future life and happiness.

Associate Diseases

In curing a disease of any kind I never fail to remove all reflex complications.

In the case of Varicocele or Hydrocele the weakness caused by it disappears. If it has developed into Prostatic Bladder, or Kidney affections the injured parts are all restored to a perfect, healthful condition. If it is contagious Blood Poison, all Skin Blood and Bone diseases arising from the taint are entirely and permanently eliminated from the system. If it is Nervous Debility, the many distressing symptoms following in its train, and indicating a premature decline of physical and mental power, are totally removed and rapidly replaced by the youthful energy of robust manhood. Hence, all resulting ills and reflex complications, which may be properly termed associate diseases, and which, in fact, are often more serious than the original ailment that gives rise to them—all, I say, disappear completely and forever with the cure of the main malady.

New Books

My latest medical publication, embracing a scientific yet simple discussion of Male Pelvic diseases, and the best methods of curing them, will be sent free upon application.

Correspondence

If you cannot visit me personally, write symptoms that trouble you most.

A vast majority of cases can be cured by my system of home treatment, which is the most successful system ever devised.

I make no charge for private counsel, and give to each patient a legal contract in writing, backed by abundant capital, to hold for my promise.

Physicians having stubborn cases to treat are cordially invited to consult with me.

My Reception Rooms

are open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., but my hours for consultation are daily from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Sundays from 8.30 to 1 only.

Certainty of Cure

is what you want. I give a legal guarantee to cure or refund your money. What I have done for others I can do for you.

My Charges

for a perfect cure will be reasonable and no more than you are willing to pay for successful treatment of your case.

The Life of Man.

Thousands of people are suffering for the want of life giving current, which nature intended they should possess. They do not live, they simply exist; in the faces of thousands can be read the story of a wasted life and blighted hopes. Joys and pleasures are unknown to them because their vitality is being sapped away by some disease. Many have sought relief in drugs and patent remedies to relieve their mental and physical sufferings. They are soothed for a day or may be for a week, falsely braced up until the effects of the drugs wears off like the momentary bracing up of whiskey. They sink lower in vitality and with the hope exhausted, lose confidence in themselves and decide to abandon all efforts to recover their power, feeling there is no hope for them. All this is caused from a wrecked nervous system or poor digestion, the steam of the system has run down and wants recharging. There is only one thing that will do it and that is electricity. Every nerve in the body is charged by this life giving power and when once lost from over work or other causes has got to be restored before the system works in a healthy state. As we have often said before, don't believe what we say alone, come and get a free treatment to convince yourself. The Gilmour Electric Belt is the only appliance sold to-day which will give the current. A sick person requires to get well. We will show you a list of names of people right here in Belleville who have got cured by the use of this appliance. You can go and see them for yourself, is not that good enough evidence for the truth? You have not got to go to Toronto or any of the other large cities, right here in this city we can refer you to 50. This belt has all the attachments for treating bladder and kidney trouble, varicocele, sexual weakness in any form, rheumatism, neuralgia in the neck and face, sciatica, varicose veins, nervous trouble or paralysis.

ENGINEER LOSES MIND

George Hunter, Brakeman, of Toronto Junction, Literally Ground to Pieces—C.P.R. Flyers Crashed Into the Freight They Were On With Above Results—C.P.R. Brakeman Wm. Speers Killed at Agincourt.

London, Feb. 6.—As the result of a rear-end collision in the C.P.R. yards here yesterday George Hunter of Toronto, is dead, and John Abernethy, also of Toronto Junction, is out of his mind.

C.P.R. flyer No. 5, due here at 11.30, was one hour late yesterday, and crashed into a freight standing on the main track. The men on the engine could not see the freight until they turned the curve a short distance east.

On seeing the train in their way brakes were immediately applied, but with no avail, the icy tracks being too slippery to stop quickly at the rate they were traveling.

George Hunter, the fireman, jumped and struck a car on the next track. He was thrown back under the wheels and was literally ground to pieces. The entire train passed over him.

John Abernethy stayed on the engine till it struck, escaping injury beyond a shaking up. The shock, however, was too much for him, resulting in unbalancing his mind. The poor fellow is now in a state of temporary insanity.

Passengers Unhurt.

The passengers escaped unhurt, and the train was sent on shortly afterwards. The scene of the wreck is a gruesome one, three large refrigerator cars being jamed into one and piled up about 50 feet. The cause of the accident has not yet been ascertained, the railway authorities being reticent.

It is supposed that owing to the sharpness of the curve and the steam from a yard engine the engineer's view was obstructed, and he couldn't see the semaphore was against him.

The yard was full of freight trains, so it was found necessary to make up the freight train on the main line, it being thought, as the flyer was over an hour late, they would have time to get her out.

Both Abernethy and Hunter are married. Hunter, who is about 32 years of age, leaves a widow and one child.

Brakeman Killed at Agincourt.

Toronto Junction, Feb. 6.—William Speers, a brakeman on the C.P.R., residing at 315 East Dundas street, met with his death at Agincourt last evening. He was going east on a freight train, and at Agincourt he was running alongside of his train when he got caught by a passenger train going west and thrown under his own train. He was removed to Toronto, but died on his way to the Western Hospital.

St. Thomas Man Killed.

Winnipeg, Feb. 6.—Joseph Wardner, C.P.R. fireman, was fatally injured by falling from the third storey of the Union Bank building at Moose Jaw Thursday. Foul play is suspected, as Wardner was minus his watch and money when discovered. He came from St. Thomas, Ont.

12 People Burned to Death.

Amsterdam, Feb. 6.—The Colonial Office received a despatch from the Governor of the Dutch East Indies reporting the eruption of the volcano of Merapi, in the Island of Java, and saying that 12 people were burned to death and that 20 were severely injured. The eruption was accompanied by showers of red hot coals. The last violent eruption was in 1849.

CATTLE AND SHEEP BREEDERS.

Held Annual Meetings Friday—The Election of Officers.

Toronto, Feb. 6.—The annual meeting of the Dominion Cattle-Breeders' Association was held here yesterday morning. The attendance was not large. The financial statement showed receipts of $3,419, while the disbursements were $3,669.24, leaving a deficit of $250.24. The officers were then elected, Arthur Johnston, Greenwood, being elected President. W. L. Smith urged the members to join issue with the other societies and press upon the Dominion Government the need of a two-cent passenger rate and lower freight cars. A motion to this effect was passed.

In the afternoon the Dominion Sheep-Breeders' Association held their annual meeting. Vice-president for the different breeds were elected; John Campbell of Woodville, a well-known sheep-breeder, wrote, vigorously condemning the present management and deploring the action of the Dominion Government to refusing assistance to enable the sheep-breeders to exhibit at St. Louis. A. W. Smith defended the action of the various associations. Lloyd Jones of Burford strongly urged the association to exhibit at St. Louis, but a resolution pledging the association to loyally support the other association, who decline to exhibit, was endorsed.

Evangelistic Services.

Mr. Shields continued his expository addresses on the epistle to the Ephesians yesterday afternoon, and announced that he would resume the subject on Monday afternoon. As expected, there was a large audience at the evening service, when Mr. Shields gave an address especially to the Christians. His text was 1st Chronicles, 12-8, and he pointed out that David at this time was the annointed King of Israel, and yet was persecuted by Saul, from whom the spirit of God had been withdrawn. These men had recognized in David the chosen of God, and had gone out to him in the wilderness. David was a type of Christ, who was the uncrowned king, though annointed of God, and these men who went out to David were characteristic of the class that Jesus would have follow Him now in His humiliation. They were separated unto him, self-sacrificing, soldierly, strong and swift, and the speaker urged upon his hearers the need of being as these followers of David had been, in their following Jesus. When David was crowned king these men who had shared his privations were exalted to honorable positions. So when Jesus is crowned king those who have been true to Him shall reign with Him. At the after-service several yielded themselves to Christ. There will be no service this evening, but the meetings will be continued next week. The soulful singing of Mr. Whyte was very beautiful.

GRANBY RUBBERS WEAR LIKE IRON

A Rubber Tale

Cleaning Rubber

After Rubber "Biscuits" have been thoroughly soaked in water and softened, they are passed through the "cracking up" mill, that grinds the mass by means of heavy rollers upon which water is falling. More rollers press the rubber into long sheets or strips. Unless the "biscuits" are properly "cracked"—every particle of dirt removed—the finished rubber becomes hard and brittle.

Granby Rubbers

are easy to wear—hard to wear out—because they are made of the finest Para rubber, that has been cleaned and dried with the most exacting care. It costs more to render the rubber perfectly pure. But it is just that extra cost—that extra care—that makes the difference between GRANBY and the ordinary kind. The Canadian people know, from experience, that no others are "just as good." $10,000 TO BE RAISED FOR WALKS

Three and a Half Miles of Granolithic Pavement to be Laid.

Mr. Corby Makes Important Suggestion as to Flood Protection

At the meeting of the Civic Committees last evening considerable business was transacted during the two hours the Aldermen were in session. From the report it will be seen that a considerable sum will be expended in building granolithic walks during the coming season. As some of the Aldermen stated, this could be accomplished this year owing to the fact that the greater portion of the Public Works Appropriation last year was expended upon the streets which are in a good condition.

Mayor Chown and all the Aldermen, with the exception of Ald. Magrath, were present.

Public Works.

Ald. McFee, Chairman of this Committee, presided.

The only account passed was pay sheet No. 2, amounting to $136.42.

Street Surveyor Hulme presented a detailed report which showed that if $15,000 was spent in granolithic walks, 3 1-2 miles could be laid and it would require 3,000 barrels of cement. His report also showed where the walks were to be built.

Considerable discussion ensued upon the report, with the result that a motion prevailed that $10,000 be expended upon walks, and debentures for $8,000 of this amount be issued, the $2,000 balance to be taken out of the current revenue of the year.

It was decided that walks would be built upon the following streets:

On Pinnacle street, east side, from Hotel Quinte to Montreal Bank.

On Octavia street, east side, from Catherine to Holloway streets.

It was estimated that it would require about 2500 barrels of cement to do this work and tenders for this amount of cement will be asked for.

Ald. McFee suggested that on all the side streets the walks be 4 feet in width.

The suggestion was accepted.

A communication was read from Mr. H. Corby to the effect that the ice in the river in the vicinity of his mills at Corbyville was some 3 feet in thickness. If the river should break up suddenly he feared that the result would be disastrous to the city, and he suggested that a boom be swung across the river above the mills and hold the ice back.

The matter was referred to the Street Surveyor to investigate and report upon.

In the Fire, Parks, Light, Gas, and Market Committee the only business transacted was the passing of the following accounts:

Rathbun Co.	.75
Gas Committee Pay Sheet 1...	27.95

Ald. Marsh, Chairman of the Fire Committee, reported that Chief Campbell had asked for 500 feet of new hose.

The matter was referred to the Chairman and the Chief.

WATER.

In this committee, presided over by the chairman, Ald. Sulman, the following accounts were passed:

Treasurer's expenditures	$10.65
Pay sheet No. 2	6.48
T. S. Carman	7.00
Rathbun Co.	6.75
Newsome & Co.	3.00

Considerable discussion took place in reference to the hydrant in the vicinity of the rolling mills and upon the company's property. It is broken and it is alleged that parties have been taking water from it without authority.

The matter was referred to the Solicitor and Surveyor to notify the rolling mills proprietors in reference to it.

EXECUTIVE.

Ald. Panter, chairman, presided over this committee. The accounts passed were:

Treasurer's disbursements	$1.15
J. Duffin	7.43
Hart & Riddell	2.25

A statement was presented from Mr. J. H. Starling, tax collector, which showed that there was still about $6,000 on the roll of 1901 uncollected.

The matter was laid over until the Council meeting.

The City Treasurer, Mr. Price, sent a communication to the committee, which stated that he had expended $99.70 for extra help in connection with work, which he alleged should have been done before he took office. He asked to be reimbursed to this amount.

The matter was left in the hands of Mayor Chown and Ald. Sulman to look into and report to the Council.

From a statement presented it showed that Mr. W. Vandervoort, market lessee, owed the city at the present time $588.

No action was taken upon the matter at present.

Mayor Chown stated that he had received a communication from a Montreal firm, which offered to light the city for about one-half of what is being paid now, and also offered to provide power at the rate of $12.50 per horse power of 24 hours' service.

As the present lighting contract does not expire for some time, no action was taken on the communication.

This completed the work and the committees adjourned.

STUDENTS' NIGHT.

COLLEGIANS HAD A GRAND TIME AT BRIDGE ST. CHURCH.

Ditto will express the students' reunion given by the Bridge St. Methodist Church last night, for it would be impossible to surpass the ones of the past, that our scribes have exhausted their adjectives to describe and then were conscious of not having told the half. The only change was in the students and the programme, there were more of the former and less of the latter, and the students of '01, having fewer programmes of their own to carry out, were more appreciative of the one prepared by the committee. There were no addresses, but "words of greeting" from the Chairman, Mr. Wm. Johnson, the Rev. Dr. Crothers and the Mayor, Mr. W. W. Chown, who, bye the bye, as Chief Magistrate of the city, had the reception of his life, both when he entered the rooms after his civic duties and when he arose to speak. There was a vocal solo by Professor D. O. Cameron, recitations by Miss Lucy Berry and Miss Eadgley, piano duets from Misses J. Elliott and A. Young, and the Misses LaVoie, mandolin and piano; trio by Messrs. Harold Holton, Douglas Holton and Ernest Alford, and the Albert College quartette, Messrs. Raney, Totten, Vance and Hillis. Then followed coffee and cake. Mr. Russell Chown was secretary of the committee.

MEN'S CASHMERE HOSE.

Most men wear cashmere hose the year round. The Oak Hall has just received a large shipment of something in an extra quality, all sizes, 9 1-2 to 11, and the price is only 25c. We think it the best ever offered in Belleville for the money.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"A MAN OF THE WORLD."

Suzette in "Town Talk" describes Rose Stahl as a dream of a woman, and a negotiable type of an actress. "I'll tell you," says Suzette, "why I call her a negotiable type. Her ability is such and her possibilities are so great that it would be an easy matter to negotiate her entire future, while she is on the stage. Any manager in the country would be glad to engage her, and it really makes me shudder to think how much money she could really get, if she wanted to mortgage her future. You have never seen Camille unless you have seen her play it, but I like her "Hope Lovejoy" better than anything else I have ever seen her do."

HORSE AND TRACK.

Last night at Toronto the stake money, $2,000, in the Gipsy Girl-Looking Glass race, was paid over to Mr. A. Martin, owner of the winner, who was congratulated on his success and on the sportsmanlike manner in which the match had been conducted and decided, without a hitch or disagreement of the slightest nature. Mr. Martin, who is very proud of his good mare, and has this week refused several offers from would-be purchasers said that Gipsy Girl, who is still in Ottawa, would start there next week and he expected a further reduction of her record.—Globe.

The railways are having the fight of their lives with the snow. All trains on the Grand Trunk main line and on the Midland division were behind time, that which was scheduled to leave Toronto at 8 a.m. being two hours late. With the prospect of sleet and rain to-night and turning colder to-morrow, the outlook for improvement in the train service is by no means promising. The country roads, also, are simply "out of sight."

EXTENDS TEMISKAMING

Hon. Mr. Latchford Submits His Railway Bill to Assembly.

Debentures to Be Increased From $25,000 to $30,000 Per Mile—Government Railway to Be Extended to the Abitibi, and Power Is Taken to Lend Railway Commission $2,000,000—Ontario Will Defend James Bay Fisheries Rights

Toronto, Feb. 6.—The Legislature sat for half an hour yesterday afternoon, and in that time got through an accumulation of routine business.

The Commissioner of Public Works moved the first reading of the bill to amend the Temiskaming Railway bill. The bill provides for the extension of the Government railway to the Abittibi River, and enables the commission to increase the issue of debentures from $25,000 to $30,000 a mile. It also enables the Government to transfer lands along the railway to the commission for town sites, and to lend the commission two millions on their bonds. Mr. Latchford has given notice of a resolution along these lines.

Dr. Barr introduced a bill to amend the Public School Act. The object of the bill is to give the mayor or reeve of a municipality the casting vote in the case of a tie on the Public School Board.

To Prevent Over Capitalization.

Mr. Hoyle's bill to amend the Ontario Companies Act provides against the over-capitalization of joint stock companies and the watering of stock. It also provides for the issue of prospectuses or invitations to subscribe shares, wherein full details are given, being based upon the principles of the Imperial Act.

The Premier introduced a bill to confirm orders-in-council regulating arrangements with guarantee companies for ensuing the fidelity of public servants and to enable similar arrangements to be made in the case of Division Court officials.

Municipal Taxation.

The Attorney-General submitted for its first reading his bill relating to municipal taxation. The main features of the measure were made public when it was discussed by the special committee on assessment a couple of weeks ago.

A bill submitted by the Attorney-General takes the statute labor assessment out of the General Assessment Act.

Mr. Smith (Peel) has a bill which was introduced yesterday, to enable public libraries to charge a fee to non-residents.

The greater part of the session was taken up with replies by ministers to questions by members.

Provincial Fishery Rights.

In answer to Mr. Hendrie, Hon. Mr. Latchford said the Government had learned that a lease of part of James Bay was granted by the Dominion Government to Mr. McNee of Windsor. The Government of Ontario, Mr. Latchford said, asserts a proprietary right in the inshore fisheries of the waters of James Bay, contiguous to the shores of the province, and will maintain such right against the Dominion and the lessee of the Government.

Free Text Books.

To Mr. Graham the Minister of Education said the Government was considering the question of free text books, and it is expected legislation will be introduced this session.

Lease of Old Buildings.

To Mr. Foy, Hon. Mr. Latchford said the old Parliament Buildings were leased to the Grand Trunk Railway, March 23, 1903, for 21 years, the terms being $6,000 a year for 10 years, and $11,000 for the remaining 11 years. An option is given the company to purchase the grounds for $180,000 up to five years, or for $200,000 up to 10 years, or may re-lease it for a further term of 21 years on terms to be settled by arbitration, if not mutually agreed upon. The area is 9,344 acres. Tenders were called for by advertisement.

A General Election.

The Premier told Mr. St. John that the Government had not considered the subject of a general election before the election petitions, now pending in the courts, are disposed of.

The total amount paid by the province for the destruction of the Barberry shrub in Simcoe County is $866, Mr. Dryden informed Mr. Little of Cardwell.

Saloon Licenses in Ontario.

Mr. Stratton replied to a question of Dr. Barr, that there were three saloon licenses granted in the province in 1902 and 1903; five wholesale licenses elsewhere than in cities in 1902 and six wholesale licenses in 1903.

The Estimates Brought Down.

From Sudbury to Toronto

Yesterday a Parry Sound deputation asked the Government to grant assistance to the line of the railway from Sudbury to Toronto, the claim being made that the road would be of little value to the country unless it had an independent entrance into Toronto.

The Cold that "Hangs On"

The cold that sticks to you is not to be trifled with. If you cannot "shake it" in a very few days you may be sure there is something wrong. Your system must be run down, otherwise it would throw off the cold naturally and quickly. Cough cures may allay the tickling in your throat and give a little temporary relief, but they cannot reach the root of the trouble. What you require is BUILDING UP, and for this purpose there is just one safe, sure and effective remedy, and that is FERROL. If your cold hangs on, take

FERROL (The Iron-Oil Food) as directed and see how soon you will begin to put on flesh, how the enriched blood will course through your veins and bring back the color to your cheeks, how the nerves will brace up and the muscles harden and develop and then nature will soon dispose of the cold.

FERROL is not a cough cure, but it will infallibly cure the most stubborn cough by natural process, and will at the same time strengthen and invigorate the patient and restore lost vim and energy.

ALD. WOODS CONFESSES.

Declares That He Deliberately Padded the List With 19 Names of Voters—Mr. Riddell Satisfied.

Toronto, Feb. 6.—It was an animated story of falsification and fraud that Ald. Woods related during the civic investigation before Judge Morgan. For two hours yesterday the Fifth Ward alderman occupied the witness box, confessing that he deliberately padded the list with 19 names of voters, and implicating Rev. Frank Forster, a Presbyterian minister, as his assistant. He declared that he did not know his acts were criminal, and excused the nefarious practice by deliberately alleging that hundreds of persons had been placed on the list by other candidates in a similar manner, and that the evil was quite common throughout Toronto.

Special Prosecutor Riddell declared that he was quite satisfied with the first day's results.

Minister Contradicts Alderman.

Rev. Frank Forster gave an indignant and pointed denial to the story of the Fifth Ward alderman, which sought to throw upon him part of the responsibility for the padded list, which helped that statesman in the 1901 city campaign. The fact that Ald. Woods had been a member of the Bethany congregation of Clinton street, over which Mr. Forster presided, made his effort to implicate the minister especially serious. Woods was flatly contradicted.

The story of the day clustered around 19 names of voters being put opposite as many lots in Markham place, in September, 1900. This is Woods' ward. The property was owned by William Forster, father of the minister. Woods swore he secured the Forster family's consent to putting these names on that property, that would qualify 19 people to vote for him. The preacher denied that he gave the permission. He said Woods asked him if his family were all right toward him, and he said they were. That was the extent of any request Woods had made of him to his knowledge. He admitted, however, that he discovered that these names had been opposite his father's property, and he did nothing to have them removed.

Ald. Woods said he had the names enrolled, but that Commissioner Fleming knew nothing of it. He used this method to increase his vote. It was a common practice among candidates, he swore, but when pinned down by specific instances said he would go over the books later with Mr. Riddell.

Both Laxtons Committed.

Toronto, Feb. 6.—Two more officials were committed for trial by Magistrate Denison in the Police Court yesterday morning, in the persons of John E. and W. A. Laxton, D.R.O., and clerk respectively in subdivision 9, Ward 6, where it is alleged 14 ballots were illegally marked for Ald. McGhie, and the addition of crosses made on the Board of Education ballots in favor of Dr. Orr.

BANNERMAN AND CHAMBERLAIN.

Said That Joseph Said the Game in Africa Was a Bluff.

London, Feb. 6.—In the House yesterday Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman said: That when Mr. Chamberlain interviewed him June 20, 1899, prior to the war, and asked him if the Opposition would support the Government in sending out 10,000 troops to Cape Colony, he, Sir Henry, expressed surprise, whereupon Mr. Chamberlain said: "You need not be alarmed. There will be no fighting. We know those fellows won't fight. We are playing a game of bluff." Sir Henry said the Opposition refused the request. The statement of Sir Henry was greeted with roars of laughter from the Opposition benches.

Mr. Chamberlain, in reply, said he did not remember using the word "bluff." His only object in approaching Sir Henry was to make sure that the South African question should not be treated in a party spirit, so that the Boers might be convinced of the earnestness of Great Britain.

Tillson's pan-dried Oats have a rich nutty flavor that no other breakfast food possesses. This excellence is due to both the grain and the milling. You can thank the careful milling for the fact that there are no hulls in it—it's free from black specks and dust. It is just the pure, meaty oat, milled to perfection. A food, not a fad.

This is the season of the year when Scott's Emulsion does some of its best work. Fortifying the system against the ravages of winter is one of the most effective uses of Scott's Emulsion; it builds up the strength of the whole body and puts one in a healthy, vigorous condition.

Weak lungs, throat troubles or bronchial affections get more positive help and relief from Scott's Emulsion than from any other source.

Cod liver oil itself is very scarce just now; cheap adulterations and mixtures of inferior oils are offered everywhere.

This is why Scott's Emulsion should be insisted upon. It never varies from the high quality and absolute purity that has made it the standard for thirty years.

BALTIMORE FIRE SWEPT

Loss Already Estimated But Will Exceed $40,000,000.

Scores of the Largest Business Houses in the Wholesale District Completely Destroyed—Washington and Philadelphia Send Fire Fighting Apparatus—350 Lines of Hose Playing Upon Different Parts of the Conflagration.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 8.—The most disastrous conflagration in the history of Baltimore occurred here yesterday, raging practically unchecked during many hours, completely destroying scores of the largest business houses in the wholesale district, involving losses which cannot be estimated, as the fire was still burning fiercely when night fell. Owing to the wide extent of the calamity, it will be late to-day before even an approximate estimate of the loss can be made, though it is certain that it has already exceeded $15,000,000. The fire broke out shortly before 11 o'clock in the morning in the wholesale dry goods store of John E. Hurst & Company on Hopkins place, in the heart of the business district, with a series of loud explosions, which were heard in all parts of the city. It spread with fearful rapidity.

Dozen Big Warehouses on Fire.

In half an hour there was a dozen big warehouses in the wholesale dry goods district burning fiercely. The entire city fire department was called out, but it was utterly powerless to check the spread of the flames, which were aided by high winds, and by noon there were savage fires in at least thirty big warehouses, and the conflagration was steadily eating its way into blocks east, north, west and south.

All Fire Fighters Out.

Every bit of fire-fighting apparatus in the city was called into requisition as the flames spread, but the firemen realized they had a task too great for them to combat. Telegrams for fire engines were sent to Washington and Philadelphia, and about 1 o'clock six engines arrived from Washington and four from Philadelphia and joined in the battle. Engines from the stations in Baltimore, Howard, Anne Rundel and Hartford Counties were also summoned, some of the apparatus traveling a distance of thirty miles and more.

350 Lines of Hose Playing.

It is roughly estimated that there were 350 lines of hose playing upon different parts of the conflagration. Owing to the great congestion of fire apparatus, the crowds of people and the general confusion, many of the engines from out of town were unable to find a place where they would be of any service.

With loud roars wall after wall toppled to the streets and firemen ran for their lives.

At the City Hospital the physicians worked on the roof extinguishing the fires started by the rain of cinders.

Tremendous Explosion of Whiskey.

Eighteen women, two babies and seven nurses were taken from the Maternity Hospital in police ambulances. At 3 o'clock a tremendous explosion of about 150 barrels of whiskey stored in the upper floors of 24 Hanover street hurled tons of burning matter across the street onto the roofs of the buildings which the firemen had drenched with water, hoping to make Hanover street the eastern boundary line of the conflagration.

The flames quivered for a moment, and then took hold and ate into the structures.

Terrific Explosion Notified City.

The whole city was notified of the conflagration by a terrific explosion about 11 o'clock. A sharp, splitting roar was followed by a whistling noise. In the crowded churches the people became frightened and hundreds went to the streets to see what catastrophe had befallen. Then came another thunderous crash and dense columns of cinders and smoke shot up over the central section of the city, and in a huge brown column moved rapidly toward the northwest. Excited throng filled the streets. The columns of smoke, pieces of roofing and wood were carried along rapidly, and people were forced to dodge the rain of fire.

Two more explosions followed. Of all the spectators comparatively few saw the fire itself. They could not get within half a block of it.

At this hour—midnight—the fire is absolutely beyond control and all occupants of the buildings in the centre of the city are rapidly removing their valuables. So far as known at this hour no one has been killed.

It is now estimated that the money loss will exceed $40,000,000.

Have a Worthy Object.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Organization of the society for the promotion of international arbitration was perfected Saturday at a meeting at North-Western University. Edwin G. James, president of the North-Western University, was elected president.

Sam Horne Dead.

Toronto, Feb. 8.—The death occurred yesterday from pneumonia of Samuel E. Horne, for many years one of the province's best known typos, he having worked on several of the city papers. He was born at Thornhill 67 years ago.

TOLD IN A FEW LINES.

Toronto.—Saturday the Jersey Cattle Breeders met and elected officers. The President is R. J. Fleming, Toronto, and the Secretary, R. Reid, Berlin.

Philadelphia.—The Pencoyd Iron Works closed indefinitely Saturday, when 150 men, the last of a force of nearly 3,000, received notice that their services were no longer required.

Cologne.—Representatives of 20 steel works formed a combination and resolved to enter into competition with the Krupp and Phoenix Works and also the Upper Silesian Works.

Nice.—The prefectoral authorities ordered the expulsion from France of Messrs. Hurt and Ireland, two Americans, arrested several days ago on suspicion of being international swindlers.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—The jury in the case of Alderman James Mol, charged with having accepted a bribe of $350 in connection with the Lake Michigan water scandal rendered a verdict of guilty.

Pittsburg.—The two ends of the big cantilever bridge being built by the Wabash Railroad over the Monogahela River have been connected. The bridge is the longest of its kind in America, its entire length being 1,100 feet. When completed it will have cost over $1,000,000.

Toronto.—The Dominion Swine Breeders' Association on Saturday granted $300 to the Toronto Exhibition for prizes, conditional on the Fair authorities giving a like sum. Winnipeg Fair was given $300 and Brandon $100. The officers: President, Thomas, Teasdale, Concord; vice-president, R. H. Harding; secretary-treasurer, A. P. Westervelt, Toronto.

FLOOD AT THE FALLS.

Thaw Inconveniences Householders and Prevents Trolleys Running.

Niagara Falls, Feb. 8.—The thaw here was assisted by a heavy rain yesterday morning, and turned streets into rivers, filled cellars and caused Muddy Run Creek to overflow its banks and stop trolley traffic as well as flood houses and cellars. The water rose until it was running from one to three feet deep in the first storeys of the residences along the creek. In one house a woman was rescued by a man on horseback.

The Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway through cars were unable to run into the city, or to the American side of the river, owing to flood, and the local service to the south end of the city was also interrupted.

The water is subsiding.

Little Italy, a section of the city inhabited by Italians, was so flooded yesterday morning that it presented an immense lake, with the houses completely surrounded with water ranging from 2 to 10 feet deep. Many were unable to reach their homes.

Many Not on List.

London, Feb. 8.—(C. A. P.)—The Electoral Department of Australia proved weak during the recent elections. Numbers of voters were disfranchised, including the Lord Mayor of Sydney, although his wife figured in the list.

Cheap at the Price.

London, Feb. 8.—(C. A. P.)—Lieut.-Col. Welby, M.P., speaking at a Primrose League meeting in West Newington, said a small increase in the price of bread was but little to pay for the consolidation of the Empire.

Form National Clubs.

London, Feb. 8.—(C. A. P.)—The Morning Post urges the establishment in England of institutions such as the Canadian Club for the cultivation of the sense of nationality and the broadening of political views.

Same Old Story.

Windsor, Feb. 8.—Friends of John Purvis of Maidstone are worried over his continued absence from home. He has a wife and four children, the youngest a babe in arms. A young school teacher who boarded at Purvis' home has also disappeared.

THAT RAILWAY COMMISSION.

The more the composition of the Railway Commission is considered the more convinced must every one be that this important Act of Parliament has used, not in the interest of the carrying trade of the country, but to provide for political friends places of the Government and for purposes no one at present can possibly devine.

Contrast the appointments made with the promises and pledges given when the question of a Railway Commission was before Parliament by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. One cannot but marvel at the flagrant manner in which he has prostituted his powers in constituting this Board of Commissioners.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, when urging Parliament to accept the measure, promised to nominate as Commissioners a lawyer familiar with railway law, a practical business man, and a practical railway man.

Of the three men who have received appointments, only one, Hon. A. G. Blair, possesses the necessary qualification—a lawyer with railway training. Prof. Mills and Mr. Bernier, who will be Mr. Blair's associates, know absolutely nothing of railway matters. Mr. Blair, who received his appointment in consideration of abandoning his principles, will be the Czar of all the railways. He will have practically unlimited sway over the destinies of corporations, their employees and the general public. What confidence can the public have in this autocratic style of controlling the great railway systems of Canada, can best be judged by the disgust with which strong Liberals have received the Government's decision. Even the most pronounced of the Liberal organs of the Government do not hesitate to express their condemnation. Among them may be found the St. John, N.B., Globe, edited and controlled by Senator Ellis. He says: "As a whole the Commission does not seem to come up to the ideals of it which found expression in the debates in Parliament when the measure was passing through."

It is admitted on all sides that Mr. Bernier is an incompetent and under any Government desirous of promoting the country's interests, his nomination to such an important post would have been an impossibility. Mr. Mills is unknown apart from his connection with an agricultural college; yet he has been appointed one of those who will be entrusted with responsibilities weightier than those of any Minister of the Crown. The Commission as it now stands is a mere fiasco, and in the interests of the country deeply to be regretted.

LOAN COMPANIES.

A sensational paragraph appeared in the Toronto Star a few days ago, under the head of "Going For Loan Companies," in which it was stated that a man named McRae had entered an action against the Empire and Sun and Hastings Loan Companies for some $6,000 for services rendered, asking to have the Empire Company put into liquidation, and to have the Sun and Hastings made the trustees of the estate. On inquiry it is found that the Sun and Hastings Loan Company has nothing whatever to do with the case, and should not have been mentioned in connection with the suit. The Sun and Hastings Loan Co. had agreed to purchase the assets of the Empire Loan Company, at an assessed value, after all debts and Liabilities of the Empire Loan Company had been paid or settled. So that even if Mr. McRae were successful, it would not in any way affect the Sun and Hastings Company, other than having to pay less for the assets of the Empire Company. So that those interested in the success of the Sun and Hastings need give themselves no uneasiness about the McRae suit. The Empire Loan Co. will have to attend to that, not the Sun and Hastings Company. It is a matter of no consequence to the latter which wins the suit, if it ever goes to trial.

TIMELY TOPICS.

An exchange states that a man named Bob Walker some time ago bought 300 acres of bush land in the neighborhood of Webbwood for a few hundred dollars. He sold it recently for $250,000, as it turned out to be good mining property. The sum named sounds pretty large for a mining property in this region. What sort of mineral does the land contain?

* * *

Mr. Pense, the member for Kingston in the Ontario Legislature, proposed an amendment to the Opposition amendment to the address to the effect that it was a matter of satisfaction that all the constituencies are now represented. All the Liberal members voting for the thing also. The inference is that they regarded it as a matter of dissatisfaction that the constituencies were not all represented at a previous session. The amendment is not in praise of Mr. Ross.—Montreal Gazette.

* * *

Our neighbors across the line are always looking for the biggest of everything, and they have got it again and are welcome to it—the biggest share of the recent snow storms. The Oswego Times states that the "flyer" over the Ontario and Western from Chicago was sixty hours late in reaching Oswego.

* * *

Says the Montreal Herald: "Mr. Charles Hyman, the new member of the Government, is a public man of the strenuous type. NO MAN OR WOMAN CAN HAVE DYSPEPSIA

And Still be Agreeable, Attractive and Popular—A Certain Cure in Reach of All.

There is nothing that will put you to the front so rapidly in business or social world as a cheerful disposition and a pleasant appearance. Other things being equal people will go out of their way to give the fellow a lift who always wears a cheerful countenance. The man or woman with a cranky disposition and a sour face will always meet with an indifferent if not a chilly reception. The commercial traveller, who is the recognized business barometer, appreciates better than anyone the value of this rule and governs his actions accordingly.

Dyspepsia destroys all the agreeable qualities that enter into a man or woman's make-up. It is almost a human impossibility for anyone with a severe case of dyspepsia to look pleasant. The continuous, miserable, cast-down feeling is bound to make itself shown in the appearance and conversation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the sufferer's certain cure. They are so recognized all over the world. The cures they have brought about and the happiness they have caused and the suffering they have relieved has made their name a house-hold word in all the English speaking world.

The reason that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a certain cure is that they are a natural cure. There is nothing to prevent them curing. They contain the essential ingredients of the digestive fluids of the stomach and simply do the identical work of the stomach, relieving that weakened organ and permitting it to rest and recuperate. Could anything be more simple or natural? They are bound to cure. They cannot help themselves. It is just like putting a new stomach into a man — if that were possible—and letting the old one go off on a vacation. Rest is what it needs. Nature will do her own work of restoration, never fear.

All druggists means all druggists. They have become so necessary to the people that the druggist simply has to keep them anyway. There are other remedies that he can make much more money on if he could sell them, but he can't. He will not take chances on losing his customers by not always having on hand a supply of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Peterboro, Feb. 8.—A very serious stabbing affray occurred here Friday night, as a result of which Guisseppe de Paolo, an Italian, lies at the point of death at St. Joseph's Hospital. His brother, Pattaleone de Paolo, came home drunk, and in an ugly mood created a disturbance and finally picked a quarrel with his brother over a trivial matter. The first thrust of his stiletto struck Guisseppe in the head inflicting a severe gash. The second blow entered his victim's lung, and was followed by one in the spine, one between the ribs and several other gashes on the body. Pattaleone was frightened after committing the deed and fled. Pattaleone was arrested Saturday morning.

The resolution of the government of India on the subject, notices that in 1901 more human beings were killed by wild animals than in any year since 1875, except one, and reached a total of 3,651, while last year it was 2,836, and the number of deaths from snake-bite was 23,166.

Tigers killed 1,046 persons, of whom 644 perished in Bengal, sixty-five being in a single district. This was due to the depredations of a man-eater, for the destruction of which a special reward was offered, without avail.

Wolves slew 377 persons last year. A campaign was undertaken against these animals in Rohilkland and the Allahad division, and they have been almost exterminated in Cawnpore district, where they used to abound.

Eleven thousand one hundred and thirty deaths took place in Bengal alone from snake-bite, 3,256 of these being in the Patna division; 80,796 cattle (an increase over the previous year) were killed by wild animals last year, and 9,019 by snakes. Tigers killed 30,555 of these, leopards 38,211, and wolves and hyenas most of the remainder.

On the other hand, rewards were paid last year for the destruction of 1,331 tigers, 4,413 leopards, 1,858 bears, 2,373 wolves, and 706 hyenas, while the number of snakes killed for reward was 72,595. For the destruction of wild animals a sum of $96,952 rupees was paid, and 3,529 rupees for that of snakes.

VERMILYEA & SON.

A Goddess of Africa

A Story of the Golden Fleece.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

He knew that she was bidding farewell to what had been her home for many years, and which must have some niche in her memory, no matter what bright scenes the future might open up.

The Zambodi girl was to be left behind, temporarily at least, and there was a logical reason for such a move.

Rex could remember reading of an army about to abandon a fort or strategical post, leaving a few men behind to keep the fires burning and thus deceive the watching foe.

That was to be her mission.

From time to time up to midnight she was to perform some little task in which she had been carefully drilled by her mistress, and in various ways beguile those who watched below into the belief that the fair god still occupied her retreat.

Perhaps this would be through the burning of a little colored fire such as might awe the barbarian heart—anon it might turn to a song born in Scotland's borders, such as Marian had taughte her how to sing with feeling, not unlike her own.

Rex saw that the idea was a bright one, and did not hesitate to compliment her on it.

At last it was time to go.

They had a long and wearisome journey before them, with dangers on every side. The chances of their reaching Buluwayo in safety were rather problematical; but they had brave hearts, and were ready to do and dare, whatever the future held.

He was naturally curious to know how she expected to pass the cordon of warriors which the medicine-man had thrown around the base of the kopje, for if any one was thoroughly acquainted with the ground the worker of wonders should be.

All this had in a measure been prepared for by the remarkable man who spent so many years among the Zambodi, an exile from his own race.

Hence Rex was not greatly surprised when instead of passing out through the cabin door, she lighted a rude lantern, and asked him to follow into the depths of the mountain.

As they proceeded, he several times caught suspicious fumes in the air, which he recognized as the same agency through which he and Bludsoe had so nearly been overpowered when endeavoring to peer down into the awful fissure where the wretched black spy had been swallowed, and where the eternal fires slumbered, and boiled like furious demons in chains.

This gave him the notion that they were navigating some of those same weird passages connected with the ancient temple, and he would not have been surprised if at any time he found himself once more in the frowning presence of that assemblage of pagan gods.

Such an event, however, did not occur.

Perhaps Maid Marian respected the sacred character of the temple, even as her father had done before her, knowing what veneration these black sons of Africa had for the idols before which their ancestors or the people who dwelt in the crater centuries back, were wont to prostrate themselves—at any rate she had never gazed upon those monsters of a bygone day, which was a blessed thing with regard to her peace of mind, since their hideous faces were enough to haunt one's sleep for many a year.

This fidelity to a trust bequeathed from generation to generation, has numerous examples in the life history of the aborigines of the New World. In Mexico, in Arizona, and in Peru the Indians faithfully guard the ruins of ancient temples where the Aztecs or the Incas worshipped gods representing the sun.

These people have not for many generations prostrated themselves before the fire god, and only by tradition do they know what was the character of those devotions belonging to a musty and dim past; and yet in their eyes a sort of fanatical sacredness hangs over certain secret cave-temples, which are zealously guarded in order that the profane foot of no white man shall ever enter to defile them.

After considerable winding about in narrow passages, Hastings' fair guide told him they were close to the exit.

She thereupon extinguished the light which had thus far been of inestimable value to them as a guide to their feet, and the gloom seemed doubly dense in consequence.

Rex felt a hand touch his, and was wonderfully docile about being led—indeed, he would not have entered a protest should such pleasant association have been continued indefinitely.

And thus they issued from the passage, reaching the outer air through one of the numerous vents which the subterranean fires had formed in the age when dumb old Kroka was a bellowing giant, raining [illegible] and boiling lava upon the [illegible] for leagues around, traces of [illegible] still be found under the forest trees, and the soil that had accumulated from decaying leaves and woody fibre.

Sold in Belleville by G. S. McKeown.

The young American could not place his new position. They were at the foot of the elevation—he had guessed that from their continuous descent, but it took him a full minute to master the lay of the land and figure where the Zambodi settlement was situated.

He was aided in getting his bearings by a peculiar red glow that suddenly appeared up along the side of the mount, and it hardly needed the whispered mention of the Zambodi girl's name from Marian to tell him this light came from in front of the refuge, and was intended to keep the attention of Hassaje and his fierce spirits of war directed toward that quarter while the young mistress effected her escape through the lines.

This crude cordon of the blacks could hardly be expected to equal a military trocha such as a Campos or a Weyler would throw across the distracted "Gem of the Antilles;" but at the same time Zambodi warriors had sharp eyes, and [illegible] sounds with the [illegible] of a springbok, so that the utmost care must be taken in passing their line.

Hastings felt doubly anxious because he had more reason than ever for desiring to escape.

While his own life alone was the stake that hung in the balance, he could be as reckless as he chose, but now there was cause for the exercise of caution.

If fortune should be kind and allow them to escape the grim dangers that arose on every side, threatening destruction as did Scylla and Charybdis to the mariners of old, the fact of their having shared these perils in common would be a precious tie to bring them closer together.

Rex found he could contemplate such a delightful contingency with remarkable complacency; though his good sense would not allow his building castles in the air while so much remained to be done.

They started upon their task of eluding the witch-doctor's guards.

The presence of the red fire above was a point in their favor, for the warriors on picket duty would hardly be looking for any need of their service so long as they had reason to believe the fair rival of Hassaje remained at her lodge.

Stealthily they moved away, like shadowy spirits. Rex could just detect the dark form of his guide beyond. To his mind she seemed to move over the ground more like an ethereal being than one of flesh and blood; and more than once Rex found himself wondering whether after all she might not in some measure partake of the wonderful personality with which in the minds of the Zambodi she was endowed; though each time he smiled at his folly and secretly chided himself for being influenced by the air of superstition with which he had of late been so completely surrounded.

He proved more clumsy in his progress, despite the fact that he had hitherto prided himself on his agile qualities, and his long experience in threading the mazes of an African thicket.

Perhaps this was partly due to the fact that he believed it his duty to keep his eyes on the trim figure of the girl just ahead. Sometimes the very gods men worship prove an ignus fatuus for their feet.

At least Hastings would have done better to have paid more attention to the perils that beset his path.

His feet became caught in a dangling vine, without his being aware of the fact, and the consequence was, when he attempted to take another step, he felt his support give way, so that he went crashing into the bushes with noise enough to alarm the dead.

Then came startled exclamations, a rush of feet, and loud signal cries, proclaiming that suspicion had been aroused and a pursuit already inaugurated.

CHAPTER XXIV.

HOPE IN A SCOTTISH CLAYMORE.

Hastings disentangled his clumsy feet from the wretched vine, and was almost immediately erect, in time to hear the result of his unlucky contretemps.

The mischief was already done, and nobody but children and fools cry over spilt milk. Only immediate and hasty flight remained, with the chances decidedly against them. He inwardly cursed himself for a clumsy jackass. Self castigation never mended anything, and Rex had never forgotten his horror upon witnessing the annual march of a sect of fanatics called Flaggelants in New Mexico, who once a year bear a cross across the sands, scourging each other and themselves with whips like scorpions, following out the Mohammedan's idea of self-torture in order to secure remission of sins done in the body, until covered with blood, and their flesh like raw beefsteak, they faint under the ordeal.

"We must fly!" she exclaimed, and Rex gritted his teeth at the thought of having so disastrously ruined their chances of success when they seemed most bright.

Together they started.

She was as swift as a bird, and Rex, who had once actually prided himself on his qualities as a sprinter, began to believe he must have lead in his shoes, his feet seemed so heavy.

Twice he begged her to leave him, for he thought not of his own peril, only that which must come upon this dainty witch should she fall into the power of that bad old magician whose hatred exceeded all bounds.

The girl indignantly refused to profit by her superior lightness of foot, and preceding him in the mad race seemed to be only intent on selecting the easiest route so that he might make time.

Pursued they were beyond a shadow of a doubt, for on every hand wild shouts rang out; while the rush of feet and the swish of branches after the passage of swift forms, all told the story.

Rex could see but one finis to such a mad chase. It would be utterly impossible to elude their pursuers, swarming after them, more than one of whom might be a mortal Mercury, so far as speed was concerned.

By degrees they would be overhauled, and sooner or later must turn at bay, to stand almost panting for breath and meet the rush of scores of enraged savages.

He could in imagination see the blacks swarm about him as he stood at bay—with each chamber of his revolver he might down a warrior; but how puny such a defense. The air would sing with the rush of assegais, and they would make a human pincushion of his wretched body.

Well, what of that every one must die some time or other, and a brave man cannot ask a more glorious end than the fate of a soldier, his face to the foe.

How many thousands of valiant souls thus met their fate at Balaklava, Inkerman, Waterloo—at Gettysburg and the best of battles around Richmond? Bah! after all, only a little strengthening of the nerves is needed to go down a hero, looking the inevitable calmly in the eye. There are souls that remain unconquered, even in death. Witness the commander of a British troopship that foundered off the African coast—when it was discovered that the vessel must go down, and the boats were lost or splintered, he defied the grim monster, sounded the call to quarters, marshalled his men on deck, and as the vessel sank the military band was playing "God Save the Queen."

It was not about himself Rex felt the most concerned — the thought of Marian's probable fate racked his heart with anguish and almost forced a groan from his lips.

Not once did the idea enter his head that she might have some object in altering their course—indeed, it was doubtful whether he knew of the fact, his whole attention being taken up in trying to maintain his equilibrium and produce as much speed as possible, so that she might not be delayed.

It was such a race as must remain like an ugly dream forever in a man's mind—a test of endurance and swiftness the outcome of which must be life or death.

Three separate times Rex sprawled his full length upon the ground, but he was up again like a flash, and speeding on.

His breath came in gasps, his brain seemed on fire, and every fibre of his body was trembling under the strain.

Never in all his life had he put forth such violent exertions, and it was really disheartening to find them all in vain.

No matter how he dashed along over all manner of obstacles, regardless of bruises and cuts, following the lead of his guide, the sounds of pursuit followed close at his heels, with the steady persistence of fate.

He even had a sudden horrible fear that the black warriors were heading them off; and that it was only the quick turns on the part of the girl that prevented this catastrophe from being consummated.

Of course such tactics, while successful for a time, could not long prevail.

Hastings gripped his weapon with a feverish eagerness to open upon the foe—he felt as though a volcano seethed within his breast, and that a vent must speedily be forthcoming—his nervous system was in fact wrought up to such a pitch that something must give way, so great was the strain.

Still he found no mark at which he could discharge one of the death's messengers concealed within the cylinder of his modern six shooter, for while the runners were on either side they did not seem to believe the time had come to close in.

Though the American had not been aware of the fact, and had believed her occasional words of encouragement were simply intended to buoy up his spirits, Maid Marian had a deep motive in changing the line of their flight, so that instead of running directly away from the mountain they were now headed in such a way that would require but a slight turn to bring them directly into the kraal.

She knew full well that with these men tigers in pursuit they would never escape by direct flight.

A terrible tragedy was impending. She doubtless thought more of the American than of her self. If a stay the execution could be secure. something might crop up in their favor.

This was the utmost of her hope—to put off the evil moment as long as possible.

She knew of a chance—perhaps a very slim one, but anything was better than the certain fate awaiting them if they continued to exhaust themselves in the unequal race.

Without warning Rex suddenly saw the stockade on his left, and by this he knew they had almost retraced their course.

Then for the first time it dawned upon his mind that Marian had some plan in view—he watched her more closely than before, endeavoring to recruit his almost exhausted strength in order to be ready for the crisis, which he knew must be close at hand.

A wall loomed up in front—what appeared to be the front of a log cabin, strange as such a thing might seem in this country where the natives seldom dream of putting up a shelter more substantial than those made of grass and bark, with thatched roofs.

The girl darted through the doorway, and Hastings followed, but staggering, fell.

She seized hold of his arm and with a strength he had not dreamed she possessed dragged him across the sill, even while the savage shouts sounded in his ears that told of the arrival of the enemy.

Then the heavy door was slammed shut and a bar dropped into place, but not an instant too soon, for the dull impact of human bodies striking the timbers could be distinctly heard.

Rex had by this time managed to struggle to his knees.

He was somewhat confused, but the fact that they were temporarily safe from the fury of the black horde made a deep impression on his mind.

Nor was he apt to soon forget that he had been drawn behind the barricade by the little white hand of the fair being across whose path he had been thrown by one of the strangest freaks on record.

With each passing second Rex became more like himself, and presently was able to use his voice.

Of course his first thought was to discover what manner of place it might be they had entered. Along the American frontier in days gone by, such cabins had sheltered the early settlers, and were on many an occasion of sudden attack turned into stout forts or blockhouses, behind the walls of which the inmates used their long rifles upon the Indians, with deadly effect.

A few words from the girl dissipated what there was of mystery clinging about the little hut.

It had been their home when they first came to live among the neighbors of the warlike Matabele whose headquarters had been Buluwayo. Later on they had abandoned the cabin and sought refuge up on the side of the mountain. The hermit had with his own hands built the little structure just outside the walls of the kraal, and though years had since fled it was about as sturdy and substantial as when first erected.

After all it was but a respite or breathing spell that was granted them. The end seemed just as certain as when they were running before the impis.

Already came the thunder of weapons on the oaken panels of the rude door, as some of the more impatient among the braves started to break a passage into the cabin.

Rex had his revolver, but once that was exhausted how could he stay the awful tide?

Louder grew the pounding, whether done with rude axes or the points of spears, and Rex could hear the splinters of wood being torn away.

He nerved himself for the crisis, and took up his station near the door. At least he would block the passage with bodies for a time. When the revolver failed him he might use it as a cudgel, and thus fighting go down under the weight of his foes.

A splinter struck him, as one of the spears cut through the wood. This warned him to step to one side where he waited with feverish eagerness the opening of what he had every reason to believe would be his last mortal encounter.

Of course it was pitch dark, and he had not the remotest idea what the girl had been doing this while.

He was just on the point of calling out to warn her of the danger when he felt her tugging at his arm, and as he put out his hand his fingers closed upon something that felt wonderfully like the hilt of a sword.

"What's this?" he cried out in sheer amazement, half believing he must be dreaming.

"It is an old Scottish claymore he brought here with him, and which was hidden behind a log in this place for an emergency which never came while he lived. Use it, Rex Hastings, and may Heaven give you power, so you may bring credit to that unknown ancestor of mine who wielded that same weapon long, long ago on the bloody fields of Hastings and Stirling."

He heard no more, for the furious assault of the Zambodi had shattered the oaken door, leaving a hole large enough to admit a man; and Rex had only time to swing the bulky weapon above his head, using both hands to give force to his blow, when a dark form filled the opening, and the terrible conflict was on.

BOOK IV.

IN THE DAY OF BATTLE.

CHAPTER XXV.

THE BURNING OF THE KRAAL.

A desperate man engaged in a hopeless enterprise may be capable of displaying a bravery far beyond the ordinary standard.

Rex saw no gleam of light ahead. The situation was appalling, and his only resolution seemed to be a fight to the last gasp, and inflict as much injury upon the enemy as he could before giving up the ghost.

History has many shinning examples of the prodigies of valor performed by men whose only expectation was to die in harness.

Possibly the most illustrious on record is that of the heroes Crockett, Bowie and Travis, who with their comrades died at the Alamo in Texas during the war for independance, after making a barrier of the dead bodies of their Mexican foes almost breast high.

And a man with more than the ordinary amount of strength in his arms could not easily discover a more serviceable weapon with which to perform such feats of valor than a keen-edged claymore, such as won renown upon fields like Bannockburn of old.

Rex had Scottish ancestors, and the fire of battle swept strongly through his frame as he seized upon the historic weapon.

The daring warrior who had led the charge upon the door managed to push his wretched body half way through the opening, but there he remained, for with a mighty rush the claymore swept down upon its fatal mission.

A significent thud, a groan, and the hole was temporarily blocked.

Then those outside dragged the unfortunate back and a second form filled the gap.

The same terrible scene was repeated, for Rex was prompt to accept the gage of battle thrown down by the impis.

So long as his arms were able to rise that good old steel, he would hold to the task, or until he had by such hacking and hewing reduced the warrior band to a minimum.

The task was intensely disagreeable, and only a positive necessity for such action could reconcile him to its repulsive features.

By the time three of their members had been prostrated beneath the swinging blade, the blacks began to reason together, for they appeared to have a little common-sense.

At least they ceased to invite the inevitable by entering such a death trap, and set their wits to work engineering some new scheme whereby the enemy might be outwitted.

Luckily it did not occur to them to use that besom of destruction, a fire-brand, perhaps because of excessive caution with regard to the kraal.

A high wind had sprung up and chanced to be blowing directly from the cabin in the direction of the conical lodges, so that in case the hut went up in a blaze, a myriad of sparks must be carried across the stockade and on to the thatched roofs with a most disastrous result.

This was not the only means that might be employed in order to accomplish the ruins of the young man who stood so bravely at bay and defied them. There were others.

Presently when the cunning Hassaje had been given a chance to think, an attack was made upon the structure itself.

Willing hands were ready to assail it, and when two score of athletic fanatics are turned loose upon one little cabin there is but small chance of the latter withstanding the assault any length of time.

Some of the blacks began to smash in the remnant of a door, using a log for the purpose of a battering-ram.

No doubt it is an old trick, since just such things were quite the go in the early days about the time of Richard the Lion Hearted; and the history of the American border presents numerous instances where a tree-trunk has opened a passage for those seeking ingress to block house as well as feudal castle.

Time has not reduced its effective qualities, and it serves the purpose of those who wield it in the wilds of South Africa to-day just as well as in the time of chivalry, when bolts from cross-bows, and shafts from good yew bows, instead of leaden bullets met the charging assailants.

This was only a beginning.

Others of the blacks swarmed upon the roof where they worked like beavers, intent upon tearing the structures to pieces, just as a pack of infuriated wolves might rend the quarry that had fallen into their power.

It was plain to be seen that the end was very near, nor could poor Rex imagine how the inevitable might be warded off much longer.

When the artisans working so industriously above had succeeded in tearing off the main portion of the roof, they would at a signal come tumbling down upon him like a swarm of bees, while at the same time others just as eager and bloodthirsty would come pouring in through the doorway.

He might make a few passes with the venerable Scottish claymore, and then—well, they sleep sound who fall in battle, says an old Arab proverb.

Before that fearful end came he would like to touch her hand again and say good-bye.

The calmor was deafening, so that it would have been useless for him to have called her name.

He had just started to grope his way toward the spot where he believed she must be, when suddenly a flash of fire illuminated the interior of that hut.

Then Hastings saw the girl in the act of applying a match to what he instantly discovered to be another little product of the firework manufacturer's art.

Even as he looked he saw the sparks began to fly, and held his breath in suspense. Could she save them by such a manifestation of her power? It might cause the superstitious blacks to cringe for the moment, but when the show was over would they not recover their courage, inspired by the passion of the witch-doctor who had determined to regain his olden supremacy or die in the attempt.

Sure enough, when the first colored ball flew through the open doorway and landed among the bold wielders of the battering-ram, they were almost paralyzed with sudden fright.

There is no fear so great as that induced by superstition, whether shown by a poor Kaffir, a Hottentot, or the ignorant man who meets a ghost in a country lane. The knees become weak and the whole system collapses.

No doubt there was an immediate falling down of the warriors, a hugging of the earth in absolute fright, and when a second gay ball floated up through the darkness, looking like a blood-red, angry eye, those on the roof scrambled down to terra firma with an alacrity that might have been extremely ludicrous at another time.

Rex was by this time at the side of the girl as she stood by the doorway.

"If you have another give it to me," he whispered hoarsely, and she put the last remaining firework in his hand.

"Turn it toward the kraal—shoot every ball of fire over the stockade with the wind!" was what he exclaimed.

A sudden thought had flashed into his mind—no, it was more than an idea, it could only be called an inspiration.

She understood what it meant.

The roofs of the huts, in most cases the lodges themselves, were constructed after the manner of a thatch.

Once let those blazing cotton balls drop upon such an inviting nest and the consequences might be readily discounted, for a match applied to shavings could hardly have a more speedy result.

Only a start was needed, and the blustering wind that blew from ocean to ocean would look out for the rest.

When both of the ten-ball tubes settled down to work bombarding the kraal, the effect was quite picturesque.

Singly or by doubles the colored balls mounted the stockade and descended within. It would have been a high barrier indeed that could have refused them entrance.

Rex was not there to entertain an audience—it meant life and death, everything on earth to him and to the fair being at his side. Others might serve as magicians and enthrall the fierce impis by lofty flights of fire balls that vanished mysteriously ere they had half completed their descent.

These fire-messengers were entrusted with a mission, and making but a slight curve, just clearing the top of the stockade, they flew some to the right, others to the left, causing the most painful sensation among the women and children of the lodges.

It would be strange indeed if nearly everyone of them did not find lodgment upon a thatched roof, starting incipient blazes that the hustling breeze would fan into a roaring, seething conflagration.

Perhaps it was a fearful means of distracting attention from themselves, but at the moment some such dernier resort seemed their only hope.

Nor was it in vain.

A ruddy glow began to appear that increased with every passing second and Rex Hastings knew, even before their reservoirs of sputtering sparks and colored balls had become exhausted, that their work was on a fair road to be accomplished.

The kraal of the Zambodi was doomed.

They had worshipped the god of fire, and now he had come to destroy them in his wrath.

Such an impending disaster simply paralyzed the blacks. White men would have at least exerted themselves to tear down the lodges that were on fire, and make a brave if useless effort to stop the spread of the flames.

Not a hand was raised for such a purpose.

No one got out the patent fire grenades or played upon the flames with a chemical hand engine — no clanging bells brought valiant fire laddies bustling up, to turn a hose upon the red demon, and rescue imperiled human beings.

Once the blaze took hold in such a confused mass of inflammable huts, and all hope was gone. Half a dozen of the best engines in London or New York could hardly have held the avalanche of fire in check when it reached its greatest force.

Billows leaped high into the air, myriads of sparks swept toward the heavens, and the roaring of the seething mass actually dwarfed the chorus of shrieks and cries from those who fled in terror before its mad advance.

It was a fearful sight, one that could not easily be forgotten—those rows of lodges going down like cardboard, swallowed in the greedy maw of the red avalanche, while in every direction men, women and children, all of them black as a South Carolina darky, fled in abject terror.

When it was discovered that the village was on fire the warriors who had been so intent upon securing the death of the fugitives, forgot all else in the fear that overwhelmed them in connection with the safety of the helpless ones now endangered.

Some sped away to the gates of the kraal, with feet winged by a fearful dread.

Others, urged on to more speedy action by the actual necessity of the case, started to climb the stockade, which could be accomplished by agile men when not harassed by defenders within; and their dark figures soon stood out in silhouette against the glowing background, as, reaching the top, they clung there a few seconds ere taking the plunge beyond.

Rex looked around eagerly.

"The coast is clear—now is our time for flight!" he exclaimed.

Hope had dethroned despair within his heart, for there now appeared a chance of escaping the cruel fate that so lately had seemed to be their portion.

There were some forms upon the ground, but they showed no movement, for the edge of the historic claymore that the hand of a Bruce or a Wallace may once have touched had done its work well.

Maid Marion was not slow to recognize the truth of what he said.

The chance was given them—such an opportunity would never come again.

She followed him across the shattered fragments of the door. Outside it was as light as midday, such was the illuminating power of the great torch that licked up the lodges as though they were grains of powder.

CHAPTER XXVI.

A PAIR OF DROMOS.

Something that glittered caught the eye of Hastings. He knew it was the hammered and polished point of an assegai, and mechanically stooping possessed himself of it, though had he been asked he could not have told why he did so.

The confusion was at its highest point, but presently it would begin to ebb, when the fire-fiend no longer found fuel upon which to feed.

And while the clamor arose like the wail of lost souls in torment, they turned away from the thrilling scene.

Although through a freak of fortune the smile of prosperity seemed to once more hover above their heads, the future was uncertain, and might contain much that was disastrous for them.

This brilliant illumination promised to do them one service at least, since by its aid they could make better time, avoiding such obstacles as tripped Rex more than once during their recent race.

There was something fascinating about the burning village, and Hastings several times sent a quick glance over his shoulder as he ran.

So Lot's wife, consumed by curiosity, had in days of yore been unable to resist the temptation to gaze back upon the city given over to destruction, and suffered in consequence—and when Rex landed in a heap among some vines and bushes he concluded it would be good policy to look ahead.

In so doing he learned that their flight was not destined to be accomplished without new dangers; for just in front of them he discovered the figure of a tall Zambodi warrior, whose attitude was exceedingly warlike.

Hastings was in a fighting humor—he experienced the thrill of a veteran in the midst of battle—the shouts and clamor attending the burning kraal, together with his flight and the furious encounter at the cabin all seemed to stir him to a fever heat.

Accordingly, when he discovered this lone figure so resolutely blocking their path and inviting him to single combat, he made directly for him, feeling that, the encounter being inevitable, the sooner it was over the better.

It chanced that the spot where they came together was open and free from trees, a little glade as it were, just suited to a desperate duel.

Rex handled his assegai with considerable adroitness, but the other parried each thrust and it began to look as though the delay might prove fatal to their chances of escape.

Although he had hated to use his revolver for many reasons, it began to look as though such a thing would become necessary, and he was even fumbling about among the numerous dangling cat-tails with the intention of dragging the six-shooter into the argument, when by a mere accident the wooden pole of his assegai struck the black knuckles of the savage whom he had marked for an early, and swift transit to the happy hunting grounds of the Zambodi.

The effect was simply electrical, for the toughest sort of a trooper ejaculation burst from the lips of the black duelist, almost petrifying Rex, who burst out with:

"Jim. Jim Bludsoe, is it you?"

And the wild looking savage with whom he had been fencing so desperately in the attempt to have his life staggered back and dropped his own weapon while he cried:

"The devil! It's Mr. Hastings, sure pop!"

At this a couple of figures ran forward, bursting through the sheltering bushes.

No need to tell Rex who they were, for the one in the lead was tall of form, with the figure an athlete might envy.

Another moment and he found the arms of the Englishman around him in spite of the paint and paraphernalia that went to make a full-fledged Zambodi warrior out of him, and enjoyed the felicity of a genuine bear hug; while Bludsoe danced around them endeavoring to imitate the eccentric gestures and hops of a warrior preparing to go upon the warpath, and Little Phil stood near by, evidently in sympathy with it all.

This was an event worthy of being celebrated—an event to be marked in the calendar of their lives with a white cross.

From despair they had suddenly found reason for the wildest hope, and Rex gave his artist friend as good a thing in the line of a bear hug as he received.

"This is a miracle — we had reason to believe you might be in that house they were bombarding, but I never dreamed you had changed to a Zambodi," declared Lord Bruno.

"And how came you here—where are the others, Monsieur Jules, the doctor, Red Eric?" asked Rex, as a horrible suspicion flashed over him that these brave fellow adventurers might have met the fate that ever hangs over those who invade hostile lands.

"Don't worry—the boys are all right. We were to meet them here after they had set fire to the kraal."

"What! Was that your work?"

"I rather think you got in ahead of the boys. When I saw the fire balls popping over the stockade I knew it was all day with the whole business. What a grand sight, Rex. Perhaps some day we may paint it between us. It would make a scorcher for an exhibition. But tell me, my dear fellow, is this young girl with you the party known as the fair god of the Zambodi?"

Lord Bruno's voice took on a strain of eagerness and anxiety, as he turned toward the party in whom he was so deeply interested.

Before Rex could make a reply several figures loomed up close by, a signal was uttered, and upon Bludsoe answering, who should advance but Red Eric and his two companions.

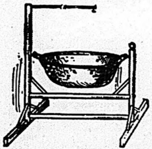
A Dainty Bassinet.

One of the first things baby will want is a bassinet. Here is an easy way to secure one that will cost less than a dollar: Purchase a large clothes basket and take the handles off. Pad the inside with cotton batting and line it with any white, dainty cotton fabric. Then purchase from a house furnishing store six window curtain poles finished in white. These are usually covered with a thick white enamel and cost 10 and 15 cents each. Cut these in the desired lengths and screw the ends together with three inch screws. Screw steel hooks on the upright poles and swing the basket from them. The head post of the bassinet should run up two feet above the basket, and a crosspiece from the top will furnish support for the draping curtain of dotted swiss muslin. The whole cost of such a bassinet made by the writer was just 76 cents. The wood is already finished off in white, and with a little white enamel to touch up where the poles have been scratched or cut in putting them together the work will be finished in good shape.—Cor. Good Housekeeping.



BABY'S BASSINET.

Fashion's Echoes.

Dull silver and gold galloons, laces and ornaments give an especial charm to this winter's millinery.

In velvet of chamois or of deeper yellow gold tint and in a banana shade are constructed some of the finest cloth costumes of the full dress order.

Single flower ornaments for the side of the head are charming.

A sumptuous season of velvets, laces and feathers is assured.

Jaunty little muffs divide favor with the larger ones.

A plain moleskin set minus any addenda of ermine and other garniture has a softness of color peculiarly its own and is decidedly useful.

Lingerie frills are the most original note of the season's sleeves.

There is a growing liking for simple skirts, especially when the material is soft and adapted to flowing lines.

Crush girdle belts are one of the popular items.

TIMELY TOPICS.

It is said that a six months' cruise will decrease the speed of a ship 10 per cent. This is owing to the Barnacles that gather on the hull. No wonder that the Ontario ship of state, with a thirty-two years gathering of Barnacles sticking to her, cannot make any progress and is drifting helplessly.

The Kingston Whig celebrated its seventieth birthday on Saturday, having been established in the same year as The Intelligencer, namely, 1834. Our contemporary also hoisted its flag in honor of its having attained a circulation of 10,000 copies—daily and weekly. The Whig is an excellent newspaper. The only thing wrong about it is its politics.

Verification of the old saying that the longest way around is the way about is furnished by the following despatch from Montreal to the Toronto Telegram: 'Yesterday when the telegraph wires were blocked, owing to the wreck, a telegram from St. John to Halifax went all the way to Ireland and back—10,000 miles—owing to there only being one wire connecting Newfoundland with the mainland.

It is the Poison

That Causes Pain.

THE POISONOUS WASTE MATTER IS REMOVED BY THE KIDNEYS, LIVER AND BOWELS WHEN THESE ARE KEPT HEALTHY BY

DR. CHASE'S

Kidney-Liver Pills

The kidneys, liver and bowels are known as excretory organs, because it is their mission to cast out of the body the poisonous waste material which would otherwise poison the system, cause pains and aches and give rise to deadly disease.

Because of their direct and specific action on each of these organs, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are wonderfully successful in overcoming pain and in thoroughly eradicating from the system the very cause of serious and painful ailments.

Once the bowels are regular and the kidneys and liver active in filtering the waste material from the blood, good health and a proper working of the bodily organs are assured. It seems useless to experiment with new-fangled medicines, which are only intended to afford relief, when you can be thoroughly cured, and the cause of your troubles removed by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mrs. W. Wilkins, Henry street, Belleville, Ont., states: "I suffered a great deal with pains in the small of my back, caused from kidney trouble. Whenever I stooped I could scarcely rise again, the pains were so severe that it affected my general health and I was becoming very much run down. Since using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills I can say that my trouble has entirely disappeared. I can speak in the highest terms of this medicine from the way it acted in my case."

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

PEACE ON EARTH.

A Quick Cure For Worry, and It Is Something Other Than "Don't."

The conviction of the present writer, after a prolonged consideration of the subject, is that worry is a lung disease and is caused by lack of oxygen. I have yet to meet the man or woman who could breathe deeply and worry at the same moment. Do not take my word for this. Test it for yourself. When the preserves are burning or the just filled clothesline falls in the mud or the baby eats up a box of pills under the impression that they are candy, what is the first thing that you do? Fly to the scene of disaster? No; that is the second thing. The very first thing that you do is to hold your breath, and it is safe to say that for several hours after the annoying circumstance has occurred you breathe just as little as possible.

When "things go wrong" for an entire day, you take in about enough oxygen for a medium sized canary. When you insist that you do breathe, else you wouldn't be alive, I can only reply that there are different degrees of "aliveness," and the chronic worrier is not at the head of the class.

Every one has heard the saying, "The coward has a narrow chest." Whether we consider fear to be the cause or result of a contemptible amount of breathing capacity, it is certain that these particular moral and physical defects—these two birds of a feather—are frequently found in company. Fear is the essence of worry.

It is difficult to benefit the body without helping "the body's guest" or to cultivate the mind without improving its clayey tabernacle. Regard worry as a physical infirmity, and it can be successfully treated by plain eating and outdoor living, aided by special exercises for the cultivation of the chest. Consider it as purely a mental or moral defect, and it may be cured, not by preaching or exhortation nor by the reading of little books which point out that we are living in a vale of tears, but by the rational cultivation of one or more of the mental faculties.—Ethelwyn Wetheral in Good Housekeeping.

Useful Wrinkles.

Good Housekeeping correspondents furnish these practical items: A wrinkle I learned from a girl who works in a large upholstery house is that the best sofa pillows are covered with "waxed" cotton. This is done by ironing the inside of the cotton cover with a hot flatiron rubbed on a cloth well saturated with beeswax. When treated in this way it is impossible for small elusive downs to work through.

After a long illness my hair became so dreadfully matted that we were afraid it would have to be cut, but our old family doctor came to the rescue, telling us to saturate the tangled locks with alcohol. This done, they cleared as if by magic.

Turning the hem of a petticoat on the right side, I find, does away with the catching of heels therein, thus tearing loose several inches of the hem. This may take a little longer at the time of making, as the seams at the bottom of the skirt have to be turned, but it will pay in the end.

When making raffia baskets, I pad with the straws out of matting, which does just as well, as the raffia is easier and much more economical.

An Unwritten Law.

There is an unwritten law which makes it bad taste to overdress in the forenoon on the street. There is also an unwritten law about carriage dress and street dress. If functions in the forenoon require full dress, then those who assist should go to them in carriages. Where there is no fixed dress obligation the gathering is marked by those who are wearing street suits and those who have chosen to wear carriage dress, but it does not always follow that those dressed for carriage protection and privacy have driven to their destination. Those who adhere to street dress for the street and carriage dress when they are driving are the exponents of good taste, good form and wide experience in the proprieties and fitness of living under correct social conventions.—Vogue.

Little Girl's Evening Dress.

This charming little evening or dancing frock is suitable for a child from seven to ten years of age. It is in silk muslin over a muslin slip. The silk is adorned with many insertions and softly gauged on to the yoke beneath the quaintly folded fichu. The graceful open sleeves are ruffled and gauged to correspond.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

The average wages represents but 12 hours of human labor.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation.—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alternative, and in neutralising the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

Will be Found an Excellent Remedy for sick headache. Carter's Little Liver Pills. Thousands of letters from people who have used them prove this fact. Try them.

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption.

Much talk, many lies.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

A DEATH "DODGER"

Chronicle all the escapes from death and put them in letters that all the world can see, and you'll find if history were written faithfully, Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart will hold the record for having "baulked death's rampage."

It goes to the very brink and snatches from the death Angel's grip. Gives relief in thirty minutes. It is a heart specific. A few doses relieve the most stubborn of cases, and a few bottles will turn the scale of health. It never fails to cure. 19

PRESIDENT LINCOLN.

REV. DR. TALMAGE PREACHES AN ANNIVERSARY SERMON.

LIGHT UPON HIS CHARACTER

The First Typical American—Growth of a Century—Man Who Comprehended Within Himself Strength and Gentleness, Majesty and Grace—A Lesson in Patience That Is Very Timely.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 7.—At the time when the whole nation is honoring the memory of Lincoln this anniversary sermon sheds a new and interesting light upon the character of the statesman-President. The text is James v., 8, "Be ye also patient."

"What was the most powerful address you ever heard?" I once asked my father in one of our conversations when journeying around the world. "Well," he replied, "I have listened to nearly all the great American orators of my time. I have been personally acquainted with most of them and have spoken from the same platform with many of them. But without any doubt the greatest address I ever heard—if it is to be judged by its electric and overwhelming instantaneous effect—was that delivered by Henry W. Grady of Georgia in 1886 at the annual banquet of the New England Society. I had just finished a speech on 'The Coming American' when Mr. Grady arose. After a few introductory remarks he said: 'My friends, Dr. Talmage has told you that the typical American has got to come. Let me tell you that he has already come. Great types, like valuable plants, are slow to flower and fruit. But from the union of these colonists, Puritans and Cavaliers, from the strengthening of their purposes and the crossing of their blood, slow perfecting, through a century, came the man who stands as the first typical American, the first who comprehended within himself all the strength and gentleness, all the majesty and grace of this republic—Abraham Lincoln.'" These words were quoted almost verbatim from memory.

The tremendous impression produced by Henry Grady's speech was not due to the fact that he was saying something that no other man had said before, but to the fact that, for the first time since the Civil war, the great leaders of the north realized that Lincoln was appreciated and honored as much south of Mason and Dixon's line as he was among the Michigan pines and upon the Illinois prairie.

Since that time I have read almost every biography written about the personality of that man who stands second to only one, if he does not stand side by side with George Washington, in the affections of the American people. I find that Henry Watterson of Kentucky has as deep a reverence for Lincoln as had Charles W. Dana or Nicolay or Joseph Medill or William Herndon or David Davis or Swett or Speed, who knew him by personal contact. Therefore I am sure that on this Sunday preceding the celebration of Lincoln's birthday I shall leave with me the cordial approbation of the south as well as of the north as I draw from his character lessons of inspiration and pay tribute to his memory. At heart he was a true friend of the south, and I believe that his untimely death retarded the consummation of reconstruction at least a quarter of a century.

Most Lincoln eulogists start, as Henry Watterson beautifully expressed it, by looking into a "crystal globe that, slowly turning, tells the story of his life, and they see therein a little heartbroken boy weeping by the outstretched form of a dead mother." But this I do not intend to do. You are already familiar with the facts of that eventful life. In speaking of him to-day I would try to get the keynote of his character and show the predominant quality which made him so great and so useful to the nation. That quality I conceive to be his patience, and I shall recall to your minds the times and the circumstances in which, by the exercise of that quality, he proved the grandeur of his nature. Standing by the grave of this great man, we see the figure of sanctified Patience. We find this figure not cut from stone or cast in iron, but made out of dust which was once living, breathing, throbbing, moving flesh and blood. As the paramount desire of Lincoln's last four years on earth and those tumultuous years which led up to them was to save the Union, I shall try in this brief eulogy to show how, by glorious patience, that great purpose of his life was accomplished.

In the first place, we must start with the well accepted and universally acknowledged fact that Abraham Lincoln was a man of positive characteristics. William Herndon just after Lincoln's nomination wrote to Senator Wilson of Massachusetts that when Lincoln made up his mind to do anything he had "a will of iron." After the assassination in Ford's theatre Senator Wilson wrote a letter to Lincoln's old law partner that he had truly analyzed Lincoln's character in reference to this one characteristic. But, though Lincoln was a positive man and had well settled convictions, he never believed that "two wrongs make one right." In order to accomplish his patriotic purposes he was unwilling to defile the majesty of the law. He was always ready to try to change the law, but never to break it. In his methods and principles he was neither violent nor revolutionary. He was not, as many people supposed in 1860, a wild eyed visionary or a crazed enthusiast who would, to reach a beneficent end, trample on vested rights and interests regardless of justice and equity. He himself was obedient to the laws as well as a faithful executive of the law. He was a respecter of the law in private life as well as a conservative lawmaker in public life.

What was Lincoln's stand when a great abolitionist meeting was held in Springfield some years before the war? There the opponents of slavery proposed by force of arms to defy the public authorities and drive out the slave-holders from the then territory of Kansas. When called upon for a speech Lincoln shocked some of his best friends and, as some thought, then and there signed his own political death warrant. "Let there be peace!" he emphatically said. "Revolutionize through the ballot box. Your attempt, if there be such, to resist the laws of Kansas by force is criminal and wicked, and all your feeble attempts will be follies and end by bringing sorrow on your own heads and ruin on the cause you would freely die to preserve." What said he in his famous speech delivered on July 17, 1858, in answer to one of the charges made against him by Douglas? "Now, as to the Dred Scott decision, for upon that Senator Douglas makes his last point against me. I am opposed to that decision in a certain sense, but not in the sense in which he puts it. I say that in so far as it decided in favor of Dred Scott's master and against Dred Scott and his family I do not propose to disturb or resist the decision. I never have proposed to do any such thing. I think that in respect for judicial authority my humble history would not suffer in comparison with that of Judge Douglas." When some enthusiastic admirers asked him this question: "Has the territory of Kansas a right to come into the Union a slave State if the people wish?" Lincoln said: "Yes. By the national law it has a right which you cannot take away unless by national legislation you change that law."

On the approaching anniversary of this great American's birth let us learn one of the greatest lessons of his life. Even amid the injustices and the weaknesses of the law let us bow before and recognize the majesty of the law. Because in some municipalities the citizens may be terrorized every winter by "holdup" men who walk around at night shooting down innocent pedestrians in cold blood, that is no reason why, in order to extirpate them, we ourselves should become criminals. Always obey the law. If it be wrong, then make the law right, but never defile the majesty of the law.

Though Abraham Lincoln was a man of positive characteristics, yet he was patient in the fact that he was ready to keep step with the march of the common people. He never for one moment left the path of rectitude and honor. He was not a foolish color bearer, leaving the ranks of his fellow soldiers and plunging far ahead of the lines, thereby courting death and annihilation. As the national standard bearer he was ready, if necessary, to "mark time," so that the common people could catch up with him, that all might advance in line.

All things may be lawful, but all things are not expedient. What did he do after he had delivered his first inaugural address? Did he do anything to antagonize the southern leaders and people, as some rash statesmen would have had him do? No; that was not his way. He had "malice toward none and charity for all." He bided his time, though in every town, village and city he was called a coward. If possible he wanted to win the southern leaders back by love and kindness. He knew that hate and billingsgate and club never won a willing subject. He was patient, very patient. His patience was expressed powerfully in the words he once spoke to Alexander H. Stephens at the memorable conference held at Hampton Roads with the southern commissioners. "Stephens," he said, "let me write 'Union' at the top of that page, and you may write below it whatever else you please."

To placate the southern leaders was one reason for delay. But there was still another reason why he was patient. There were scores and hundreds and thousands of men at the north as well as the south who believed that as the original southern states came into the Union of their own accord they had therefore the right to leave of their own accord. As Lincoln in his quaint language put the "popular sovereignty idea," "They believed that the big kettle of the United States Government could be squeezed into the little kettle of state rights." Horace Greeley believed this; Wendell Phillips believed this; other mighty northern leaders believed this. Had Abraham Lincoln, on the night of March 4, 1861, started the invasion of the south he might have had two wars on his hands. War would have been in the front of him, war in the rear of him. When he entered the White House he had two purposes: First, to do anything and everything that was honorable to save the Union. Secondly, if there was to be a war then let others take the responsibility of striking the first blow.

But if Lincoln was willing to be patient with his northern enemies and with the south how much more was he willing to be patient with his so called friends, upon whose arm he had a right to lean and from whose influence he had a right to expect succor and help? If the armies of Lee were attacking him in the front, the rancorous tongues of some who were his closest advisers were broadcasting their evil murmurs everywhere.

"Well," says some hearer, "why did he allow those men who were nearest to him to criticise him? Why did he not do as one of the Springfield friends suggested, 'kick them out of office?'" That question cannot be answered in a better way than by quoting the words Lincoln spoke when he said, quietly, that it was easy enough to kick a man out, but not always so easy to get another man to fill his place and do as well as he did. In those few words we realize the results of Lincoln's patience with those so called friends who kept publicly criticising their chief. He once said to Leonard Swett, "I may not have made as great a president as some other men, but I believe I have kept the discordant elements together as well as any one could." Like Abraham Lincoln, are we as Christians ready to let men criticise us and find fault with us if only we can use them for the cause of Christ, as Lincoln was able to use Stanton and Seward and Simon Cameron and Hooker and McClellan and Thaddeus Stevens and Greeley and Bennett to help save the Union?

As the twilight is the most beautiful part of the day, so we find that the mellowing sunset of Lincoln's life was even more glorious in its golden reflections than when he was accomplishing the great purpose of his life—the preservation of the Union. Like Moses of old, he was able to lead his people through the dark wanderings in the wilderness; but, also, like Moses, he was not to be allowed to plant his foot in the promised land. The Jordan which separated him from his southern people in the reconstructive period was to be a great river whose waters came from the falling tears that millions of eyes shed over his bier and by his coffin lid. In those few days that led up to Appomattox and thereafter we may know what fruit the patience of Lincoln would have borne. His purpose was to bind up the nation's bleeding wounds and make the "boy in gray" and the "boy in blue" clasp hands as brothers.

How, then, did he want to reach out the hand of reconciliation? On Feb. 5, 1865, after the outcome of the war was practically decided, he drafted a bill by which, if Congress consented, $400,000,000 was to be paid on account of the liberation of the slaves. He presented this proposed bill to his Cabinet, and when they unanimously rejected it the president, as Norman Hapgood tells us, "sadly folded it up and laid it away." As soon as Richmond had been evacuated he got on the cars and started south. He went not as a conqueror, but as a messenger of peace. In his plain, simple way he practically said to the old Virginians: "I am your brother. I am your friend. Come, be my brother and my friend." When that other messenger of peace, Ulysses S. Grant, practically said to the officers and men of the disbanding southern armies alike: "Go home. Take your horses and plow your fields. Go home and be our friends and comrades instead of our foes," what was Lincoln's comment? "Good! Good! All right! Exactly the thing!" Admiral Porter gives these as Lincoln's words, which he heard him repeat a dozen times.

To-day, if I had it in my power, I would start a pilgrimage to the Springfield tomb. I would have the southerner as well as the northerner, easterner and the westerner go there and learn the lesson of gentle and glorious love. "What," some cynic cries, "would you have the southerner go there as to a shrine?" Yes, my brother, I would have the southerner go to Lincoln's tomb and kneel, the same as I would have the northerner go to the sacred tomb of Lexington, Va., and bow reverently before the dust of honored, gentle Robert E. Lee. Both of these men were conquerors. Both have subdued and by their example will yet subdue great hosts whose numbers, in the dim future, will be counted by the millions. Both have won and will win their greatest victories not by the sword, but by love. When the civil war was closing these two great leaders were able to say to each other, "Thou art my brother." Both are enshrined in their nation's love and admiration.

Therefore, fellow countrymen, with the universal affections of the American people, cannot the north come with her sacred dust of Springfield, Ill., and the south come with her sacred dust of Lexington, Va.; then after the north and south with their precious burdens have both met at the national capitol at Washington cannot the two different sections which once stood face to face in battle now stand side by side and bury their two sacred dead in one grave? Then over this one grave, entombing the commingling dust of the two sacred dead, cannot and will not the reconciled north and south chisel one single God given epitaph, such as old Kentucky placed upon her memorial shaft, erected upon the once blood soaked field of Chickamauga to her "boys in gray" and to her "boys in blue:" "As we are united in life and they united in death, let one monument perpetuate their deeds and one people, forgetful of all asperities, forever hold in grateful remembrances all the glories of that terrible conflict which made all men free and retained every star upon the nation's flag."

Abraham Lincoln's parting words to his fellow townsmen when for the last time he left Springfield depot for the national capital were these: "To-day I leave you. I go to assume a task more difficult than that which devolved upon Washington. Unless the great God who assisted him shall be with and aid me I must fail, but if the same omniscient mind and Almighty arm that directed and protected him shall guide and support me I shall not fail. I shall succeed. Let us all pray that the God of our fathers may not forsake us now. To him I commend you all. Permit me to ask that with equal sincerity and faith you will invoke his wisdom and guidance for me." This was the keynote of his whole gentle, loving, patient, forgiving life: Trust in God and patient dependence upon the divine will. To Abraham Lincoln's God I commend you. May that God forever guide us all!

Spectacles.

There has been considerable discussion as to who invented spectacles and who had the pleasure of wearing the first pair. The honor is generally awarded to an Italian named Salvino Armati, who died in 1317.

CEMENT STONES.

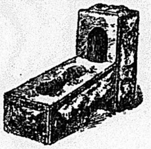
Any Farmer Can Make and Use Them for Farm Purposes.

Comparatively inexpensive machines have been produced which, when used by even the ordinary laborer, can produce cement stone of varying sizes at a cost of 15 to 60 per cent. less than kiln run brick and in the east at the same cost as lumber.

The stone can be made to resemble cut stone, thus giving an added beauty to the building. Three hundred pounds of cement and one yard of gravel will make about thirty-seven stones 8 by 10 by 20 at a cost of 10 cents each, $33.70, even estimating your labor at $1.50 per day, which will take the place of 800 brick at a cost of $8 per thousand, $6.40. Any farmer can make them. It costs less to lay these stones than it does brick or stone. The inside of the wall can be plastered with a thin coat of cement, thus making the wall and floor one unit. It therefore must be absolutely air tight.

Cement stones do not decay, will endure for generations, are impervious to moisture, are cheaper than any other building material save lumber and, taking into consideration their enduring qualities, are even cheaper than lumber and can be made by any ordinary farm laborer. The building does not require painting, which is a saving in original construction and maintenance. The use of cement stone for building purposes is no experiment, as many large factories, power houses, cold storage plants and residences have been erected of cement stone. The dairy building at the Toronto Industrial Exposition, Toronto, is constructed of Portland cement stone and is highly recommended by the Canadian Commissioner of Agriculture. So says a Rural New Yorker writer, who gives further information as follows:

The composition is usually six parts sand and one part cement. Secure good, sharp gravel, which contains a small amount of sand. Do not screen. Do not use sand or gravel that has any surface dirt, hardpan or clay or any particles of decayed wood or other foreign substance. For an economical foundation wall the byproducts of a stone quarry or even cinders or refuse from mines may be used. This means a source of revenue where before the disposal of this waste was an expense. Place sixty shovelfuls of sand and gravel upon a platform, spreading it only three or four inches thick, and then spread over it 100 pounds of Portland cement. Mix thoroughly by shoveling to the centre, making a ridge six or seven feet long and two feet wide. Rake it down and shovel it as before, and by handling it two or three times it will be well mixed. If it does not show a good, even color give it another turn, for much depends upon getting the cement evenly distributed. Hollow out the top and put on water enough to moisten it thoroughly. Then shovel as before. It should have water enough to give it the appearance of freshly dug earth. The mixture is now ready for the cement stone machine. There are several machines upon the market, covered by different patents, operated by various devices, some molds which are hand tamped and others by pressure, making the blocks either hollow or solid. The hollow blocks are advocated for the ventilation throughout the entire wall, making it warmer in winter and cooler in summer and reducing the cost of manufacture.



BUILDING STONES OF CEMENT.

Some face the stone with a mixture of two parts sand and one part cement, thus making an extra strong concrete, greatly adding to the beauty and increasing the imperviousness to moisture. Samples of the stone are shown in the cut. The stones are removed from the machines upon wooden pellets and placed in the shade and out of the wind and allowed to cure. Each day they are given all the water they will hold. This is continued for ten or fifteen days, when they are ready to use. By various pigments they resemble brown and other stone.

Use of Lime.

Lime is not used as much as formerly, and yet it is one of the most essential substances entering into the composition of plants. It is not only plant food, but it exerts a chemical effect on the soil which brings into use other materials which are beyond the capacity of plants to reduce. When green food is turned under, lime will be found a valuable adjunct, as it neutralizes the acids in the soils and combines with them. It is a heavy substance and has a tendency to go down; hence if broadcasted on the surface of a field it will sooner or later be within the reach of plants. Stone lime that has been air slacked until it is fine is better than any other form, and that from the gas works (mostly sulphites and sulphides) should not be used if the ordinary stone lime can be procured. Every farm should be limed occasionally, as the benefit is sure to be much more than the cost, and no harm can result.

Shelling Corn.

It would take the entire population of the United States to shell the corn crop by hand. The steam sheller will shell a bushel of corn a minute, while the most practical hand would occupy an hour and a half

FOR MORNING WEAR.

Some Smart Shirt Waists Made of Substantial Materials.

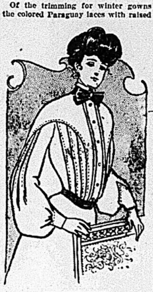
Plain shirt waists of sicilienne, cheviot and broadcloth are worn beneath tailor made coats. They have longer shoulders and more fullness than formerly.

One of the most useful things to possess is an unlined skirt of white cloth well cut and well fitted. This may be used winter or summer with fine white waists and a pretty white hat.

For dinner or restaurant wear nothing in the way of a white waist equals the blouse of cream net incrusted with narrow lace insertion or applique. This is made very full, with a transparent yoke and a collar and very much puffed sleeves set into a deep tight cuff of lace.

The three-quarter coat is seen in walking suits in conjunction with the kilted skirt. It blouses and is belted in with a wide band of crinkled suede leather.

Of the trimming for winter gowns the colored Paraguay laces with raised effects are quite suitable for smart wear and are most effective on cloth and woolens with a smooth surface. Some of these laces are woven in two distinct colors, and others form a frame of medallion shape to surround the daintiest little embroidered sprays. A few of these motifs of lace and embroidery are quite sufficient to trim a bodice, and they are also used on coatees and boleros, and especially on smart waistcoats of pale colored cloth.



A NEW SHIRT WAIST.

The illustration shows a new shirt waist having a deep yoke which gives the long shouldered effect.

WHAT WOMEN ARE WEARING

Return to 1830 Styles—Figured Silks and Accordion Plaitings.

White cloth is as fashionable as ever, but it is only for the well to do on account of the rapidity with which it soils.

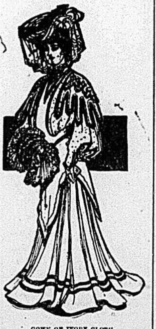
We have returned to the 1830 styles in matters of dress, as witness the full skirts and the deep pointed waistbands. Old fashioned silks, flowered or plain, are trimmed with frayed out ruches of pale blue or pink.

Loose hanging boleros of black chiffon velvet are trimmed with dainty gold thread tassels and bands of embroidered lace.

Both large and small spots and even velvet brooches are coming into favor. Velvet gowns of every kind are seen for both day and evening wear.

Soft chine silks, together with flowered muslins and mulls, make charming gowns and blouses for evening wear. They are particularly becoming to young girls.

Accordion plaited black crepe de chine made with a wide girdle and a handsome jeweled buckle is a very useful as well as becoming afternoon gown.



GOWN OF IVORY CLOTH.

Zibelines and similar materials are again much used, as well as long haired, thick vicunas. Invisible checks, stripes and other quiet patterned fabrics are smart.

The picture shows a gown of ivory cloth trimmed with narrow fur and spotted velvet. JUDIC CHOLLET.

INDIAN BEADWORK.

SOME OF THE ATTRACTIVE PRODUCTS OF THE PRESENT.

Beadwork Is Used Not Only For Personal Ornaments, but For Household Decorations—Beautiful Fancy Neck Chains and Waist Belts.

Beadwork is now being used in almost every imaginable form, not only for personal adornment, but also for household embellishment. As the popularity of the work increases the productions of past centuries are brought to light, and among various styles, ancient and modern, Apache Indian work is perhaps the most sought and may be reproduced at the least expense. The first important item in the work is the purchase of one of the small hand looms of which there are a number of kinds. As to the things that may be made the Delineator enumerates, among others, the following:

FIG. 2.
FIG. 3.

ARTISTIC NECK CHAINS.

Neck chains are very popular. They are made for carrying fans, watches and ornaments of all descriptions and sometimes with pendants of fancy decorative beads, when their object is solely ornamental. The beads are effective when strung upon threads and then twisted or braided into chains. The usual length of these chains is fifty inches, and frequently they are finished on the ends with gold or silver mountings, or a strip of chamois is sewed firmly on the beads, making a good hold for any suspended article.

At Fig. 1 a striking example is given, very effective if two colors of beads are selected. Take, for instance, gold and dead white beads. Begin with one white, one gold, one white, two gold, one white and one gold.

Daisies are the prominent feature in both designs illustrated at Figs. 2 and 3. Fig. 2 may be used for a belt as well as a neck chain. Turquoise blue and silver beads produce a charming combination for this pattern. The slides are made on the loom and are arranged in position according to the weaver's fancy. The square design in the center as well as the outer edge is made of blue beads, while the remaining space is filled with silver beads. If amethyst and gold beads are selected for Fig. 3, an effective arrangement will be acquired.

HANDSOME BELTS.

Fried Beans.

Fry two ounces of chopped onions in one ounce of butter until golden brown. Put into them about a quart of cold boiled white beans, season them with a teaspoonful of salt and half a saltspoonful of pepper, moisten them with half a pint of any brown gravy and serve them hot.

Concerning Quince Jelly.

The best quince jelly is made of the peeling and cores of apples and quinces. The jelly will be just as fine in flavor and much more tender if the apple cores and skins are used. No better jelly is made of the pulp of fruit than of the skin.

Still Useful.

She's getting old, she scarce can see,
She's deaf as any stone,
But still she's popular, for she's

TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

HOCKEY.

The return hockey match between teams representing Belleville and Trenton High Schools was played here on Saturday between the hours of 5 and 6 o'clock. The teams were evenly matched, as the score would indicate, and when time was up both teams had 5 goals to their credit. The boys of our High School claim the game, as they desired to play on until the tie was broken, but for some reasons the visitors declined. As Trenton defeated our boys when they visited that town a few days ago, they no doubt considered it wisdom on their part to have the match declared a draw rather than to play on and possibly lose it. During the progress of the game some excellent rushes were made on both sides, and at times it was somewhat exciting. The game was free from any rough play to any extent, and only three of the boys were sent to the fence, one of the visitors being thus punished for talking back rather saucily to the referee. It was a few minutes after 5 o'clock when the referee, Mr. Winchester, called the boys to the centre and the match started. After a few minutes' play the visitors scored a goal, but our boys soon after the face off evened up the score. At half-time the score was 3 to 2 in favor of Trenton. In the second half our boys scored 3 goals to the visitors' 2, and the Belleville boys were apparently fresher at the finish than their opponents. An effort was made to induce the Trenton lads to play on, but it was of no avail.

The teams and their positions were as follows:

Belleville.		Trenton.
	Goal
McGinnis		Lowery
	Point
Donald		Murdoff
	Cover point
Holton		Armstrong
	Rover.

The hockey match of the season and which attracted a large and enthusiastic crowd was played at the rink between 10 and 11 o'clock on Saturday night. It was the tinsmiths' night and they and their admirers were out in full force. The teams represented the Lewis Company and Mr. Wm. McGie's establishment, or, in other words, the "Oxford" range against the "Happy Thoughts." It was a great game, the spectators being treated to a fine exhibition of shinney as played in the improved style. During the progress of the match a number of the players measured their length upon the ice, but the game went on all the same. The players were encouraged by their supporters and it was difficult to tell which team was the favorite. Mr. John Gerdineer was referee, and during the progress of the game called four off-sides. Had he adhered strictly to this rule there is no doubt the game would have broken the Sabbath. The result was a victory for the "Oxford" tinkers, the score being 5 to 4 in their favor. The teams were as follows:

Lewis'.		McGie's
	Goal
Brower		Coulden

Hegan		Huffman
	Cover point
Barragar		Frechette
	Rover.
Geary		McGuire
	Centre
Deacon		Perkins
	Right wing
Addison		Carter
	Left wing
Langman		Campbell

After the game the teams, with a few invited guests, partook of an oyster supper.

An interesting match was played on Saturday evening between the Beavers of this city and the Rovers of Trenton, both teams being composed of boys under 13 years of age. The boys played well and with much earnestness. The result was a victory for the Beavers, who scored 4 goals against their opponents' 2. Mr. W. Armstrong, of Trenton, was the referee. The teams were as follows:

Beavers.		Rovers.

Graham		Armstrong

ANOTHER STORM.

GREAT CHANGES IN TEMPERATURE WITHIN A FEW HOURS.

Yesterday this section of the country was visited by various degrees of weather. During the day it varied to a considerable extent. Shortly after 5 o'clock a stiff wind sprang up from the southwest and increasing in velocity as the night wore on. Later in the evening the wind shifted to the northwest, turning very cold. Owing to the trees being coated with ice pedestrians found it rather uncomfortable, as the ice was showered from the trees in considerable quantities. On the lines of railways traffic was much impeded. The fast express going west yesterday afternoon came to a stand still near the second overhead bridge, owing to ice on the rails, and the pilot engine had to be sent up to help the train over the grade. The local train which left here at 5.50 this morning for Toronto ran off the track near Newtonville. The Madoc train, due here at 9.10 a.m., also ran off the track. Considerable injury to fruit trees from the breaking of small branches.

NEW SPRING NECKWEAR.

When a man wants a new tie, you cannot blame him for wanting that which is new. Old ties at any price are not desirable to a well dressed man. The Oak Hall have just received a large shipment of 25c lines for spring. Suppose you have a look at them.

Evangelistic Services.

Three very interesting services were held in the Baptist Church yesterday, and, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, there was a good attendance at each service. Messrs. Shields and Whyte, assisted by the pastor, conducted the services. Mr. Shields gave an address at the morning meeting on the "Kingship of Jesus," taking as his text John, 19: 22. That Jesus was a kindly man was recognized by even his enemies. Pilate, in writing the superscription on the cross, was fulfilling the decree of God, and wrote as truthfully as though he were the angel Gabriel, though he was unconscious of doing so. Christians were appealed to to enthrone Jesus in their hearts voluntarily and consciously. The service in the afternoon, with the Sunday School was addressed by Mr. Shields, "The healing of Jairus' daughter," Luke 8; 41 being the text of a tender talk on the power of Jesus to quicken those who were dead in trespasses and sins. At the evening service the text was 2nd Samuel 9, 1. The kindness of David to Mephibosheth, the crippled grandson of Saul, was used to set forth the kindness of God to the sinner. Though descended from the man who had endeavored again and again to take David's life, yet because of the covenant he had made with Jonathan, the father of Mephibosheth, David had shown kindness to him. So God, because of the covenant made with His Son, now bestowed kindness on all who were related to Him. The theme of this evening's service will be "A Fellow in Luck." The service begins at 7.30. Bible readings are given each day at 3.30.

JAPAN TAKES ACTION— TROOPS POURING INTO COREA AND MANCHURIA.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

London, Feb. 8.—Baron Hayaski, the Japanese Minister, states that military steps contemplated by Japan for the preservation of its interests in the far east already have commenced. The Minister carefully points out, however, that this does not mean actual hostilities, but strategic action through pouring Japanese troops into Corea and Manchuria. This, he states, is now in progress.

Baltimore's Great Fire.

THE LOCAL AND OTHER FIREMEN ARE STILL FIGHTING THE FLAMES.

THE LOSS IS ESTIMATED AT FROM $75,000,000 to $100,000,000.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 8.—The wind changed from the west to northwest shortly after 5 o'clock this morning and sent the flames to the water front, the wholesale lumber district.

During the night and at daybreak the fire seemed to be growing in its prodigiousness.

The flames have extended to the water front at Eighth street and threaten all of the southeastern section of the city.

Several fire engines from nearby cities have just arrived and are at work in the fire district.

The local firemen are tired out, but are sticking nobly to their work. The City Hall, Post Office and Court House buildings were saved.

The Baltimore Herald, which is published this morning on the press of the Washington Post, estimates the loss at $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 and says the insurance will be heavy.

RUPTURE AT LAST JAPAN BREAKS AWAY

Diplomatic Relations End By M. Kurino's Withdrawal.

JAPAN WILL SEIZE COREA.

A Clash of Arms Will Likely Precede a Declaration of War—Russian Troops Have Already Crossed the Corean Frontier—Declaration of War Expected at Tokio—Russian Interests in Japan Placed in Hands of Austrian Minister.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 8.—It is officially announced that Count Lamsdorff, the Russian Foreign Minister, has informed the Russian representatives abroad that Japan has decided to break off negotiations with Russia and to withdraw her Minister and the entire Legation staff from St. Petersburg, and that upon the receipt of a note to this effect from the Japanese Minister, Russia had ordered Baron de Rosen and the Legation to leave Tokio. This is only a step towards war. The indications are there will be no formal declaration of war. A clash of arms will precede a declaration. To-day Japan will unquestionably seize Corea.

London, Feb. 8.—Cabling from Tokio, the correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, gives a report that Russian troops have already crossed the Corean frontier and that an official declaration of war is expected to-day. He adds that Russian interests in Japan have been placed in the hands of the Austrian Minister.

Has Thrown the Dice.

London, Feb. 8.—(C. A. P.)—The Standard, referring to the Far Eastern situation, says: "The god of battle has flung the dice; destiny is in his hands at last, and with the stern echo of that terrible cast the peace of the world is in his hands. When and how it will be restored no living man dare say."

Japanese Demands Moderate.

The Chronicle says: "While English influence has restrained Japan throughout the negotiations yet it only acted as a millstone around her neck preventing necessary military considerations."

The Times this morning asserts that the Japanese demands were of a moderation that will astonish the world when they are disclosed. Japan did nat even ask Russia to promise to move a single soldier from Manchuria or to renounce a single right in Manchuria.

The Daily Graphic, dealing with this same subject, asserts that the original draft of the treaty submitted to Russia was drawn up by Baron Komura in consultation with Baron de Rosen.

THE RUSSIAN DESPATCH.

Story From St. Petersburg Giving Account of Japanese Minister's Withdrawal.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 8.—Although the fear was general here Saturday that the presentation of the Russian note to Japan might be followed by an act on the part of the Japanese Government which would plunge the two countries into war the startling action of Japan in severing diplomatic relations with Russia before the actual delivery of the Russian note came like a bolt from a clear sky.

Before Note Was Delivered.

It was believed that the receipt of this note might have unmasked an ultimatum, but that Japan should sever diplomatic relations, a step little short of a declaration of war, was almost like a blow in the face under the present circumstances, and it is resented accordingly. The authorities believe this action places Japan distinctly in the wrong before the world, and, moreover, after such a "piece of impudence," as it is denominated here, makes easy an appeal to the patriotism of the Russian people. The news that at any moment Japan had drawn the sword and that the first clash had occurred would not be surprising. The events leading to Japan's abrupt action have come with great rapidity.

M. Kurino Asks For Passport.

The Russian note was already in the hands of Baron de Rosen, Russian Minister to Tokio, for delivery to Baron Komura, the Japanese Foreign Minister, when, at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon, M. Kurino, the Japanese Minister, here, presented himself at the Foreign Office and informed Foreign Minister Lamsdorff that his Government, in view of delays in connection with the Russian answer and the futility hitherto of the negotiations, considered it useless to continue diplomatic relations and would take such steps as it deemed proper for the protection of Japan's interests. In obedience to instructions, therefore, he asked for his passports.

It is known that Count Lamsdorff expressed surprise and regret at this move. M. Kurino received his passports and after consulting with Sir C. S. Scott, the British Ambassador, returned to his legation, where the preparations for his departure has been started.

Followed Japan's Lead.

Another version is that the Russian reply was not in the possession of Baron de Rosen when M. Kurino called on Count Lamsdroff, but was in the telegraph office here awaiting transmission, and that it was withdrawn before being despatched. Upon the disclosure of Japan's position, the Russian authorities met the situation with great promptness. Instructions recalling Baron de Rosen were telegraphed directing him to leave Tokio immediately. Count Lamsdorff's official circular to the Russian representatives abroad, instructing them to inform the Governments of the countries to which they are accredited of Japan's action, was then prepared and printed in the Official Messenger yesterday morning. With war imminent, a rigid censorship has been established over information relating to naval and military movements.

Preparations were made for the Czar's journey to the ancient capital, Moscow, where he goes in accordance with the traditional custom to invoke divine guidance before the altar of Troitzho Monastery, as his fathers have done before drawing the sword. While the Imperial train is passing to Moscow troops will line every foot of the way.

Japanese Legation Cleared.

During the night as if by magic, all the Japanese art treasures, bronzes and ivories, had disappeared in the Japanese Legation and the spacious saloons were bare. When a representative of the Associated Press called, M. Kurino entered the salon, his bloodshot eyes giving evidence that he had been a stranger to sleep. He was, however, without trace of excitement. There was an air of firm resolution about him which was the only noticeable change in his usual demeanor. Throughout the strain which has just passed, the attitude of the Japanese Minister has been strictly correct. He has been on good terms personally with Count Lamsdorff and the other Russian officials.

Tokio Will Explain.

Yesterday he declined to offer an explanation of the course of Japan, saying the authorities at Tokio would doubtless give their side of the story. He did, however, venture to point out that the irritation created by the delay in the Russian response, together with the forecasts of what it contained, might have convinced his Government that it was futile to proceed further with diplomacy.

Not Necessarily War.

As M. Kurino looked out of a window at the Legation he saw a battalion of the Russian Imperial Guard. He showed no emotion, but said, rather sadly, that the rupture of the diplomatic relations did not necessarily mean war. United States Ambassador McCormick was one of M. Kurino's callers yesterday morning, and later in the day many other diplomats came to express to him their regrets at the turn affairs had taken. In the afternoon M. Kurino and his wife made a number of hurried farewell calls. Four cars were ready at the Warsaw station for the Minister and the Legation staff. M. Kurino will leave at the earliest possible moment, but will probably not be able to get away before Wednesday. The current business of the Japanese Legation will probably be turned over to the British Embassy. It is possible that the Czar may personally undertake the protection of the Japanese in Russia, as Nicholas I. did in the case of the English during the Crimean war.

Wild Stories of Fights.

Amid the crop of stories afloat here yesterday, there were some of the wildest character, as, for example, that a naval battle has already been fought and a Japanese fleet sunk.

When Count Lamsdorff informed M. Kurino on Thursday night that the response had gone to Viceroy Alexieff, he did not give him a copy of it, but it is understood he made known in a general way, the Russian position. Russia, while making concessions, declined to yield on the four following points:

Second—She insisted upon mutual recognition of the independence of Corea.

Third—That there should be no fortification of Southern Corea, which might threaten Russian communication with Port Arthur and Vladivostock, and Fourth—She declined to meet Japan's wishes with regard to a neutral zone on both sides of the Yalu River.

THE JAPANESE DESPATCH.

Japan Was Tired of Russia's Delays, Evasions and Insincerity.

Tokio, Feb. 8.—The severance of diplomatic relations between Russia and Japan appears to be only a step toward war, although when the ministers of Russia and Japan withdraw from their respective posts quick and decisive action is expected.

When Minister of Foreign Affairs Komura on Saturday notified Baron de Rosen, the Russian Minister, of Japan's declaration to sever diplomatic relations, he is reported to have declared to him that Japan is tired of Russia's delays, evasions and insincerity and has decided to take independent action for the conservation of Japan's interests. Repeated requests for an answer were treated in a most unsatisfactory manner. Japan waited until convinced that it was useless to wait longer, and has now ended the discussion. The indications are that there will be no formal declaration of war.

Japan will publicly define its position and purposes, and the Foreign Office has prepared a new statement. To-day Japan will unquestionably seize Corea, and although Russia has previously intimated that it would not interfere, in view of that country's present attitude, developments are eagerly awaited.

No Popular Excitement at Tokio.

London, Feb. 8.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Tokio says a declaration of war is expected soon. The correspondent says that Japan Saturday forwarded to the powers a statement of the events that led to the breaking aff of relations with Russia. There is no popular excitement at Tokio.

British Regiment Moves.

Shanghai, Feb. 8.—The British regiment, the Sherwood Foresters, is preparing to sail on the steamer Kwang Ping to Chin-Wang-Tao, where the railroad from Tien Tsin to Kin-Chau passes the Great Wall. The movement of this regiment is presumably to safeguard the Tien-Tsin-New Chwang railroad, which enters the Great Wall of Chin Wang Too. It is reported that the Russians are seizing various points on the northern part of this line.

De Rosen Leaves Friday.

Baron de Rosen, the Russian Minister, has arranged to depart from Tokio Friday next.

The Government's preliminary estimate places the annual amount of money which it is possible to raise by the sale of war bonds at 500,000,000 yen. The Government is much gratified at the financial prospect.

Russia's Delay Blamed.

Paris, Feb. 8.—The Japanese Government communicated a statement to M. Monotono, the Japanese Minister here, announcing the severance of diplomatic relations with Russia and giving details of the reason therefore.

M. Monotono took this statement to the Foreign Office. Subsequently the Japanese Minister gave the Associated Press the following statement:

"Tokio, Feb. 6.—The last Japanese note in response to the Russian note of Jan. 5 had been remitted to the Russian Minister to Tokio on the 13th of January. The Japanese Government had insisted that a prompt response be made to it, owing to the gravity of the situation.

"Not receiving the answer requested, M. Kurino, the Japanese Minister at St. Petersburg, has made to Count Lamsdorff on several occasions recently representations in order to secure an answer from Russia. Not having obtained this answer, he asked him to indicate the earliest date for the reply. Count Lamsdorff, while promising to make a response as early as possible, has not been able to indicate when the response could be transmitted to the Japanese Government.

"The Japanese Government having vainly waited, on its part, the Russian answer, for more than three weeks, and having been moreover informed that Russia was making active preparations for war and was concentrating her troops and her naval forces towards Corea, it is under the necessity of breaking negotiations with Russia and with resuming its liberty of action."

Called a Bluff.

Berlin, Feb. 8.—Japan's course is regarded here even yet as possibly a bluff.

First Battle on the Sea.

London, Feb. 8.—The standing fleet of Japan and the Asiatic fleet of Russia, both ready for action, have been for several days ranged a few hours apart, at the entrance to the Gulf of Pechili. The Japanese warships are close to Wei Hai Wei, the British naval station, which, it has been reported, the British have evacuated.

The Russian fleet is just outside of Port Arthur, at the point of the Leaotong Peninsula, a naval station defended by the greatest forts in Asia and containing the only Asiatic drydock in which battleships can be accommodated.

While the land scenes of the impending war must surely be Corea it is likely that the conflict will begin by a battle on the sea.

Ian Hamilton's Part.

London, Feb. 8.—Lieut.-Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, quartermaster-general to the British forces, will, it is announced, in the event of war between Japan and Russia, be appointed British military attache with the Russian forces.

British Transport Them.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 8.—A despatch received here from Vladivostock says the Japanese commercial agent there, acting under orders from Tokio, has issued a circular informing the Japanese residents of the country that those who wish may proceed to Japan on board the British steamer Afridi, which has arrived there.

Japs Scurry Away.

Harbin, Manchuria, Feb. 8.—The Secretary of the Japanese Consulate at Vladivostock has arrived here and has warned the Japanese residents to leave. They are all hurrying away, selling, and even giving away, their belongings. The prices of food and fodder are rising.

Orders For Cruiser Friesland.

The Hague, Feb. 8.—The Netherlands Government has ordered the cruiser Friesland to remain in the Far East.

TRAIN RAN HIM DOWN.

Benjamin Clark Beheaded in the Toronto Railway Yard.

Toronto, Feb. 8.—Another railway employe met his death on Sunday morning in the yards at the foot of Bathurst street. Benjamin Clark, for six years an employe of the G.T.R., was run over and killed instantly by an eastbound train. He was acting as brakeman for a yard engine, and in getting off to turn a switch did not see the train approaching. He was struck and thrown some distance on the track, the wheel passing over the neck, severing the head from the body.

DUNSMUIR WILL IS VALID.

Edna Wallace Hopper and Her Mother Lost Suit—Must Pay Costs.

Victoria, B. C., Feb. 8.—Justice Drake handed the judgment down in the famous Hopper v. Dunsmuir will case Saturday morning, giving judgment with costs against both the plaintiff, Edna Wallace Hopper, and her mother, who joined in the suit. The judgment, in regard to the former, failed to "see any right, legal or equitable," which enabled her to attack the will.

By the facts alone, it was found that Alexander Dunsmuir was of sound and imposing mind when he executed his will; that he had for a long time previously expressed his intention of making his will in favor of his brother, James Dunsmuir, and that he did so make it. The judge agrees with Chancellor Sprage that facts sworn to are of far greater weight than scientific opinion. When he finds facts, which prove business capacity, shrewdness, a successful management of a large business concern, without delusions, he is of opinion that such a person is capable of making a will.

The case occupied seventy-two day, and eighty witnesses were examined.

Reyes Elected President.

Washington, Feb. 8.—A private despatch received here Saturday from Buena Ventura says that Gen Reyes was elected President of Colombia on Feb. 2. Gonzales-Valencia was elected vice-president.

It Is Not True.

Toronto Junction, Feb. 9.—A despatch from London, Ont., published last Saturday, stated that as a result of a collision in the C.P.R. yards, Engineer John Abernethy of this place had become temporarily insane. This despatch misrepresented Mr. Abernethy's condition. He suffered a severe mental shock, as would any engineer under similar circumstances, but he is rapidly recovering, and his physician says he will be all right in a few days.

CAUSE OF THE CRISIS RUSSIA'S DUPLICITY

Landed Troops Near Yalu River Occupying Northern Corea.

JAPANESE TROOPS IN COREA.

Japan Seized Russian Merchant Vessels on February 6—Two Others Were Seized Later and Taken to Saseno, Japan—The Firing of Guns Has Been Already Heard—Russia Negotiating For New Loan From Foreign Syndicate.

London, Feb. 9.—In a despatch, dated Nagasaki, Feb. 6, and which was delayed by the censor, a correspondent of The Daily Telegraph asserts that Russia deliberately precipitated the crisis by secretly despatching a few days ago from Port Arthur, transports loaded with a full division of troops and escorted by a fleet and landing them near the Yalu River, thus occuppying Northern Corea.

Japanese patience became exhausted, and to-day Japan moved her ships and took unrestricted possession of certain merchant vessels, including the Hilka and Manchuria. The correspondent continues. "The other Russian vessels were seized and escorted to Saseno, Japan."

The Daily Telegraph says it supposes the foregoing seizures occurred at Masampho, but that the censor suppressed the location.

FIRING OF GUNS HEARD.

East of Kojo Island, About 25 Miles Southwest of Fusan.

London, Feb. 9.—The Che Foo correspondent of The Daily Mail cables that 60 Japanese transports are landing troops at various ports in Corea, from Masampho and Fusan on the south to Kunsan, Mokpho and Chemulpo on the west.

Seoul is to be occupied and the landing is being covered by torpedo divisions.

The main body of the Japanese fleet, the correspondent continues, will sail in the direction of Port Arthur.

Firing of Guns Heard.

In a despatch from Tokio, a correspondent of The Daily Mail says the Jiji Shimpo has received a telegram from Fusan, Corea, declaring that the firing of guns was heard to the east of Koje Island (about 25 miles southwest of Fusan) at 8 o'clock Saturday morning.

Chinese Court to Move.

In a despatch from Tien Tsin, a correspondent of The Standard says a Russian force is reported at Kalgan (in Pechili Province, 110 miles northwest of Pekin and near the Great Wall), and that preparations are being made for the flight of the Chinese court and the removal of the Imperial treasures, as it is feared that Russia will descend on Pekin.

Japs Land at Masampho.

Berlin, Feb. 9.—A despatch received here from Port Arthur says news has been received there that Japanese troops have been landed at Masampho. The despatch says further that the Russian warships at Port Arthur frequently put to sea and that the inhabitants of Seoul are uneasily expecting the arrival of the Japanese troops.

Russia After French Funds.

London, Feb. 9.—"Russia is negotiating with a syndicate of French, Belgian and Dutch bankers," cables the Brussels correspondent of The Standard, "for a loan of $200,000,000."

The Paris correspondent of The Daily Mail says that France has agreed with other powers to land troops in China directly as soon as hostilities begin, in order to secure neutrality of the middle kingdom.

Where Germany Stands.

Berlin, Feb. 9.—The Cologne Gazette defines Germany's policy in East Asia in an article which is evidently inspired, as follows:

"We direct our attention to seeing that further complications do not arise from this quarrel, and that the regions in China adjacent to the theatre of war are not drawn into the outbreak. We can best subserve this purpose through a policy which will leave no doubt of our fullest neutrality."

Russia Long Ago Decided For War.

London, Feb. 9.—In a despatch from Nagasaki, dated Feb. 8, a correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says: "It is assured that the Russian fleet will fight. The Russians long ago decided upon war and their delay was due to lack of preparation and uncertainty whether certain powers would intervene or not."

War is Inevitable.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 9.—The situation is such that the authorities are prepared at any moment to hear that Japan has made an aggressive move, which would make a semblance of peace any longer impossible. War is regarded here as practically inevitable.

No Declaration Needed.

London, Feb. 9.—The British Foreign Office does not regard the Japanese note presented Feb. 5 to the Russian Foreign Office by M. Kurino as establishing a state of war, though it holds it would justify a hostile act without any further notification on the part of Japan, which the Foreign Office understands will not be given.

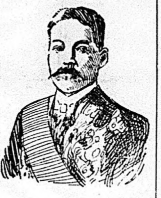
WHAT CAUSED JAPAN'S MOVE.

Text of M. Kurino's Statement to the Russian Foreign Office.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 9.—The following is the text of M. Kurino's statement of Feb. 5 to the Foreign Office here:

"The independence and territorial integrity of the Corean Empire being regarded by the Japanese Government as absolutely essential to their own country's security and repose, they cannot view with indifference any action tending to render the position of Corea insecure. The Russian Government has by means of an inadmissible amendment successively rejected Japan's proposals respecting Corea, the adoption of which the Japanese Government regarded as indispensable to insuring the independence and territorial integrity of the Corean Empire, and to safeguarding Japan's prepondering interests in the peninsula.

Japan's Hand Forced.



M. KURINO.

"This attitude on the part of the Russian Government, coupled with their successive refusals to enter into an engagement to respect China's territorial integrity in Manchuria, which is seriously menaced by Russia's continued occupation of that province, notwithstanding her treaty engagements with China and her repeated assurances to the other powers having interests in the same region, has rendered it necessary for the Japanese Government to seriously consider what measures of self-defence she is called upon to take in the presence of the delay on the part of the Russian Government in connection with the pending negotiations which has remained largely unexplained, and of their naval and military activity, which it is difficult to reconcile with an entirely pacific aim. In the pending negotiations the Japanese Government has exercised a degree of forbearance which they believed affords abundant proof of their loyal desire to remove from the relations between Japan and Russia every cause for future misunderstanding.

Russia Was Obdurate.

"But, finding in their efforts no prospect of securing from the Russian Government any adhesion, either to Japan's moderate and unselfish proposals, or to any other proposals, to establish a firm and lasting interest in the Far East, the Japanese Government has no other alternative than to terminate the present futile negotiations. In adopting that course the Japanese Government reserved to themselves the right to take such independent actions as they may deem best to consolidate and defend Japan's menaced position, as well as to protect her established rights and legitimate interests. The Japanese Government having exhausted in vain every means of conciliation with the view of removing from the relations of the countries every cause for future complications, and finding that their just representations and moderate and unselfish proposals made in the interest of permanent peace in the Far East were not receiving from the Russian Government the consideration which is their due, have resolved to sever their diplomatic relations with the Russian Government, which, for the reason named, have ceased to possess value."

At the Japanese Legation here this was regarded as tantamount to a declaration of war, and it is believed that no other announcement will be made to the world.

A WONDROUS CHANGE.

Had any one ventured to predict, ten or eleven years ago, that members of an Administration headed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and with Sir Richard Cartwright as one of his colleagues would be found in after years advocating Protection, the prediction would have been derided by the Grit press and party as an absurdity.

At that time Sir Wilfrid (then Mr.) Laurier was telling the people that his policy was to "sweep away every vestige of Protection" and to give them "free trade—free trade as it is in England." Sir Richard Cartwright was, contemporaneously, selecting from a very extensive vocabulary the hardest words he could find—words which would shock beyond expression the present Reverend editor of The Globe—with which to denounce a Protective policy and all who advocated it. According to the Knight of Kingston, Protection was "the sum of all human villanies" and the manufacturers who had secured a certain degree of protection against the unfair competition to which they had been subjected previous to the enactment of the National policy of 1879, he stigmatised as "scoundrels great and scoundrels small."

How is it now?

A few days since Mr. Brodeur, one of the newly created Ministers, was up for re-election consequent on his acceptance of office, and Hon. Mr. Brodeur, Hon. Mr. Prefontaine and other leading Liberals addressed the electors. These gentlemen assured the people that the Government, not the Conservatives, are the true Protectionists, and that the tariff will be so amended as to further foster home industries. In brief, it was another case of "Codlin's your friend—Codlin, not Short!"

Now lest it might be thought that Sir Wilfrid's colleagues were speaking without authority, it is only necessary to recall the fact that Mr. Tarte was driven out of the Ministry for the assigned reason that he had publicly advocated Protection—a policy to which the Government were not committed. Hence as the utterances of Mr. Prefontaine, who succeeded Mr. Tarte, and Mr. Brodeur, one of the newest of the new Ministers, have not been disavowed by Sir Wilfrid or on his behalf, it is perfectly clear that the Laurier Administration have become Protectionists. Messrs. Fielding, Sifton, Cartwright and Fisher must have found the dose very nauseous, but they had to swallow it.

In view of the record of Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues, it is impossible for the public to have confidence in their professions in this regard, and that they will find when next they challenge the verdict of the people.

The Bible reading yesterday afternoon was well attended. Mr. Shields will continue his expository addresses each afternoon at 3 o'clock. The attendance at the evening was fair, considering the severe cold. Believing that God is the Lord of the weather, the tenderness of Mr. Whyte's songs and the earnestness of Mr. Shield's addresses, are unaffected by the whereabouts of the mercury. The theme of last evening's address was "a Fellow in Luck," and the text 2nd Samuel, 21:7. The fellow in luck was Mephibosheth, who, though a descendant of Saul, was not destroyed with the rest of his sons, because of a covenant oath that had been made. He was not spared because of what he could do, for he was a cripple; nor for what he could give, for he was a poor man and lived in a poor place. All that was required of him was to accept the invitation David sent to him, and receive the things that had been provided. So God invites the sinner to come and receive from Him the abundant grace that will cover all his needs, and all that was necessary was to accept the invitation and come. The subject of Mr. Shield's address this evening will be "A Man With Brains that did not Doubt."

A CLEVER STUDENT.

MASTER F. S. LEAVENS RECEIVES THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S MEDAL.

It will be ten years on the 30th of May next since the Earl of Aberdeen, the Governor-General, visited our city and met with one of the greatest receptions in his life. Who that was present will ever forget the scene on the grounds of the Queen Victoria School when the boys and girls had their innings, the fervour of their greetings being such as to affect the Earl to tears, and to make the thousands present proud of the rising generation.

It will be remembered that His Excellency gave two silver medals in appreciation of the event, one for the Board of Education and the other to the Separate School Board. The Board of Education decided to commemorate the Governor-General's visit by giving annually a silver medal to that pupil of the Public Schools who being the youngest in years obtained the largest number of marks at the Entrance Examination to the High School. That the medal that the Governor-General gave was to be placed in a large handsome frame, with a photograph of Lord Aberdeen above it, to have recorded in it the names of the Governor-General medalists from year to year, and to be hung in the Council room of the City Hall.

Yesterday afternoon the Governor-General medalist for 1903 was presented with his richly merited and much prized honor in the Canifton Road School by the Chairman of the Board of Education, Mr. F. E. O'Flynn. The clever student is Master Frederick Stephenson Leavens, son of Mr. George Leavens, Mill street, who was twelve years old when he passed the examination. He has always been a pupil of the Canifton Road School, and has had but two teachers, Miss Waterhouse and Mr. D. Barrager. This is the first time that the coveted medal has been won by a pupil outside of Queen Victoria School. The other medalists have been:—1894, George E. Eakins; 1895, Grant McClatchie; 1896, George Henthorn; 1897, Angus Pringle; 1898, Charles Hubbard; 1899, Claire Hutchison; 1900, Edward Waterston; 1901, Douglas Waterston; 1902, Douglas McKenna.

After the presentation, congratulatory addresses were given by the following members of the Board of Education; Rev. A. L. Geen, Mr. G. A. Bennett, Mr. W. R. Hudson and Mr. Wm. Johnson.

During the ceremony the scholars of the school sang patriotic songs led by their teacher, Miss Phelps.

A Goddess of Africa

A Story of the Golden Fleece.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Miss Caprice," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Dr. Jack," Etc., Etc.

"The old cabin's a wreck—couldn't locate 'em thar — must have skedaddled, I reckon. But they set fire to the pesky kraal with them fireworks before we could use a match. Glory, just see it scorch. Gives a fellow a taste of what he can expect afterwards," rattled off the cowboy.

Then he noticed the addition to their number, and when his eyes fell on Maid Marian he guessed the truth, for these independent cattle punchers are quick as lightning.

"Say, that must be Mr. Hastings. This here is quite a neat surprise; and the gal too. Well, if we uns know what's good for us, we'll levant out of this cussed country like jack rabbits before a perairie fire."

His advice was as sound as a nut and all of them appreciated the fact. Lord Bruno made no effort to address the girl. The first thing to be done was to make good their escape, and once this had been effected minor matters could be easily settled.

So they quitted the little glade that had come so near being the scene of a desperate hand-to-hand combat between two friends in deep disguise, turning their backs on the burning village.

All this had occurred in less time than it takes to transcribe it, and the excitement within and around the stockade was still at its height, so that their chances of slipping away without bringing on a general battle with the natives seemed good.

Overhead the very heavens were aglow with the reflection of the terrible sea of fire below, and to a timid soul, so wonderful was the spectacle that some fears might have been aroused as to the destruction of the whole universe by a wave of flame.

Rex immediately sought the side of Marian. Much as he despised his ridiculous costume he could not keep his distance. At least she would not consider him less a man because circumstances had compelled him to adopt such a disguise, she who had been beside him when he wielded that weighty sword, hallowed by a history connected with many a Scottish battlefield when Highland clan and Lowland lord pitted their strength against the hosts of Edward.

Haste was a quality essential to success in this game, for although the blacks were for the hour apparently panic-stricken by the terrible calamity that had befallen them, their recovery would be almost as sudden as their collapse.

When the fire-fiend died low, and only ashes remained to mark the site of the kraal, the voice of the vindictive and stout-hearted Hassaje would make itself heard in the land, calling aloud for vengeance upon those who were primarily responsible for the curse that had fallen upon them.

Then would begin a pursuit that might continue to the very stockade of Buluwayo, for these Zambodi warriors know little what fear in warfare means. Zulu braves have proven that in more than one fierce battle with British regulars; and the blood of a young Prince of France was consecrated by the assegais of these hard fighters.

Looking backward occasionally they could see that the conflagration was growing gradually less in volume, as the lodges became more scattered.

Dr. Shoop's
Rheumatic Cure

COSTS NOTHING IF IT FAILS.

Any honest person who suffers from rheumatism is welcome to this offer. For years I searched everywhere to find a specific for rheumatism. For nearly 20 years I worked to this end. At last, in Germany, my search was rewarded. I found a costly chemical that did not disappoint me as other rheumatic prescriptions had disappointed physicians everywhere.

I do not mean that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure can turn bony joints into flesh again. That is impossible. But it will drive from the blood the poison that causes pain and swelling, and then that is the end of rheumatism. I know this so well that I will furnish for a full month my Rheumatic Cure on trial. I cannot cure all cases within a month. It would be unreasonable to expect that. But most cases will yield within 30 days. This trial treatment will convince you that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure is a power against rheumatism—a potent force against disease that is irresistible.

My offer is made to convince you of my faith. My faith is but the outcome of experience—of actual knowledge. I "know" what it can do. And I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on rheumatism. I will then arrange with a druggist in your vicinity so that you can secure six bottles of Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure to make the test. You may take it a full month on trial. If it succeeds the cost to you is $5.50. If it fails the loss is mine and mine alone. It will be left entirely to you. I mean that exactly. If you say the trial is not satisfactory I don't expect a penny from you.

Write me and I will send you the book. Try my remedy for a month. If it fails the loss is mine.

Address, Dr. Shoop, Box 969, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases not chronic are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

The work had been accomplished, and when the shock of desolation passed away they could expect to have a desperate pursuit inaugurated.

Still on horseback they would be in a position to defy the most determined of foes, provided they avoided pitfalls and ambuscades, for which these Zulu tribes are noted—a trap is their usual means of securing game, and in war they naturally apply the same tactics with a view to exterminating their foes.

The high spirits consequent upon the success of their plans, were not destined to hold out.

Rex saw that something was wrong when a halt was called, and Lord Bruno entered into an earnest discussion with Bludsoe.

The latter struck a match and dropped to the ground as if bent upon an examination.

Then he used some strong language.

"What's wrong?" asked Hastings, hurrying to where they stood.

"The hosses are gone!" replied the cowboy.

Here was a fearful calamity, and while Rex could not grasp its full scope as readily as the prairie rider, he realized that an exceedingly grave condition confronted them.

To be afoot in this African wilderness, with a whole tribe of enraged warriors hunting high and low for them was a state of affairs calculated to alarm the boldest.

It must needs be something beyond the ordinary that could make Jim Bludsoe frown and shake his head.

A closer examination was made.

This only served to confirm the facts, however disagreeable they might appear.

Some cunning enemy had either seen them hide the animals or else by a mere accident had run across them.

At any rate the horses were gone, and it would be useless looking for them.

But for the presence of the young girl the air in that neighborhood would have been fairly sulphurous, such was the rage of Bludsoe and Red Eric.

The doctor being a philosopher, took things as they came, much as a disciple of the prophet Mohammed might have done; and Little Phil seldom made himself heard.

Lord Bruno shouldered the blame, declaring that it was pretty much his fault — Bludsoe had suggested leaving some one to guard the precious animals, but he had believed every arm would be needed at the kraal, in order to carry out their designs.

The mischief was done, the horses had been stolen, and now it remained to them to make a safe retreat.

Such emergencies bring out all there may be in a man.

Although Bludsoe was deeply mortified and inwardly furious at the trick played upon them, he speedily recovered himself and began to consider what was best to be done.

Under ordinary conditions it would have suited him exactly to hang about the neighborhood, remaining concealed from the blacks, until some good opportunity arose when their horses could be recovered.

Now the case was different—Lord Bruno desired to place as much distance between the destroyed kraal, with the vengeful Zambodi, and their own persons, as possible. Perhaps the presence of Marian had something to do with this. At any rate it was determined to make the move.

Bludsoe was fully aroused.

He knew full well they would be followed by a swarm of eager vengeance seekers, and to throw these trackers off the trail it was necessary that he bring to bear all the tricks learned in his wild life along the Texan border.

As they turned their backs upon the silent volcano which in the ages gone by had been such a factor in the landscape of that country, an outlet of the eternal fires. Lord Bruno managed to get Rex at his side, in order to question him concerning the girl.

What he heard seemed to give the Briton great satisfaction, for he squeezed the hand of his companion several times.

"You have done me a great favor, my dear fellow. The story is too long to tell now, and you shall hear it later; but Marian is my sister. The man she called father was my uncle Ralph. Revenge was at the bottom of it all, as you may well believe. No wonder he spoke my father's name in his sleep, for he had terribly wronged him. I know you will rejoice with me, and if the future should unite us in ties closer than those which now bind us—"

"Stop, I beg," interrupted Rex, "and consider my present condition. I have probably ruined any chance I ever had in that quarter, by my appearance as a savage. Don't you think me a beauty, really?"

"Hang the looks — beauty's only skin deep after all. I know you to be a brave, big-hearted comrade, a man I should feel honored in claiming as a brother, and any sensible girl must think the same way," returned the impulsive Waterford.

"Let us change the subject. You mean to explain all this to her, of course?"

"I shall wait until we make our first halt, and then have a quiet talk with Marian. I am sorry to think she has, while in ignorance of the truth, believed me an enemy. You must prepare her for my revelation, Hastings."

"Gladly, and at once."

"By the way, you do not ask after your coat, with its contents, and the bags of treasure."

"Because I take it for granted they have fallen into the hands of the enemy, and that's the end of the argonaut's cruise."

Lord Bruno laughed.

"You are mistaken, right there, Rex."

"But—none of you appear to be staggering under a load of riches—ah! I see, you have cached the whole lot."

"Correct. When we had left the barbarians in the lurch, and believed ourselves safe, we went into camp to consider what should be done. Every man's voice was for war—you had fallen into the hands of the Philistines and must be rescued. Besides, the secret mission that brought me to Zambodiland had not been fulfilled.

"It was Bludsoe's suggestion, about a cache, and as he was a veteran in such work I gladly allowed him to assume the burden. He will explain the marks to you so that you can find the hiding place of your treasure-trove, even should the rest of us never live to reach civilization, which you know is a possibility, now that we are stranded here without our mounts."

"Come, that is joyful news to a fortune-hunter. Who knows but what we may come out all right yet. But excuse me, and I will resume my place beside your sister. If we get a chance at that coat I shall rejoice to don it again. You see I've discarded the cat-tails and the ruff of dyed ostrich feathers. No laughing—it's a serious business with me, but it served a purpose."

CHAPTER XXVII.

IN THE COUNTRY OF THE MATABELE.

All sounds in their rear finally ceased to disturb them. Whether this came from the distance they were placing between themselves and the devastated kraal, or the fact that the blacks were no longer racking the air with their cries of terror and rage, could not of course be known.

Through the balance of the night they continued to push on. Marian stood it bravely, her life having been spent freely in the open air, so that she was able to endure much that must have exhausted an ordinary girl fresh from civilization.

Jim led them, Jim who was alive to the emergency, and determined that if their foes did overtake them, he would give the black impis a run for their money.

Twice had they crossed the drift, and it was here the cowboy's ingenuity was brought into full play.

The intention of course was to throw their pursuers off the trail, and as water breaks the scent for dogs, so it could be utilized to distract human trackers.

Thus, the first time, they entered the drift until the water was knee deep, and in this way walked up the stream half a mile, Marian carrying out her share with the most perfect good nature, accepting the hand of Hastings as they splashed along.

When they left the stream, Bludsoe selected a certain place where no trail would remain; and unless the warriors showed unusual shrewdness they were apt to hunt a long time ere the truth became manifest.

On the second occasion, when the drift was struck, material for a raft abounding, the men fashioned a rude one, upon which they floated a long distance, when the course of the stream changing for the worse, they were compelled to once more strike terra firma, and resume their weary tramp.

Rex realized that his companion was growing tired. She leaned more heavily on his arm, and he took occasion to let Lord Bruno know this fact.

A hasty consultation with the guide followed, and Rex was informed that their destination was only a mile further on.

When he told this to Marian she answered cheerfully that she could keep up, and she kept her word.

Rex was pleased with the selection made for a bivouac. He admired the shrewdness of the cowboy in picking out an elevation, for the approach of a foe could be the easier detected.

Maid Marian was only too glad to sit down and rest, and Rex feared she had really overtaxed her powers of endurance.

Lord Bruno took him aside, and after clambering along the bed of a small creek, carefully disturbed some loose stones, and hauled the missing coat out of a cleft.

This then was the secret cache—they had been led by the wonderful shrewdness of Jim Bludsoe directly to the spot which had been the turning point in their flight when mounted.

The little packets of jewels were still in the side pockets just where he had left them.

Thus Rex was able to throw aside his disguise in a measure. The doctor had a spare flannel shirt to loan him, and he managed in some way to cleanse his skin of the coloring matter that had served him so well.

It is really surprising how a small thing will sometimes give a great amount of pleasure. Rex could not remember feeling more pleased than when he drew his coat on over that rather aged flannel shirt, and accepted the loan of a cap from his friend—why, he was in full dress, and fit to be presented to the queen, if his personal sensations were to be relied on.

And how proudly he stalked into the presence of Marian again, though the darkness gave her but a scant opportunity of learning the change in his attire.

Sleep was needed badly, and Lord Bruno wisely refrained from addressing the young girl upon the subject nearest his heart. All that would come in good time.

They formed a rude couch for her from leaves and mosses. A fire would have been very comfortable, but the risk was too great in the nighttime. When morning came the experienced cowboys would start a blaze with wood that gave no smoke.

The time passed.

There was no alarm, and when the glorious sun awoke them, all had gone well.

Of course now arose a serious question—what could they do for food? What stock they had brought upon the expedition was with the horses, and only enough remained for a scant breakfast.

Jim and the doctor went off, taking their guns, and leaving Red Eric on guard. Perhaps, if the chance offered, they might risk a shot at a springbok. Many guns were carried by members of border tribes, offshoots of the Zulus, and a single shot, heard at a long distance, is difficult to locate.

Rex had paved the way for Lord Bruno, and presently the latter was engaged in an earnest conversation with the fair girl whom the fierce Zambodi had worshipped as a god.

Long they sat there and talked.

Rex glanced that way now and then, and he saw Marian had apparently accepted the other's story—she did not hesitate to rest a hand on his arm, while looking earnestly up into his face. And finally Lord Bruno bent over to quietly press a brother's kiss upon her forehead.

Something like an exclamation, a low cry of pain, caused Rex to turn his head; but the only person near him was Little Phil, who seemed busily engaged in cleaning a gun that had been splashed during their ride down the drift on a raft; so he concluded he must have been mistaken.

It was their purpose to remain hidden where they were during the day, and when night came, to push south again.

The morning passed without adventure.

Lord Bruno had saved his field glass, and with this they were enabled to survey a broad stretch of territory.

Several times they saw moving bands of blacks, but they were far away.

Once they heard a distant shot, but no one could with authority say from whence it came.

About noon Bludsoe came in carrying a fine springbok which he had knocked over some miles from the camp, so that it was the report of his rifle they had heard after all.

No damage was done, and the gazelle promised at least a temporary supply of meat. A small, smokeless blaze was already crackling among the rocks, and when meat was supplied, it did not take long to cook it, though for lack of a proper utensil this had to be accomplished in the most primitive of ways by thrusting a splinter of wood into each piece and toasting the venison over red coals.

All were hungry and could find no fault with the method employed, when it satisfied their craving. The afternoon was spent in resting, for an arduous task awaited them when night once more veiled day's splendor—miles must be placed between this camp and their next stop.

That Bludsoe anticipated trouble Rex could guess from the especial care with which the cowboy examined all the weapons in camp. Should a desperate battle take place everything might depend upon their ability to throw lead with the utmost celerity, and Jim wanted no hitch in the programme that could be laid to neglect.

When Hastings saw this action he looked upon it as one might view the falling mercury in a barometer, for surely it foretold trouble.

Jim knew.

His life training had been such that he could judge from sources that were utterly invisible to the ordinary eye.

At least, with this valiant little band around him, staunch fellows one and all, well armed and ready to give a good account in the day of battle, Rex could contemplate the possibility of an encounter with the cruel impis under Hassaje, the witch-doctor with something approaching equanimity. It was entirely different from the sensation of desperation that swept over him when at bay in that lone cabin he wielded the good old Scottish blade, with the enemy swarming over the roof and seeking to overwhelm him from every quarter at once.

During the afternoon the squads of blacks were seen more frequently and at closer range, and toward evening Bludsoe made up his mind they were upon the trail, so that it was extremely fortunate the night would soon give them an opportunity to continue making progress toward Buluwayo.

The fire was extinguished while the sun still shone, and a wretched apology for a meal taken.

Then, waiting only until Jim gave the word, they were off.

It was a journey never to be forgotten—a journey to which in years to come they would look back with the strangest sensations possible.

Seldom did anyone speak, and when it became absolutely necessary, the words were uttered in a whisper.

The moon was a friend in one way, since it gave them light by means of which they could see where to walk and thus in a great measure avoid obstacles that in the darkness might have served as snares to their feet; but at the same time there was always hovering above them the danger that this same mellow glow which shed itself abroad over tangle and plateau and plain, might reveal their presence to the keen eyes of the vengeance seeking Zambodi, wandering hither and thither in the hope of just such a lucky windfall.

If one lone warrior discovered the little expedition, his signal cries would be echoed from mouth to mouth, until the welkin must ring with the tidings, and from every quarter the surging black impis would come sweeping to the attack.

No wonder, then, the members of that little band felt a grave responsibility resting upon them—no wonder their nerves were excited to a tension that became absolutely appalling ere the night march was half-concluded.

In every suspicious sound Rex fancied he could hear the tread of an enemy. From almost each thicket looming up on either quarter he could imagine that hostile eyes detected their movement; and many times he actually believed he heard the strange hurtling sound of an assegai speeding through the air, when it turned out to be the humming flight of some owl or night bird of another character, which had been frightened by their approach.

As hours passed and nothing occurred to disturb the silence of the night, these fears which Rex entertained on account of Marian's presence more than anything else, gradually grew less in volume, for he realized that they were putting much ground between themselves and the burnt kraal, and with each passing hour their chances of ultimate escape grew brighter.

Bludsoe announced that they were now in the country of the Matabele, which adjoined the Zambodi territory. This, of course, did not improve their position, since the cousins of the Zulus were at war with the British, and in every quarter during much of the day could be heard the roll of the war drum, while signal fires flashed their glowing messages from kopje and isolated peaks after the day king had sank to rest, and night brooded over the land.

Again a halt.

The night was well spent, and Marian weary.

Bludsoe had been on the alert, and once more took his little company into retired quarters where the day might be passed without more than the ordinary chance of discovery.

Of course a certain risk hung above them always, for if passing eyes noted their trail, suspicion would be engendered, with a possible chance of discovery.

As before, Jim selected an elevation for their second camp. Its advantages were numerous, and every one recognized them.

Here they passed the second day.

Bludsoe had managed to arrange matters so that their trail appeared to pass the elevation and ended at the drift beyond.

Anyone following them would doubtless believe they had gone down the stream.

It was well they did so.

During the day the various bodies of marching impis that came within range of the field glass astonished them.

"Bless me," declared Lord Bruno, as he saw the tenth detachment of giant blacks pass in among the foot of the hills, "the country is alive with the beggars. I had no idea they were so thick. Cecil Rhodes must know this if I ever get through alive. I declare the British South African Company has a bigger affair on its hands than the good people in far away England ever dream. There are no limits to these black soldiers, apparently."

Once during the day they had a scare, when a small party came along following their trail; but Jim Bludsoe's American tactics were too much for Matabele shrewdness, and the last they saw of the warriors the whole clan was scurrying down the drift, eagerly looking out for some signs of the fugitives who were not.

Night again—blessed night, since it was to take them another long step out of this country that swarmed with hostiles.

They had fared but poorly in the way of food. Marian did not know it, for Rex saw that she was well supplied. The cowboys had cooked the last bit of meat over an apology of a blaze in the middle of the day, and Jim still disguised as a Zambodi warrior had watched his chance to bring water to their camp from the nearby stream.

All were glad when the day, which had been a series of naps and alarms, was numbered with the past.

At least there was some satisfaction in being on the move.

Bludsoe's task as guide continued to grow in responsibility. It seemed as though they had wandered into a veritable nest of hostile camps. To the right could be seen the blaze upon a hill that sent messages to the next station, appearing and vanishing in a mysterious way that was intelligible only to the savage mind, and serving the purpose of a semaphore or a telegraph line as camp after camp took it up and flashed it on.

Other fires there were at times, which burned steadily, and here our friends knew the Matabele hosts rested, ready to gather when the proper time came, and sweep once more upon the land controlled by the aggressive British company over whose destinies that wonderful man Cecil Rhodes presided—the one individual able to control their fierce leaders by the magic of his logic.

Again and again their course had to be changed in order to avoid the dangers that lay in wait.

No one murmured at this — so long as discovery could be warded off they had no reason to enter a complaint.

The night was well on when they saw a light miles away, which Bludsoe examined through the glass when a chance presented itself, declaring that it must be a Matabele kraal in flames.

That the spectacle aroused the various camps to fever heat they could tell from the louder roll of the tom-toms, and occasionally with the night wind came a swelling chorus of fierce cries such as could only spring from the throats of Zulu kind.

All at once Bludsoe halted them, indicating that there was danger in front.

And while the little party stood there, in whispers deciding what was best to be done, the plain, unmistakable thud of horses' hoofs beating on the hard ground electrified them.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE GOD HUNTERS.

There could be no mistake about it—horses were approaching them, horses that seemed to be going at their limit, but which in the experienced mind of the cowboy guide had been ridden far and furiously.

Various speculations flashed through the brains of the members constituting that little company. Hastings conceived the idea that the vanguard of the British force had reached this point, and believed he showed commendible discretion in waiting for Bludsoe to give the signal to greet them with a royal Anglo-Saxon cheer.

With Lord Bruno, the case was a little more to the point.

He recognized the fact that the hard ridden horses approached from exactly the wrong direction to be a relief expedition from Mangwe or Buluwayo—the animals came out from that quarter where the flaming heavens told of a Matabele village on fire.

The two things were not connected in his mind as with Bludsoe. On the contrary Lord Bruno fancied these horses were their own steeds, and when Jim in a sibilant whisper bade them drop down in the grass, he imagined it was only a design on the part of the guide to waylay the robbers and recover their mounts.

But Jim Bludsoe had different views, though he made no attempt to enlighten the others.

Nearer came the sounds, and in the dim light two moving forms appeared—men mounted on weary, foam-flecked steeds, which they urged on with occasional exclamations.

The words startled Lord Bruno, since they stamped the riders as of the same race as himself, and neither savage Matabele nor Zambodi.

Nearer still, advancing in a straight line until it seemed as though they must gallop directly over the group crouching there.

Then one of the riders said aloud:

"The beasts are about done for, Armstrong—we must find a place to hide, come what will."

Bludsoe arose to his feet and gave a low call, such as Western men use with which to greet each other.

"Draw up, Burnham—don't ride over us," he said, laughing.

The horsemen pulled in their jaded and staggering steeds almost within arms' reach of the cowboy, and startled exclamations proclaimed their amazement at meeting civilized beings in the heart of this exceedingly hostile territory.

Jim quickly identified himself, and when other figures arose near by, the astonishment of the two riders increased.

These men were no other than the famous American scout Frederick Burnham and Mr. Armstrong, the superintendent of the Mangwe district, to whom had been entrusted the important task of making way with the high priest N'dubi, who had usurped the powers of a god, declaring he was the great M'limo, and from his hideous cave among the Matoppo hills, issued his orders that the Matabele war should be continued, declaring that by his magical influence he would change the leaden bullets of the white men into water.

It became evident to the authorities that so long as this arch demon who exercised such an influence over his people, remained alive, peace could never descend upon the distracted border, and hence the daring expedition of the god-hunters, one of the most venturesome on record.

Bludsoe knew where they had been, and his very first question as he squeezed a hand of each was to the point:

"Well, did you fetch him?"

"The black god went down—all his arts could not save him from lead after all," returned the scout.

His manner was far from boasting, and yet this quiet, unassuming hero had by his bold ride into the heart of a hostile country, and ridding the earth of a vile monster, not only avenged the death of his little two year old daughter Nada, who died on account of exposure when Buluwayo was besieged by the hordes of blacks; but possibly and probably saved hundreds of precious lives that must have fallen victims to the ferocious passions constantly aroused by the appeals of the black god.

Later on Rex heard their story, told in simple language. It has since been made known to the world—how they pierced the heart of Matabeleland, and found the dreaded M'limo's cavern home.

A large kraal of hundreds of lodges stood at the foot of the hill upon which they had been informed they would find the home of the Wicked One, where he was seen by none but his brother priests, who carried his commands to the war brigades of fighting men.

There was constant danger—they had during the day been seen by women carrying water, and doubtless bands of warriors were scouring the country in search of them.

A council was being held under the shadow of the very hill which they must mount in order to accomplish their work.

The time had come to strike a blow that was to free South Africa of as vile a monster, as cruel an imposter as ever held sway among the wild Karoos; and men better fitted to carry out this really humane deed could not have been found the world over than those who took their lives in their hands and accepted the trust. The account of their concluding venture as told to the correspondent was simple yet graphic.

Both of them tightened their belts and prepared for that last dash. Around them at the foot of the kopjes were probably a thousand of as cruel barbarians as Africa can boast.

According to the programme of the two desperate men not a shot was to be fired. It was to be a seizure—if not a seizure, the knife—if not the knife, as a last desperate resort, the rifle.

Pausing to take a long breath, the two daring Anglo-Saxon heroes, crouching low, ran swiftly out in the tall grass of the open space, stumbling here and there over the hidden bowlders, but keeping ever in a direct line for the summit.

Just beyond the open glade they came upon a steep path which somewhat resembled a rude staircase. It was fortunately invisible from below and Burnham and Armstrong passed rapidly and noiselessly along the ascent.

A SUN ROOM.

It May Be Parlor, Living Room or Sickroom on Occasion.

A woman who is superintending the building of a new home is adding a sun room to the apartments of the house. When her friends have asked her who is the invalid of the family for whom it is presumably designed she has replied: "There is no invalid, and I am hoping, by means of this very room, that there may be none. We build greenhouses for the plants we love because they grow best in the sunlight, but the human plants of our household, those we love the dearest, are often ignorantly tucked away in north, sunless rooms, and we wonder that they languish. This sun room which we have made is on the second floor, facing east and south, and the architect has worked it into a corner of the house plan by which the numerous windows that are especially large and close together are set in a sloping roof.

"The room is arranged so that in case of illness it can be conveniently used independently of the rest of the house. The walls are painted, and the floor is of hard wood and will, of course, have no carpet or even rugs to gather dust and germs. Where the floor and walls join, the builder has made a curve, as is done in modern hospital buildings, instead of the usual right angle.

"The furniture is to be very simple, some comfortable cane chairs and settees and a few cushions with washable covers. We mean to use the room as much as possible each day. The children can study there, and in winter particularly I hope for good results to us all from much living in my sun parlor. For this reason I have had it placed near other rooms of the house that we may get in the way of going there."—Table Talk.

PUBLIC GRADUALLY AWAKENS TO THE FACT.

The latest fad in operations has been the appendicitis fad; before that the fad for rectal operations (piles, etc.) held sway. Hundreds of patients were frightened and hurried into hospitals, operated upon and robbed of their last dollar when the trouble was a simple case of hemorrhoids or piles only, easily cured at home with a simple remedy costing but 50c a box.

"I procured one 50c box of Pyramid Pile Cure of my druggist, with the intention of buying a larger box later, but was happily surprised when I found that I was cured, and still have six 'pyramids' left out of the first and only box. I have not had the least sign of piles since I used this one box, which has been about two months, previous to using Pyramid Pile Cure I had the worst kind of bleeding and protruding piles for over thirty-one years, and no one knows except those who have had the piles, the pain and misery I suffered.

"I am a poor man but have often said I would give a fortune, if I had it, to be cured of the piles, and now I have been cured for 50c. AFTER 38 HOURS' FIRE

Baltimore's Loss in Buildings Is Estimated $150,000,000.

Business Men Rendered Penniless—One Hundred and Forty Acres Burned Over and 2,500 Buildings Destroyed—50,000 Are Thrown Out of Work—Outside Aid to Avert Partial Famine—Not a Life Lost.

Baltimore, Feb. 9.—Baltimore is staggering under a fire loss which no one has the temerity to put into figures. The important commercial district is a mass of blackened ruins, the result of a conflagration which raged without even a momentary check from 10.45 a.m. Sunday until 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the officials agreed the flames were under control. The fire raged nearly 38 hours, in spite of almost superhuman efforts put forth by the best fighting forces which more than half a dozen cities mustered.

Wind Fought Fire Fighters.

Throughout the terrible contest which firemen and fire waged for supremacy, humanity was handicapped by a gale which carried burning brands to remote sections. But for the work of volunteers in extinguishing these embers, it is almost certain the burned area would have been much greater. As it is, about 75 blocks, or 140 acres, are gone. The burned district is within the territory bounded on the west by Liberty street, on the north by Lexington, on the east by Jones Falls and on the south by Basin. The districts thus swept by fire comprised nearly 2,500 buildings.

Insurance companies have opened temporary offices in the Lexington Hotel, but their representatives decline to estimate the loss. The answer of one is typical of all: "It is too big. We have not figures to describe it. Make it above $$100,000,000. The best we can do." The same indecision was true in regard to estimates concerning insurance.

City Under Martial Law.

The city was early placed under martial law to prevent looting. Gen. Corbin will take command of the militia now here, and the regulars ordered out. The struggle to-day has been with the one end of confining the fire to the west side of Jones Falls. No one dares guess the result if the flames had jumped this stream. That the fire was checked was the result of its meeting the concentrated labors of nearly 100 fire companies, aided by the powerful fire tug the Cataract.

Many Men Ruined.

Where the fire has died out nothing remains but ruins, from which rise hundreds of towering, insecure shafts, all that is left of handsome business houses of all kinds. The loss will not be accurately estimated for weeks. Business men, prosperous Saturday, are poor to-day. Expressions heard among these men reveal an astounding number who were but poorly protected by insurance.

50,000 Out of Work.

Col. Supples, a competent authority on factory statistics, estimated the number of persons thrown out of work will reach 50,000.

Inspector of Buildings Preston, after making a careful study of the burned district, placed the building loss alone at $150,000,000.

Last night it was feared that aid must come from the adjacent cities or a partial famine will be an added phase of the situation. Restaurants are entirely without food, and the destruction of the commission houses along the wharves has shut off the supply. Hotels are but little better. Preparations are being made to rush supplies from New York, in order to avert suffering.

Not a single life has been lost, and not a human being has even been dangerously injured. The hospital lists consist of minor burns, with the exception of Jacob Inglefritz, a fireman, from York, Pa. He has a fractured leg and is badly burned.

$1,000,000 For Relief.

Washington, Feb. 9.—A bill was introduced yesterday by Representative Emrich (Illinois) appropriating $1,000,000 for the relief of sufferers from the Baltimore fire.

Fire in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Feb. 9.—Fire broke out in The Tribune building Sunday night, and, with the water used to extinguish it, did damage to the extent of about $30,000. Origin of the fire is unknown. Following were the losses: Tribune Publishing Company, loss by fire and water, $10,000, covered by insurance; Richardson & Bishop, stationers, $10,000, fully insured; Hubbard Dental Supply Company, $3,000, fully insured; Morrison & Son, printers, $1,000; J. Tovel, agent, $10,000.

Fire at the Soo.

Sault Ste. Marie, Feb. 9.—The fine building owned by Mr. Drew was burned yesterday. The loss is $8,000.

Toronto Municipal Scandal.

Toronto, Feb. 9.—Yesterday, aside from a few minutes of concluding testimony from Harry Page, the day before the special Commissioner was consumed with the stories of the elder Forster and his two sons, corroborating Rev. Frank Forster's version of his complicity with Ald. Woods, and a few words from Sloan, the real estate man, who was placed on the padded list by Woods. Little of real interest developed. In the Police Court, ex-Ald. Burns was acquitted, "as there is not evidence to go on," said the Police Magistrate.

50 Workmen Killed.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 9.—Fifty workmen were killed yesterday by the caving in of an embankment on the Warsaw-Vienna Railroad.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

A long portage makes a heavy canoe.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes; "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Signed, JEAN VALCOURT,

The Flagging Energies Revived.—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be not relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These come from stomachic troubles. The want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare power, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression, and reviving the flagging energies.

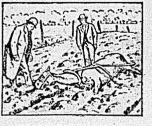
UNIMPROVED ROADS.

What They Cost the Farmers—A Solution of the Problem—Their Influence on the Times.

The subject of good roads is one in which every inhabitant of the country is personally interested, writes a road engineer in Good Roads Magazine. Unless he produces on his farm every article he uses, unless he receives no mail, pays no taxes and never ventures beyond the bounds of his own property, he is affected in the spot tenderest to us all—his pocketbook—by the condition of the country roads. He pays more taxes to keep up bad roads than he would to maintain good roads. If he receives mail it costs the Government—and this means the people—more to carry it over bad roads than good roads. If he travels beyond his own property it takes more of his time, which is money, and more out of his team over bad roads than good ones.



THE ROAD THAT KILLS HORSES.

It costs him more on account of bad roads to market produce. This extra cost must be added to the cost of production, and the man who buys the article must pay the difference. It costs just as much to grow a bushel of wheat or corn near a good road as beside a bad one, but if on the bad road the producer can only haul two-thirds of the load with the same team that he can on the good one his cost of marketing his wheat or corn is 50 per cent. more than it otherwise would be, and the man who buys the wheat or corn must pay that much more. And wheat or corn, oats or cotton, beef or wool, the same thing applies. If all the roads are bad all the producers labor under the same disadvantage, and the manufacturer pays the farmer the extra price and then charges the farmer a higher sum in his turn for the manufactured articles to make up for it.

The problem seems capable of but a single solution. To the average farmer the word "bond" is terrifying, but it need not be. We all ask credit of our neighbors daily in some form or other either as to our statements, reputations or financial affairs. Judge Thayer says, "The business of a civilized world is done on the credit system." The business of barbarism is transacted on the "cash" plan. The 500,000,000 people who get in debt have food to eat, clothes to wear and places in which to sleep. The 500,000,000 who do not possess sufficient confidence in themselves to trust one another never tasted flour or beef, go naked and sleep out of doors. Activity, prosperity and thrift are the natural fruits of mutual dependence on one another, coupled with the legend "I promise to pay."

There are many times when the demoralized condition of the business of this country can be traced directly to bad roads. Hard times, dull times, labor unemployed, fluctuating prices, reduced railroad earnings, spasmodic speculation in stocks, corners in food stuffs, are often the immediate results of bad roads. R. G. Dun & Co. of New York not long ago in a review of the condition of trade said that "the stringency in the money markets here and at some other points is more largely due to slow collections, which appear to result from severe weather and impracticable roads," than to anything else. So it is the mud that rules the land. So great a foe requires the united efforts of the people to dethrone it. In this struggle every line of business in the land should be united, and there is certainly no interest which has more at stake in the success of this movement and which should be more determined and active in urging the work forward than the farmers.

How Your Colt May Be Hurt.

Too many people who allow the sucking colt to follow the mare do not remember that a young colt is not strong enough to follow either in a long drive or at work all day. If they stopped to think how young the colt is and how little muscle he has they would shut him up in some cool, comfortable place while the dam is in use.

The rule is that a young colt should be where he can lie down and rest two-thirds of the time. At first, until he gets a little used to the separation, great care should be taken to shut up the colt where he cannot possibly injure himself. Don't put him in a pasture where he can rush against a barbed wire nor in a stable with a large window where he can jump out and break his leg.

A plain box stall without undulations in the floor, without manger or ties of any kind, is best. No other young animal is more likely to get into trouble, and no other is so easily damaged.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

The Way to Win With Sheep.

The only sure way to win in the sheep business is to stick to it through adversity as well as prosperity, says Wool Markets and Sheep. In times of adversity will be a good time to prepare for prosperity, and vice versa. The man who manages well will have plenty of sheep to sell when prices are good, and when they are ruinously low he will be buying or holding what he has. Of course there goes with this some allowance, for it does not pay to keep an unprofitable sheep, and some will be unprofitable in times of depression. Then is when a man can ill afford to keep a nonpaying sheep.

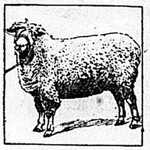
THE BREEDING OF SHEEP

Canada an Ideal Country for Their Development—Much Already Done, But Industry Can Be Greatly Extended.

That there is room in Canada for an immense development of the sheep-raising industry will readily be admitted. In this country we are almost entirely free from the ravages of those diseases which interfere so seriously with the profits of the sheep grower in some other lands. Then, too, we grow in abundance nearly all the foods best suited for feeding sheep. We have excellent pastures in summer, and with rape and turnips there is no lack of succulent food for fall and winter. Where clover hay and pea straw are not available, some other suitable roughage can usually be found. Oats and bran are everywhere convenient grain feeds, while peas and beans may also be provided in many localities. Unfortunately, too, we have in nearly all parts of Canada an abundance of weeds, which may partially be kept in check by maintaining large flocks of sheep. It is said that 85 per cent. of our common weeds are readily eaten by sheep

Sheep breeders, like all other live stock growers, should start out with some definite aim in view. In Canada this will doubtless be the production of mutton for the home and foreign markets, with wool-growing merely as a side line. The breed chosen should be one adapted to the purpose in view, as well as one for which the farmer has a liking. In addition to this, it must be a breed suited to the conditions of soil and climate prevailing in the locality. As a general rule the heavier breeds do best on somewhat lowlying or level land, while the lighter breeds prefer upland or even mountainous country. These characteristics are largely due to the nature of the soil in the district where each breed originated, as has been shown by Mr. Primrose McConnell in his excellent work on Agricultural Geology. If a purebred flock is to be kept, the farmer should choose a popular breed or one gaining in popularity, in order to be reasonably sure of a demand for his stock. Whether the flock be purebred or grade, a knowledge of the anatomy of the sheep, and of the methods of treating common disorders of sheep will prove of decided value to the owner.

In starting a flock only healthy, robust ewes should be selected, and all of them of the same type. They should be mated with a first-class ram of similar type, and one of the same breed as the ewe flock, unless the farmer is crossing for some special purpose and does not intend to retain the progeny for breeding. Each year the ewes should be carefully weeded out, only the best being retained; too many Canadian farmers in the past have followed exactly the opposite course, allowing buyers to pick out the best specimens and retaining only the cull females for breeding. By following the system of culling closely, a high degree of uniformity will in a few years be established in the flock. Every farmer knows that the presence of a few culls in a lot of animals always proves an obstacle to a sale at a remunerative price; therefore great pains should be taken to have the flock of uniformly good quality.



FIRST PRIZE SHEARING COTSWOLD RAM.
Exhibited 1902 at the Royal Show, Carlisle.

Good, comfortable, roomy sheds or stabling for the cold and stormy weather are necessary. These need not be expensive, but should be well ventilated, free from drafts, and situated on dry ground. A large, open yard, apart from that occupied by other animals, should be attached to their houses in every case, to allow exercise. Too much confinement in overwarm, illy-ventilated or drafted stables is fatal to success with sheep. On the other hand, comfortable quarters, regular and liberal feeding, plenty of pure water and a sufficiency of salt will go far to ensure their successful wintering and a strong crop of lambs in the spring. Very careful attention must be given at lambing time, but at other seasons comparatively little time need be spent in looking after the flock. Indeed, sheep require less costly buildings and equipment, and less labor in caring for them than almost any other class of live stock.

Unfortunately there are two causes which tend to demoralize the sheep-raising industry in Canada, viz., the wholesale adulteration of many lines of imported woollen goods, and the ravages of dogs and wolves. The former renders wool-growing unprofitable, and the latter prevents the farmer from growing mutton sheep in many districts which are otherwise well suited to the business. That legislation is needed to protect the sheep breeder from these evils can scarcely be doubted.

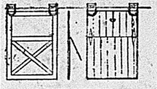
How Diseases Spread.

Diseases are often communicated by feeding animals in stalls which have been occupied previously by diseased stock. Such stalls should first be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected. To do this take a pint of sulphuric acid and put it in a bucket of water. Then, with an old mop, wash all parts of the stall, especially the trough or manger. All stalls should occasionally be so disinfected, as their constant use permits them to gradually become unfit abodes of the animals. The acid and water should be carefully handled.

A MODEL BARN DOOR.

An Illustrated Description That Should Enable Anyone to Construct the Door for His Own Use.

Having seen the need of a good, substantial barn door that could be closed in such a way as to prevent animals from passing in or out of the building, and at the same time admit light and fresh air, I have devised and furnish sketch of one that will meet the requirements. We all know how unsatisfactory the hinge-door is, always sagging and being torn to pieces. With the double-hinge door as is commonly seen, the lower one can be closed and the upper one left open so as to allow better ventilation and light. Where there is a wide door the hinge is impracticable and then the track-hinge door will have to be used. But that, when closed, is entirely closed and admits no light. A window sash might be put in but that is too easily broken to be practicable.



A MODEL BARN DOOR.

My idea is to make a strong frame according to illustration. The sketch shows a door six by eight feet, framed with two-by-six inch pine mortised together and braced in the lower portion with common "two-by-fours." The lower part is then boarded up solid. The upper ends of the boards being beveled and coming to within about two inches of the top of the centre cross-piece. Then boards are cut and fitted in the shape of a door for the upper part. Two one-by-six inch boards will serve for cleats. The corners are then cut so that they will not interfere with the hanger. The door is then placed and hung by two flat hinges, the upper side is fitted with a spring catch having a small chain attached to unfasten with. It can be readily seen that this door can be "opened down" while the main part is closed preventing any live stock from passing in or out. These plans are of course general and can be slightly altered to fit any required size of door.—Ohio Farmer.

The Farm Horse of To-day.

The farmer to-day requires heavier horses than he has been using to do his farm work profitably. The two-furrow plow, the wide harrow and other implements require power. One man with a good three-horse team and modern implements will do as much work and do it better than two men can with four light horses.

While I handle Hackneys, French Coachers, Percherons and Clydesdales and consider them all good breeds, I believe the Clydesdale is the safest breed for a farmer to work. Canadian experience has been that a Clydesdale stallion of 2,000 pounds or less, possessing good feet and legs, compact formation and quality of bone, skin and hair, has produced the most useful and best selling colts from the ordinary mare of the country.

It will pay farmers to get into a better class of horses, and the draft type, it seems to me, is the most profitable for the farmer under ordinary conditions. There are not so many misfits among draft as lighter types. Blemishes, such as a cut from a wire fence, will not depreciate the value of a draft horse in the same proportion. When two and a half years old a draft colt can be used for light farm work, and from then until he is sold will earn his keep. A carriage colt will suffer in style and action if worked before he is four years old.

The best horses on the market to-day weigh 1,500 to 1,800 pounds, and are low down and compact in body. To secure these horses it is not necessary to use stallions over a ton in weight. The snug sire of 1,800 to 2,000 pounds is all right. Baron's Pride, probably the greatest living Clydesdale stallion in Scotland, does not and never has weighed 2,000 pounds. From my experience I have no hesitation in strongly urging farmers to use good Clydesdale stallions if they desire to raise colts of 1,400 pounds or more that will always meet a ready sale at good prices.—Robert Ness, Quebec, in Orange Judd Farmer.

Willing to Wait.

"Well," said Farmer Briggs to the artist, "how much will 'e paint my farm with me standing at a door for?"

"Oh, five guineas," said the artist.

"Done," said the farmer. "Come to-morrow."

In due course the painting was finished. But, alas! the careless artist clean forgot to paint in the worthy farmer on the picture of his farm.

"Yes; I like it," said the farmer; "but where's me, lad—where's me?"

The error he had made flashed across the artist, but he tried to pass it off with a joke. "Oh," he said, "you've gone inside to get my five guineas."

"Oh, have I?" said the nettled old chap, "p'r'aps I'll be comin' out soon, and if I dew I'll pay you; in t' meantime we'll hang it up and wait."

Don't Burn Straw.

The Dover's Journal says: "The time has arrived when it will not pay to burn straw in the central west." Really there never was a time in the central west or elsewhere when or where it would pay to burn straw. But many farmers burn instead of turning under anything that might impede the plow, regardless of the effect upon the soil. Straw should be fed to stock and the manure returned to the soil. But it is better to scatter the straw and plow it in than to burn it. Fire is an enemy to fertility.—Farm and Ranch.

CATARRH OF THE HEAD

Is very common, but awfully dangerous, because it causes deafness and leads to consumption. Cure is as certain to follow the use of Catarrhozone as day is to follow night. You simply breathe the fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which spreads through the nasal passages, throat and lungs, driving out every vestige of catarrh. "I was cured of chronic catarrh of the nose and throat," writes Ernest M. Watkinson, of Laurenceton, "after many years of misery by Catarrhozone, which is a splendid remedy to free the air passages from mucous. Catarrhozone relieved quickly and my cure has been permanent." Price $1 for two months' treatment; trial size 25c.

Sheep Killing Record.

William H. Crawford, world's champion sheep butcher, was defeated at Omaha, Neb., in a contest for the championship and a side bet of $500. The challenger, Charles E. Crawford, clearly demonstrated his ability to defeat the champion. The contest took place in Koutsy Hall at South Omaha. The event was made a special function, and there was a large crowd present. The champion, William H. Crawford, killed and dressed two sheep in 3m. 52s. His previous record, made five years ago, was 3m. 14s. Charles E. Crawford completed his work in 3m. 22s., beating his opponent by thirty seconds.

FINEST CHEESE.

DIRECTORS OF DAIRYMEN'S ASSOCIATION TELL HOW TO MAKE IT.

The Board of Directors of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association made some changes during the year 1903 in its management of the dairy business, and among the most important was a change in the method of instruction. The various factories in this Eastern District were formed into groups or syndicates, and an Instructor was placed in charge of each, whose duty is as herein outlined:

First—To instruct the patrons upon the care and handling of milk to make finest cheese.

Second—To look after and urge upon the owners of factories the improvement of their buildings and surroundings, and to persuade them to improve the sanitary conditions thereof.

Third—To instruct the maker, when necessary, to improve the manufacture of cheese.

Fourth—To test the milk of the patrons of the various factories, when found necessary, and to endeavor to improve the product of the factories over which they had control.

While everything in connection with the working of this syndicate system was not as satisfactory as we had hoped, yet, the trial has been made, and the results are so convincing that we are adopting the same system, with few modifications, for this year.

We again have associated with us Mr. G. G. Publow, who will be Chief Instructor, and with Him at the head, and the co-operation of the patrons, factory owners and makers, we hope to make greater progress during 1904 than any previous year.

Factory owners wishing to become members of the various syndicates in their respective districts will kindly notify the Secretary as soon as possible.

You Cannot Rely on Imitations.

WHEN THREATENED WITH BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA, PNEUMONIA OR SERIOUS LUNG TROUBLE BE SURE AND GET THE GENUINE.

Dr. Chase's SYRUP OF Linseed and Turpentine

For generations the value of turpentine as a remedial agent in all affections of the bronchial tubes and lungs has been well known.

It remained for Dr. Chase to so combine turpentine, linseed and half a dozen other ingredients as to not only make a wonderfully successful medicine but also one that is so pleasant to the taste as to be sought for by children.

The sale of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is more than three times that of many similar remedies. The result of this success is a host of imitations.

When attacked by coughs and colds which threaten to reach the lungs and prove serious; when awakened by children with croupy coughs, gasping for breath, you cannot afford to trust to imitations.

Mrs. J. W. Lloyd, Albion street, Belleville, Ont., states:—

"In the beginning of last winter I took a very severe cold, accompanied by a bad cough, and was almost laid up for a time. I tried several remedies but with indifferent results. On the advice of a friend I got a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found that it relieved the cough at once. By the time I had taken the one bottle my cold was gone and I can truthfully recommend it as a splendid remedy for coughs and colds."

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every bottle.

If we did as much good as we want other people to do, the millennium would be next door.

A BEEF RING.

What It Is—How It Is Organized and Operated.

A beef ring is a union of farmers for the purpose of supplying themselves with fresh meat each week at a low cost. The ring usually has sixteen members, who supply the animals in regular order, one each week. A meeting is held in winter, when an organization is effected, the order of furnishing the animals decided by lot and a butcher and secretary appointed. The butcher (who need not be a professional) usually receive $2 per head for his services. Each member in turn brings in his animal, a young and fat one dressing from 400 to 450 pounds twenty-four hours before it is to be killed.

The butcher provides a suitable place for killing, furnished with a hook for each member. He kills the animal in the evening and cuts it up in the morning, weighs each share, hangs it upon its respective hook before 6 a.m. and gives hide, head, heart and fat to the owner of the animal. He keeps an accurate account of the weight of each animal and of the quantity that each member receives per week. Members come for their shares the morning after it is killed, and each receives a boiling piece, a roast and a piece of steak each week and receives the different cuts in rotation—that is, No. 1 cut goes to No. 1 man the first week, to No. 2 man the second week, to No. 3 man the third week, etc.

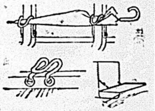
The secretary acts as valuator in case an animal is thought by the butcher to be below standard quality. At the close of the season he takes from the butcher's account the quantity received by each member and presents statements of this and of the weight of the animal furnished and, the price per pound of all. If A's animal weighed 400 pounds and he during the season received 425 pounds, he must pay for the twenty-five pounds received at the rate of 6 cents per pound if all the beef has been up to the standard. If B furnished an animal that is decided to be worth only 5 cents per pound and all the others are up to the standard, he is charged 6 cents for all meat received, except the cuts he received of his own animal, which will be charged to him at 5 cents, and all the other members will be charged at the rate of 5 cents for B's beef.

If a member receives less than the weight of the animal furnished he shall be paid for the amount he is deficient at the rate at which his animal was valued. The foregoing is the way in which beef rings have been operated in the Township of West Gwillimbury, Simcoe County, Ont., for a number of years. It is simple, easily worked and gives good satisfaction.—Cor. Farm and Home.

The Farmer's Market Wagon.

Farmers who regularly take produce to market or deliver direct to customers should have a wagon fitted with conveniences for that purpose. Such an outfit adds much to comfort and in the long run saves expense, says a New England Homestead writer, in describing the following devices:

Instead of wrapping the lines about the whip or leaving them where they often get beneath the horse's feet, why not have a wire hook fastened to the wagon overhead, as shown in the cut. It can be easily made of stiff fencing wire and secured on the wagon.



FRAME CURTAIN—LINE HOOK—UMBRELLA HOLDER.

At one side near the top two other hooks, similarly fastened to the bows, hold an umbrella, as seen in the figure. This is kept there rain or shine, is never forgotten and left at home when most needed.

Instead of a rear curtain why not stretch the oilcloth or canvas on a frame hinged at the top? It should be furnished with stays, jointed like those of a buggy top, as represented in the drawing. It serves as an awning and protects from sun or rain when the driver is standing in market or taking articles from the wagon.

Apples and Their Markets.

The high price and shortage of barrels has been a great burden to many apple growers, but in the end it may prove a good thing. For one thing it has forced some growers to pack their best fruit in boxes. This form of package is sure to grow in favor as soon as buyers are accustomed to it. This year's shipments will help advertise it. Growers will remember the tremendous apple crop of 1896. The price was low, and many predicted failure, but the very low price forced shippers to send the apples into new markets, places where such fruit had never gone before. This created new demands, which have grown with each year. But for that year of cheap apples these demands would be unheard of.—Rural New Yorker.

Equalizes Values.

It may be presumed that it costs more to make a can of milk near the city, where land is high priced and hay in demand at $20 per ton, than it does a hundred miles away, where land is plenty and cheap and where the farmer has hay to sell at $10 per ton, but the cost of transporting the milk for such a distance helps to equalize this, and the price per can is made at the city so that there is little if any more profit in milk production in one section than in another. Where hay and pasturage cost little the milk must sell low to pay cost of distribution.—American Cultivator.

CITY COUNCIL LAST NIGHT.

A Lot of Important Business Transacted by the Aldermen.

Ten Thousand Dollars to be Raised by Debentures for Granolithic Walks.

When Mayor Chown called the Council to order at 8 o'clock last evening the Aldermen present were McFee, Gordon, Green, Panter and Sulman. Aldermen Sinclair, Marsh and Ketcheson subsequently came in.

After the minutes of last meeting had been read and confirmed, the following communications were read:

From the Belleville Hardware Company, thanking the Council for the use of the Council Chamber in which to hold their annual meeting.—Received and filed.

From Mr. J. H. Starling, detailing those who had neglected to pay their taxes for 1901. The list was a lengthy one and showed some $6,000 still uncollected.—Referred to the Executive Committee.

Reports of the various committees which have already been published, were read.

The Executive Committee recommended that the Legislature be asked to pass an Act confirming the Gas by-law recently passed by the Council.

The special committee re the Treasurer's claim of $99.30 for expenses incurred by him in securing help to do work, which he alleges should have been done previous to his taking the office, presented a report. The committee recommended that he be paid $75.

On motion the Council went into committee of the whole on reports, Ald. Marsh in the chair.

The Executive Committee's report, recommending the payment of a number of accounts, was passed without discussion.

The committee's recommendation re the petitioning the Legislature re the Gas by-law caused some discussion.

Ald. Green asked why it was necessary for the Council to petition the Legislature for an Act in reference to this matter? The by-law was, he thought, properly drawn and was legally voted upon by the ratepayers, who sanctioned it. If what we have done has been done legally why should the Legislature be asked to step in and grant a special Act? The electors have pronounced in favor of the by-law, and he could not see what more was necessary. The Council should not cast any doubt upon the legality of the by-law, but he considered the recommendation was doing this.

The Solicitor said that there was an apparent desire on the part of some to question the legality of the by-law, hence the object of going to the Legislature to pass an Act in reference to it. He was satisfied the city would win if a suit was brought on. The object of getting the Act passed was to have a clear title to the by-law. This would save trouble and time.

The recommendation was unanimously adopted.

The Public Works Committee's recommendation that $2000 be taken out of this year's appropriation for granolithic walks caused some discussion.

Ald. McFee moved that the $2,000 recommended to be taken out of the appropriation of the Public Works for granolithic walks be stricken out and the whole $10,000 left intact. He did not want $2,000 taken out of an appropriation which had not yet been made. He did not consider it was fair play to do this. In other years these walks have been built by debentures. Why not do the same this year?

Ald. Sinclair agreed with Ald. McFee. Crossings would have to be built to a considerable number and these will cost about $1000. If $10,000 is spent on walks, let this amount be named and debentures to that amount be issued. He would support Ald. McFee's motion.

Ald. Panter stated that last year $7,000 was appropriated to Public Works, and this was spent on streets, and it was intended to build granolithic walks this year.

Mayor Chown thought that if $2,000 was taken out of the Public Works appropriation this would be all right.

Ald. McFee's amendment was carried.

Ald. Panter moved that a granolithic walk be built on the north side of Dundas street from Albert street to Foster Avenue.—Carried.

The Street Surveyor was heard in reference to the communication of Mr. Corby in reference to holding back the ice near his mill at Corbyville. He said that there were two things to consider, namely, if the city had a right to spend money outside of the city, and if by holding back the ice and land in Thurlow Township should be flooded would the city be liable?

On motion the matter was allowed to stand over for the present.

The special committee's report on an extra grant to the Treasurer was discussed.

Ald. Ketcheson objected to giving the Treasurer the extra sum named. He had hired to the city to do the work for a certain sum, and the Council should not give an increase. It was virtually an increase to his salary.

Ald. Sinclair said he would have objected to the amount named being given to the Treasurer if the Chairman of the Waterworks Committee had not recommended it.

Mayor Chown said the books were behind, entailing extra work upon the Treasurer.

Ald. Sulman stated that the Treasurer, when he took office, had to do some posting of the books, which was new work and should have been done before he took office. He had also collected some waterworks accounts, which added nearly $100 to the Waterworks department.

The committee's recommendation was adopted, Ald. Ketcheson alone voting against it.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

Ald. Panter introduced three by-laws, namely, one to confirm a standing committee of the Council known as the Gas Committee; one to petition the Legislature to confirm and validate the Gas By-law and one to regulate the running of the Gas Works.

Council went into Committee of the Whole on By-laws, Ald. Sulman in the chair.

The Gas By-law recommended that illuminating gas be $1.75 per 1,000 feet and $1.25 for fuel gas. The committee were empowered to make special arrangements to concerns who consume 100,000 or more feet.

On motion Mr. W. J. Thomson was appointed as Superintendent for the time being.

The by-laws were passed through their various stages and numbered respectively 1138, 1139 and 1140.

Motions.

Ald. Sinclair moved, seconded by Ald. McFee, that $559.82 be paid to Mr. F. Dolan in full for his claim against the city for fuel, etc., in connection with the city taking over the Gas Works.—Carried.

Ald. Green thought that Mr. Middleton or the Chairman of the Gas Committee should visit some places and secure information in reference to the manufacturing of gas by the new process. He made a motion to this effect.

After a brief discussion the matter was left in the hands of the Gas Committee.

Council adjourned.

THE DEATH LIST.

MRS. D. D. BOGART.

After an illness of several weeks' duration, Mrs. D. D. Bogart, of Bridge St., passed away to-day. The deceased lady was a member of two families notable in the history of our city, the Bickfords and the Bogarts. Her father, the late James Bickford, although a native of Oswego, N. Y., resided here for many years and was one of the most enterprising citizens sixty, seventy and eighty years ago. He was one of the four organizers of Belleville's first Sunday School—now Bridge St. Methodist. Her husband was engaged in several enterprises, chiefly lumbering, including the saw-mill on the island, now Victoria Park, in partnership with his brother Abraham. He has left two monuments of his energy in that fine block on Front St. where now the "Ontario" office is, and the other on Bridge St.—north side—at present occupied by Messrs. Downey, Leavens, LaRoche, Mrs. Keith and others. Mrs. Bogart is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Carr and Miss Bickford, and one brother, all of Oswego, N.Y. Miss Annie Bogart, John St., is a niece and Ex-Mayor Curtis Bogart a nephew of deceased. Mrs. Bogart was a member of John St. Presbyterian Church. She will be buried at Oswego.

HOWARD MOORE.

Howard Moore, 15 months' old child of Mr. and Mrs. John Moore, at the Deaf and Dumb Institute, died this morning. An attack of pneumonia was the cause of the child's death.

EDWARD L. COUGHLIN.

Mr. Edward L. Coughlin, who resided on Canifton Road, died yesterday afternoon. Deceased had been ailing for some time. About 80 years ago Mr. Coughlin was born in Ireland. When a young man he came out to this country and settled in Belleville, where he has resided for over half a century. For a number of years he was engaged as a watchman at the Grand Trunk Railway works here. Deceased was a member of St. Michael's Church. An aged widow and a family of three sons and five daughters survive him.

THRILLING EXPERIENCE.

EXPLOSION ON AN EXPRESS CAR —THE CAR BURNED—HEAVY LOSS.

The express messenger on No. 2 express from the west, due here at 1.36 a.m., was last night treated to a thrilling experience, and the wonder is that he is alive to-day to relate the incident. As the train was near Cobourg an explosion occurred in the express car and in an incredibly short time it was a mass of flames. Fortunately it was detached from the coaches and engine, and was allowed to burn up. What caused the explosion is not known. In the car, in addition to a considerable quantity of express matter, was a bundle of furs valued at $5000, which was destroyed. The messenger had to make a hasty exit to save his life. The loss will be considerable, but at present it is impossible to state what was burned.

The bridesmaid was Miss May Bawden, a sister of the bride, and Mr. Frank Dolan, a brother of the groom, was the groomsman. After the ceremony the guests were treated to a wedding breakfast at the bride's home. Mr. and Mrs. Dolan left this afternoon for a trip westward. Upon their return they will reside in the city. MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

A MAN OF THE WORLD TO-NIGHT.

In William Bonelli's and Rose Stahl's handsome production of "A Man of the World," which is underlined for appearance at the Carman this evening, there is a delightful child's part, prettily acted by little Master Dick. The role is that of a boy about six years of age, the natural son of Sir Harry Romer, an English sporting nobleman, the role played by Mr. Bonelli. The childish innocence of the boy and his delightful ingenuousness is pathetically pretty, and in a scene in the second act of the play, where the little fellow and his father meet for the first time, the effect is peculiarly charming and fascinating. Sitting upon his father's knee in an English country garden, the child is totally unaware that the man who is holding him is his own father. His childish prattle has that in it which goes straight to the heart of every auditor, the scene being acted by Mr. Bonelli and Master Dick with a finish and skill which makes it one of the finest stage incidents witnessed this year.

Custom cannot stale the infinite variety of George Grossmith. He could keep his audience in roars if he presented his old programmes, in which we would find new charms, but he does nothing of the sort. He presents ever new topics in ever new ways. The Boston critics say that he is in his happiest vein this season, and speak in the highest terms of his programmes. Mr. Grossmith is alert, quick, nervous, pungent as ever, and absence seems to have added nothing to his years, but the public will regret to hear that he will go no more a-roaming after this tour, and will confine his appearances to England. At the Carman Opera House, Tuesday, Feb 16.

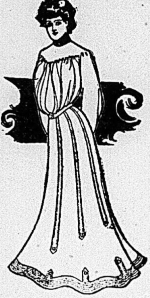
DRESS SKIRTS.

A Fashionable Walking Length—Its New Fullness and Flow.

There really seems no end to the new models for skirts this season. Indeed, they have followed one another in almost bewildering array. There are now three distinct lengths to account for. There is the long, sweeping skirt for indoor or smart visiting wear, the real trotteur, clearing the ground by some appreciable distance, most welcome and well worn for country existence and in a minor degree for early morning wear in town, and, lastly, that cross between the two, yet quite distinct in cut as in intention from either, the skirt which just clears the ground, almost appearing to touch it, which has been sealed by the sign manual of fashion as the correct length for town walking and street use.



FASHIONABLE WALKING SKIRT.

Then, each of these classes has many varieties of the kilted, plaited and gathered description, some held out by stiffened underskirts remotely suggestive of the crinoline, a stiffening really rendered necessary from a practical standpoint, where the extreme fullness of some models has to be contended with. One of the smartest of plain skirts of the town walking length is shown in the accompanying sketch.

It will be noticed at once that, though fitted with the utmost precision round the waist and hips, the "flow" for the base begins much higher up than has been the fashion lately, the skirt spreading out only at the hem being now a thing of the past. Skillfully planned seams smartly gored are responsible for this flow.

A lining is more often than not conspicuous by its absence, a special foundation or the usual long flounced petticoat taking its place. For this reason that stitched band which surrounds the hem is particularly welcome, serving to give weight and decision to the fall of the skirt, while it also helps materially to hold it out with a certain stiffness and precision (a great consideration with all skirts of curtailed length) over and above its decorative properties.

McINTOSH BROS.

BORDEN IN EAST BRUCE

Conservative Leader Shows the Hollowness of Liberal Claims.

Spoke at Teeswater in Interests of J. J. Donnelly, the Conservative Candidate—Conservative Party Had Redeemed Every Pledge They Made—Mr. Tarte Sizes Up Sir Wilfrid Laurier As a Business Man.

Teeswater, Feb. 9.—A Liberal-Conservative meeting was held here last night in the interest of the Conservative candidate, J. J. Donnelly. The chief speaker was R. L. Borden, leader of the Conservative party in the Dominion. He was assisted by E. F. Clarke of Toronto.

Mr. Borden was then called and rose to his feet amid prolonged cheering. He paid a tribute to the late Henry Cargill, showing that he was a man respected by Conservatives and Liberals alike. He complimented the Conservatives of East Bruce in choosing Mr. Donnelly as their standard-bearer. Coming down to the political issues of the day, he traversed the claims made by Liberals for causing prosperity and pointed out that it was not the Laurier Government that had brought prosperity to the United States, France, Germany, etc.

Shows Up Liberals.

The speaker then took up the question of election corruption, showing that the gentlemen holding the highest places in the Liberal ranks are leaders and managers of the Liberal machines spreading corruption all over this fair Dominion.

The Laurier party have squandered nearly $7,000,000 more in the past six years than the Conservative party spent in their last six years of administration.

The Liberal leaders and their followers cannot tell what their tariff policy is, but are following a double-faced policy, claiming friendship at once with the advocates of protection and with the supporters of free trade.

The Conservative policy has always been a policy of adequate protection which, in the long run, is the only policy that will bring perpetual prosperity to Canadians the Dominion over.

The Conservative leader next took up the problem of transportation. Canadians, both Liberal and Conservative, are proud of the C.P.R., which work was undertaken and completed by the Government of Sir John A. Macdonald, although at that time the work was opposed by the most prominent Liberals. Now the Liberal Government is crowing over the prosperity that the C.P.R. is bringing to Canada and go so far as to say that it brought about such prosperity.

Mr. Borden closed by a strong appeal to the electors to return Mr. Donnelly as the supporter of a party who would carry into effect every pledge that they have ever made. The Conservative party have always stood up for the prosperity of Canadians and they pledge themselves to do so still.

Mr. Tarte Replies.

Montreal, Feb. 9.—Hon. Mr. Tarte spoke last night at a meeting held at Point St. Charles in the interest of Dr. Bernard, the Conservative candidate in Hochelaga. The meeting, which was held in the parish church, was attended by about 800 people, and the parish priest occupied a seat on the platform. Mr. Tarte received an enthusiastic reception and spoke with vigor, replying to the statements made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his Montreal address.

Mr. Tarte said that the Premier, while one of the greatest Parliamentary orators in the world, was a poor business man. Mr. Tarte said he had often felt discouraged when talking business to the Prime Minister, owing to his lack of practical business knowledge.

Mr. Tarte showed how protection was necessary for the welfare of the country. His remarks were applauded.

One Killed By Explosion.

North Bay, Feb. 9.—A terrific and fatal explosion occured at Donovan & Grant's camp on the T. & N. O. Railway on Saturday, about twenty miles from the end of steel. The powder and dynamite storehouse blew up and one man was seriously injured. He may not recover. Two other men were badly hurt and one horse was killed. The train conveying the injured men arrived here yesterday afternoon, and the unfortunate victims are now being cared for in the Victorian Hospital.

Cut His Throat.

Toronto, Feb. 9.—Stephen Hamus, who has been suffering from rheumatism for some time, became despondent Sunday night and attempted suicide at his home, 213 Euclid avenue. He was discovered in his room with his throat cut. Monday morning he was removed to the Western Hospital. Hamus is 55 years of age. As yet the doctors cannot say whether or not he will recover.

Three Persons Injured.

Ingersoll, Feb. 9.—The engine of the C.P.R. passenger train due here at 8.58 yesterday morning, jumped the track near the station, injuring Engineer J. Gunning, Fireman James Watson and Express Messenger J. D. Geary, though none of them seriously. Ice on the track was the cause of the accident.

Coal For 99 Towns.

Toronto, Feb. 9.—General Manager McGuigan of the G.T.R. said yesterday that the Lackawanna people had 203 cars for shipment to 99 towns in Ontario and had asked for instructions. The G.T.R. has undertaken to handle 50 or 60 cars daily.

A TEN MINUTES' SESSION.

Legislature, However, Will Have More to Do To-day, As Hon. G. W. Ross Will Deliver His Budget Speech.

Toronto, Feb. 9.—Ten minutes sufficed the legislators of Queen's Park to clear off the business of the province slated by the Government for yesterday's session. There were fourteen Conservatives in their seats, and just as many Government supporters, and the galleries were almost completely empty. There will be more to do to-day. Premier Ross will give his annual budget speech, which will probably occupy the whole of the afternoon.

Hon. J. R. Stratton laid on the table the eighteenth annual report of the Niagara Falls Park Commissioners. The report shows that during the year J. W. Langmuir, chairman of the Commission, had been granted an honorarium of $5,000.

The receipts of the Park Commissioners were: Balance on hand, $117,110.85; Electrical Development Company, rental two years, $30,000; Niagara Power Company, rental two years, $15,000; International Railway, rental two years, $10,000; Zybach & Brundage, $10,166.67; Ontario Power Company, on account refectory building, $20,000; wharf privileges, $423, tolls and sundries, $532.07; bank interest on balances, $1,960.80; total, $99,793.39.

There is also on hand a special deposit of $25,000 by the Electrical Development Company to meet cost of wing dams at intakes of Canadian Niagara Power Company, and at joint intake of International Railway and the Town of Niagara Falls.

The expenditures were $75,188, leaving a balance of $24,605.51. This includes $11,087 for a new refectory building.

Mr. Gibson introduced a bill to amend the act respecting religious institutions. The bill validates conveyances made to trustees appointed by the Quarterly Official Board of the Methodist Church.

In answer to Dr. Barr, the Minister of Crown Lands said about 20,000 applications have been made by volunteers under the Land Grants Act, and of these 10,382 have been granted by the Government.

Mr. Duff asked if Mr. Taylor, recently a clerk in the Crown Lands Department, is still under suspension, or has he been reinstated or dismissed? Mr. Davis said Mr. Taylor has resigned and his resignation has been accepted.

In moving for a return of the names of workmen at the Soo paid by the Government, Mr. Whitney assumed that the Government has not yet paid these men. The bank, under the authority of the Government, has paid them, and consequently the amounts do not appear in the financial statement.

Mr. Gibson said there was no objection and the material was in the hands of the Treasury Department, which would enable them to bring down the return the later part of the week.

Col. Matheson asked for twenty copies of the public accounts for each of the members. The Premier said he would enquire.

STICKS TO BALFOUR'S PLAN.

Replying to John Morley Right Hon Gerald Balfour Said the Government Was Against Protection.

London, Feb. 9.—(C. A. P.)—Right Hon. Gerald Balfour, President of the Board of Trade, refuses to commit the Government beyond the lines laid down by Premier Balfour in his Sheffield speech. Replying to John Morley in the House of Commons yesterday, he declared the Government was against protection. "Preferential duties were not a part of our program, nor any particular way of carrying the proposal out. I should be glad to see such a state of public opinion as would admit of the adoption of a preferential arrangement with the colonies, but I decline to pin myself in any particular method of carrying it out." He did not think the member for West Birmingham (Joseph Chamberlain) said a 10 per cent. duty was an essential part of his scheme. The policy of the Government did not admit of a tax on food, and this limitation made it impossible to retaliate upon Russia or the United States, but it could be done against France or Germany. Great Britain had a weapon which could be used against the Americans in the imposition of countervailing duties. There could be no retaliation without Parliamentary consent. He believed the Government's policy would contribute towards the establishment of a really free trade more than the present system.

Repudiation of Chamberlain.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach (Conservative Free Trader) insisted that the speech meant a complete repudiation of Mr. Chamberlain's policy. That gentleman desired to begin with preferential duties in favor of the colonies, and then go on to impose an average 10 per cent. duty on all manufactured goods, whether from protective or free trade countries, and thus make the duties permanent. A colonial preference put a grave limitation on our bargaining power. As an example, if the two shillings duty was imposed upon American corn we would be obliged to refuse an offer by the Americans to reduce the duties on their goods if the two shillings duty were removed, because we would be pledged to Canada. Yet the American trade might be infinitely more valuable than anything Canada could give, and bitter feelings would be aroused that would not tend to the unity of the Empire. An artificial stimulation of trade with the colonies was a Chinese idea. The interests of the United Kingdom were the greatest interests in the whole Empire. Canada's 23 1-3 per cent. had not benefited Britain. Since that preference had been established Canada's trade with the United States, France and Germany had increased faster than her trade with England had done.

The Life of Man.

Thousands of people are suffering for the want of life giving current, which nature intended they should possess. They do not live, they simply exist; in the faces of thousands can be read the story of a wasted life and blighted hopes. Joys and pleasures are unknown to them because their vitality is being sapped away by some disease. Many have sought relief in drugs and patent remedies to relieve their mental and physical sufferings. They are soothed for a day or may be for a week, falsely braced up until the effects of the drugs wears off like the momentary bracing up of whiskey. They sink lower in vitality and with the hope exhausted, lose confidence in themselves and decide to abandon all efforts to recover their power, feeling there is no hope for them. All this is caused from a wrecked nervous system or poor digestion, the steam of the system has run down and wants recharging. There is only one thing that will do it and that is electricity. Every nerve in the body is charged by this life giving power and when once lost from over work or other causes has got to be restored before the system works in a healthy state. As we have often said before, don't believe what we say alone, come and get a free treatment to convince yourself. The Gilmour Electric Belt is the only appliance sold to-day which will give the current. A sick person requires to get well. We will show you a list of names of people right here in Belleville who have got cured by the use of this appliance. You can go and see them for yourself, is not that good enough evidence for the truth? You have not got to go to Toronto or any of the other large cities, right here in this city we can refer you to 50. This belt has all the attachments for treating bladder and kidney trouble, varicocele, sexual weakness in any form, rheumatism, neuralgia in the neck and face, sciatica, varicose veins, nervous trouble or paralysis.

JAPAN'S FIRST BLOW SERIOUS FOR RUSSIA

Czar's Vessels in Port Arthur Harbor Torpedoed and Beached.

ALEXIEFF REPORTS DEFEAT.

JAP TROOPS LAND IN COREA.

First Day's Work By Japan Shows Battleships Retvizan and Czarevitch Torpedoed and Beached, the Cruiser Pallada the Same, Battleship Poltava and Cruiser Novik Damaged Below Waterline, Protected Cruiser Boyarin Disabled, Gunboats Varing and Korietz Caught at Chemulpo, Two Russian Officers Wounded, 10 Russians Killed and 44 Russians Wounded.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 10.—An official despatch received here, says that Japanese torpedo boats have attacked the Russian squadron in the outer roads at Port Arthur, and that three Russian boats were damaged.

Admiral Alexieff's official report of the attack by the Japanese is as follows: "I most respectfully inform your Majesty that at or about midnight on Feb. 8-9, Japanese torpedo boats made a sudden attack by means of mines upon the Russian squadron in the outer roads of the fortress of Port Arthur, in which the battleships Retvizan and Czarevitch and the cruiser Pallada were damaged. An inspection is being made to ascertain the character of the damage.

"(Signed.) Alexieff."

When Fleet Meets Fleet.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 10, 1 a.m.—The following official bulletin has just been issued in the form of a telegram from Viceroy Alexieff's chief of staff, dated Feb. 9:

"By order of the Viceroy I beg to report that this day at about 11 o'clock in the morning a Japanese squadron, consisting of about 15 battleships and cruisers, approached Port Arthur and opened fire. The enemy was received with a cannonade from the shore batteries and the guns of our squadron, which also participated in the engagement.

"At about mid-day the Japanese squadron ceased its fire and left, proceeding south.

"Our looses in the fleet were two officers wounded, nine men killed and 41 men wounded. The battleship Poltava and the cruiser Novik each had a hole knocked in her side below the water line. The forts were slightly damaged.

("Sgd.) Major-General Flug."

Russian Fleet Draws Out.

Paris, Feb. 10.—The following official despatch, dated Feb. 9, has been received here from Port Arthur:

"A Japanese fleet, composed of 15 armored ships, has bombarded Port Arthur since yesterday morning. The forts returned the fire. The entire Russian fleet has gone out and a combat is in progress. Martial law has been declared here."

La Revue Russe says it learns from St. Petersburg that this bombardment began during last night.

Alexieff's Second Bulletin.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 10, 6.20 a.m.—A second telegram has been received from Viceroy Alexieff. It is dated Feb. 9 and says:

"A Japanese squadron of fifteen battleships and cruisers to-day began to bombard Port Arthur. The fortress replied and the squadron weighed anchor in order to participate in the battle."

The Russian Losses.

A third telegram from the Viceroy says that after a bombardment lasting one hour the Japanese squadron ceased its fire and steamed southward. "Our losses," the Viceroy continues, "are two naval officers and 51 men wounded and nine men killed and on the coast one man killed and three wounded.

"During the engagement the battleship Poltava and the cruisers Diana, Askold and Novik were each damaged on the waterline. The damage to the fortress was not important."

Without Firing a Shot.

London, Feb. 10.—In a despatch from Tien Tsin, dated Feb. 9, a correspondent of The Daily Mail says it is reported there that the Russian cruisers Varing and Korietz at Chemulpo hauled down their flags without firing a shot, and that 8,000 Japanese immediately landed and the march to Seoul commenced.

Japanese troops also landed at all the chief points of southern and western Corea. One division of the Japanese Guards holds Fusan and Chemulpo. Altogether three divisions of the Japanese Guards, each of 12,000 men, have been mobilized.

It appears, the correspondent continues, that the Russian warships at Vladivostock are ice-bound. Another correspondent of The Daily Mail telegraphs from Port Arthur, under date of Feb. 9, that the Russian advance has commenced. Gen. Krastalinsky will leave Liao Yang tomorrow for the Yulu River at the head of the third division of artillery, consisting of 24 guns and three regiments of infantry. The third, fourth and fifth infantry brigades are entrenched along the railroad at a distance of 40 miles from Hai Cheng; and three batteries of the fifth brigade are at Kin Chou.

STORY OF THE FIGHT.

An Eye Witness on British Ship Columbia Tale of Japan's Success.

Che Foo, Feb. 10.—The British steamer Columbia has arrived from Port Arthur with news of the attack by the Japanese fleet upon the Russian fleet in the roads outside of the harbor of Port Arthur. The Columbia was in the roads at the time and felt the first shock of a torpedo explosion at eleven o'clock Monday night. The attack continued all night and at daylight yesterday morning two Russian battleships and one first-class Russian cruiser were seen to have been disabled and beached at the entrance of the harbor. The cruiser was badly listed.

Russia Begins Fire.

Yesterday morning the Russian forts opened fire on the Japanese fleet, which was about three miles distant. The Japanese vessels returned the fire, hitting several of the Russian ships, but doing little damage. The Russian cruisers then went out and Japanese vessels disappeared. They were seen later going in the direction of Dalny, apparently undamaged. Although the officers of the Columbia say there were 17 in the attacking party, only 16 were seen later in the day by the steamer Foo Chow, which passed through the Japanese fleet yesterday. The fleet consisted of six battleships, four first-class cruisers and six other vessels. They were 18 miles from Port Arthur yesterday morning and were proceeding in a south-easterly direction.

Story of Eye Witness.

A member of the crew of the Columbia tells this story of the naval battle at Port Arthur:

"The Columbia was lying in the roadstead, surrounded by 14 Russian battleships and cruisers. At 11.30 o'clock Monday night a severe shock was felt on board the Columbia. The Russians immediately commenced to operate their searchlight and opened fire towards the sea. The firing lasted only a short time. At 1 o'clock more shocks were felt and the Russian again commenced firing.

"The Japanese did not return the fire. At 2 o'clock two Russian battleships went in and were beached across the entrance of the harbor. They were soon followed by a Russian cruiser, which was alone and beached. None of the vessels were damaged above the waterline. More shocks from torpedoes were felt during the early morning and then all was quiet.

Started in Pursuit.

"At 10 o'clock Tuesday morning three Japanese cruisers passed Port Arthur in sight of the Russian fleet. The whole Russian fleet immediately weighed anchor and went after them, but returned in half an hour. The Russians left one cruiser outside to watch for the Japanese ships. The cruiser was fired upon by the Japanese and the other Russian vessels took up their anchors and cruised around the roadstead. The Japanese fleet came up within three miles and battle commenced. The Japanese fired on the ships and forts, which replied. The Russian ships were struck by shells, but were only slightly damaged. The Russian fire fell short. The Columbia steamed away while the battle was in progress, but later saw the Japan fleet leave. One cruiser with the torpedo boat is reported north of Che Foo."

Harbor Blocked By Ships.

The two battleships disabled are the Poltava and the Czarevitch. The disabled armored cruiser Boyarin and the grounded battleships' block the entrance to the harbor, preventing gunboats from getting out and battleships and cruisers from going in and getting coal.

The Japanese fleet was under command of Vice-Admiral Togo, and consisted of four fast cruisers, the Chitose, Kasagi, Tagafago and Yoshino, which circled outside, drawing the fire of the Russians. They then joined the main fleet and all went in to attack the armored cruisers.

Disabled Cruiser Outside.

When seen by the steamer Foo Chow Tuesday morning, the fast cruisers were circling in a radius of six miles. No torpedo boats were seen, and it is probable that they left the vicinity after the torpedo attack on Monday night. The Russian fleet outside of the harbor consisted of the battleships Petropaulovsk, flagship; Peresviet, sub-flagship; Pobieda, Poltava, Czarewitch, Retzvian and Sebastopol, and the cruisers Novik, Boyarin, Bayan, Diana, Palada, Askold and Aurora. The disabled battleships are inside Forts Huan Ching Shan and Chi Kwan Shan. The cruiser Boyarin is outside, but within range of the forts.

Had Narrow Escape.

The Columbia reports she had a narrow escape from injury during the naval battle. While going out of the roads at Port Arthur the Russian cruiser Novik got between the Columbia and the Japanese fleet. Shells which passed over the Novik struck the Columbia. Her flag was cut into shreds and one shell fell on her deck. The faces of those who were on deck were blackened with powder smoke.

Russians Bad Shots.

An hour later the discharge of torpedos was repeated, after which the torpedo boats withdrew some distance. At 10 o'clock Tuesday morning the Japanese fast cruisers circled within view of the whole Russian fleet, but they were not engaged. The Russians returned toward the harbor after half an hour. The Japanese came within three miles. A battle then began between the Russian forts and fourteen ships and the sixteen Japanese vessels. A few of the Japanese shells were effective, but as far as seen the Russians fell short.

The Japanese fleet was steaming toward Dalny when seen last.

Uncle Samuel's Pacific Move.

Washington, Feb. 10.—Secretary of State Hay has addressed an identical note to a number of European powers to ascertain if they are willing to join in a notice to Russia and Japan that during hostilities and thereafter the neutrality and integrity of China must be recognized.

Erastus Wiman Dead.

New York, Feb. 10.—Erastus Wiman, who at one time was prominent in the development of Staten Island and later sustained financial reverses, died last night at his home at St. George, S.I. Erastus Wiman was born at Churchville, in Peel County, April 21, 1834. He was first a newspaper man, going on The Globe staff in 1856, and four years later entered the service of R. G. Dunn & Co.'s mercantile agency, with which he remained connected up to 1893. In 1888 he inaugurated the famous commercial union movement, under the guise of unrestricted reciprocity.

Pay a Penny to Aid a Sick Friend

And I Will Risk $5.50.

I ask only a postal card — just the name of someone who needs help. Tell me the book to send. 'Tis a trifle to do for a friend — don't neglect it. I will gladly do all the rest.

I will send him my book. I will arrange with a druggist near by that he may take six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. He may take it a month at my risk. If it succeeds the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself, and the sick one's mere word shall decide it.

I do that so that those who need help will accept it.

I have what those sick ones must have to get well. And I want them to have it. I make my offer so fair that no sick one can afford to neglect it.

I do just as I say, and trust the cured ones to be fair with me. I have furnished my Restorative to hundreds of thousands on those terms, and 39 out of each 40 have paid gladly, because they were cured. I want not a penny otherwise.

My Restorative is my discovery, the result of my lifetime's work. I have personally tested it in thousands of cases as difficult as physicians ever met. In my long experience I have so perfected it that it does not fail, save when a cause—like cancer—makes a cure impossible.

My success comes from strengthening the inside nerves. Common treatments merely doctor the organs, and best results are but temporary. My treatment restores the nerve power which alone make those organs act. It is like giving a weak engine more steam. Any weak vital organ does its duty when given the power to act, and there is no other way to make weak organs well.

No other remedy strengthens weak inside nerves, and for this reason there is no other treatment for chronic diseases which any man will offer on a plan like mine.

Please tell me who needs a remedy like that.

THREE RUSSIAN TRANSPORTS AND TWO THOUSAND MEN CAPTURED.

CAPTURE OF RUSSIAN WAR SHIPS AT CHEMULPO OFFICIALLY CONFIRMED.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

London, Feb. 10.—A special despatch from Tokio dated to-day says it is reported there that three transports of the Russian Volunteer Fleet, convoying about 2,000 troops, have been captured by the Japanese off the Korean coast.

London, Feb. 10.—Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister here, has received official confirmation from Tokio of the destruction at Chemulpo of the Russian first-class cruiser Variag and the third-class cruiser Korietz. The crews of both the Russian vessels sought refuge on a French war ship at Chemulpo.

There were no casualties among the Japanese and their vessels sustained no damage.

Evangelistic Services.

There was a good attendance at both services in the Baptist Church yesterday. "Paul's Prayer for the Ephesians," Ephesians, 1:15—23, was the theme of the Bible reading in the afternoon, and "A Man of Brains Who Did Not Doubt," that of the evening address. After Mr. Whyte had sung a solo, Mr. Shields preached from Hebrews, 11:7. Noah was a man of brains, and God revealed to him the sinful condition of the human race; His intention of destroying them, and then commanded him to prepare for his own safety. Though the event was a hundred years distant, Noah believed God and did not doubt nor condition the fulfillment of it, or some "but" or "if," but his faith in the revelation which God had given led him to obey the explicit commands regarding his preparations. In this present day we have a similar revelation, as to the sinful condition of the unregenerate human heart, an impending judgment and a way of salvation. What the ark was to Noah, Jesus is to the penitent sinner, and what was necessary was to believe the word of God as Noah did regarding sin, its punishment and the place of salvation provided and then enter in. The subject of Mr. Shields' address at this evening's service will be "A Dangerous Rival." The Bible readings are given each afternoon at 3.30.

A Hearty Welcome.

On Monday, Feb. 1, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Wilson, 9 miles south of Holloway, was the scene of a merry time when about 60 or 70 of their friends and neighbors assembled to pay their respects to the family who have recently moved from their midst. After partaking freely of oysters and other dainties, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were presented with a set of dishes and a table cloth as a gift by which to remember their old friends. Miss Daisy Townsend read the touching address to which both replied feelingly. Although unaware of the coming of their guests, they proved such an agreeable host and hostess that their guests were loth to leave. While the people in Holloway dislike losing Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, they wish them all success in their new locality.

VERMILYEA & SON.

A Goddess of Africa

A Story of the Golden Fleece.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "MISS CAPRICE," "DR. JACK'S WIFE," "DR. JACK," ETC., ETC.

At the very summit were two huge blocks of stone upheaved by some prehistoric earthquake. They leaned together in the shape of an "A" tent, forming an opening about four feet in height and trending downward.

The men were on their hands and knees now. They crawled cautiously across the last intervening bowlder right up to the dark and foul smelling entrance to the M'limo's cave.

Then together, like two great cats, they dropped softly into the darkness. The rocky aisle, a few paces in advance, turned sharply to the left. They cautiously peered around this "neck."

There in the semi-darkness sat N'dabi, the M'limo of the Matabele, gaunt and savage, crouched like a spider in a noisome web.

As they caught sight of him, an inspiration swept over the god and he began an incantation. The half-muttered words of the chant resembled the mindless ravings of a hasheesh dream. With every sway of his body forward his greegrees and amulets of dead men's bones sounded like the angry warning of a rattlesnake.

Before he had finished the chant he sprang to his feet, tall and bony, and with blazing eyes. He had seen in the gloom the white faces of Burnham and Armstrong. There was no opportunity for seizure. The long, dusky arm of the Matabele god described a swift swoop towards the wall of the cave. In doing this he half turned his back. Was it assegai, gun or spear he sought to snatch from the wall? Burnham did not know, nor did he stop to guess. His rifle pitched like lightning to his shoulder, and the darkness was lanced with flame.

Then M'limo, the Matabele god, threw his arms aloft and with never a groan fell prone upon his face dead. Echoes which had slept for centuries were wakened from their hoary lairs and went rioting and bellowing abroad in the hills. Out of the cavern pell-mell came the two men, scrambling wildly for the base of the hill where their horses were tied.

All had been well arranged beforehand, and worked with clock-like regularity. Armstrong, making a short detour, set fire to the big kraal, which contained about two hundred huts. In the meantime Burnham had secured the horses and led them to Armstrong. The Matabele aroused by the rifle shot, had, as yet been unable to locate it. The smoke of the burning village gave them a rallying point, and they came swarming out like bees from a hive. The air was filled with the shouts of men, the screams of women and the crackling of the dry and burning grass.

Already the fugitives had been perceived by the Matabele, who were trying to cut them off from the river. Away went the horses like greyhounds in the race that was to turn the scale of life or death. They rounded the flankers of the enemy and stretched away for the river.

That was the story of how the notorious usurper met his doom. Those who have read an account of it in the columns of enterprising papers doubtless had little appreciation of the terrible dangers surrounding the mission of these brave fellows, who took their lives in their hands and went out to save the border from being drenched with blood. Heroic treatment is sometimes necessary in order to accomplish great results.

They had ridden hard; their horses had been pushed to the limit, and now, as Burnham had been saying, they must rest before completing their flight to Mangwe.

Naturally they were more than curious to know what strange mission brought Lord Bruno and his little band into this hotbed of danger, and when the English artist declared he had secured some excellent sketches of the Zambodi and Matabele in their war dances and in council, doubtless they considered the venture for so strange a purpose a little on the order of such hare-brained feats as poor old Don Quixote sought.

Then the presence of Marian aroused their curiosity, and the story had to be told.

Rex noticed Little Phil pressibg close to Lord Bruno while the latter related how he had long sought his sister and found her in the fair idol of the Zambodi—it seemed to have some special meaning to the cowboy, for a little later Rex heard him laughing softly to himself and repeating "Sister Marian" in a crooning way as though he rejoiced in the new found happiness of the Englishman. Other events which followed thick and fast upon each other's heels caused Rex to quite forget the circumstance until it was resurrected in his mind by an event of which more will be said when the proper time comes.

Jim Bludsoe was again entrusted with the duty of finding a safe place for a camp.

As usual he looked for an elevation, and fortune was kind enough to throw it in their way.

It was a rocky fortress, where half a dozen well armed men could hold their own against scores, if the worst came to pass, and while all of them had grave fears for the future they were indeed glad to find such a temporary refuge.

CHAPTER XXIX.

THE DEFENCE OF THE RAMPARTS.

Here the dawn of another day found them, surrounded by as wild a country as South Africa knew.

The hours dragged along. Burnham and his companions shared with them their stock of provisions, so the pangs of hunger were warded off.

Again and again they saw bands of the fierce Matabele scouring the country, and once Rex, using the glass, believed he had a glimpse of Zambodi warriors, with the knavish Hassaje at their head, though they vanished among the thickets before he could make sure his suspicion was absolutely correct.

It would not be strange, for these tribes have coalesced on several occasions when a war was being waged upon their common bete noir, the white settler.

About the middle of the afternoon came a shock. A large force of the impis was discovered advancing straight towards the rocky mound which sheltered them.

At first Jim was of the opinion they were following the trail, but he presently changed his mind. It was more likely some lone scout had discovered their camp, spied upon them in spite of their precautions, and then carried his startling news to the nearest aggregation of warriors.

At any rate the result was the same.

They had discounted such a desperate climax—that is, having it before their eyes every hour and minute of the day and night, when finally the worst did break upon them, no one showed fear.

Perhaps there was a compression of lips, a flashing of determined eyes, and itching hands reached out for guns and pistols.

They were ready to give battle to the whole Matabele nation if need be, for such men do not count numbers when the fever rages in their veins.

Bludsoe was in his element.

He issued his orders as the recognized leader of the little company, with a clearness that told of perfect confidence.

Those under him were posted so as to command the vulnerable points of attack.

Even Rex, with his small experience in affairs of this kind, could see that so long as the ammunition held out, with ready arms to wield the Remingtons, were there ten times an hundred desperate fighters below, they could not carry the wilderness fort.

This so long as daylight lasted.

When night fell, the danger would increase; or should the supply of cartridges run short, so they would be compelled to fight hand to hand, there was a chance that the gallant defenders of the hill would be overwhelmed by superior numbers.

There was no longer a doubt with respect to the fact of their presence being known to the advancing blacks, who ran forward, jostling each other in their eagerness, brandishing weapons and uttering war-cries thrilling enough to chill the blood.

They reached the base of the rocky pile.

Not a shot had been fired—indeed, the defenders had not even disclosed their presence by any incautious act.

Jim was biding his time, just as Putnam did at historic Bunker Hill—each shot must count, and until the whites of the Matabele's eyes could be discerned, not a bullet should go forth upon its mission.

Pushing after each other the blacks were half way up the narrow defile when above the cries of the rabble sounded Jim's:

"Now!"

A flash—a tremendous crash that seemed to cause the very foundations of their rocky fortress to quiver, and the game was on.

For a score of seconds nothing was to be heard but the detonation of Winchesters, forming one fearful confused rattle, together with the shrieks of the wretches whom this whirlwind of lead mowed down in the cut.

Then the firing ceased.

There was no longer an enemy in sight upon whom further shots might be spent. The smell of burnt powder filled the air, and as the breeze lifted the canopy of white smoke a fearful scene was disclosed.

It was a murderous fire the Matabele had faced, crowded into that narrow defile as they were.

Flesh and blood could not stand it longer, and it was no wonder those who were able had backed out of the death hole to hide behind outlying rocky spurs, and recover their breath.

The defile was not so deep by a foot or two, as it had been before the mad assault, since it was carpeted with human bodies.

Bludsoe set the example to his men by replenishing his partially exhausted magazine, and then coolly awaited the next move of the enemy.

Their situation had advanced from bad to worse, for the noise of battle must have been heard for miles around, and by nightfall every black warrior within leagues of the rocky ramparts would be hurrying toward the scene of disturbance.

What then?

That night might be their last—upon those heights they would grapple with the grim monster Death, and fighting to the finishing gasp lay down their lives as became brave men.

Those who had escaped the slaughter did not appear to hanker after a second experience in a hurry.

They dodged about among the spurs of rocks, or else met incoming bands to place them in possession of the facts.

Thus the day drew near an end, with fully two hundred furious blacks in the immediate neighborhood of the rock fort, and others still hastening to the hub of the disturbance.

Just as the sun was sinking behind the range of ragged hills to the west, the suppressed enthusiasm of the impis again burst all restraint, and the warriors came pouring up the defile, at the same time trying to effect a lodgment in various other quarters.

Again the fiery blaze, again the crash of guns rolling like thunder over the neighboring kopjes, again men falling like ripe grain under the scythe of the reaper—and the name of that husbandman was Death.

Every man stood up to the task and did his duty nobly. When Jim swept his eyes around and noted the regularity with which they pumped the lead out of their magazine guns, he felt proud of them, proud of being associated with them.

Like the first made assault, this one also proved a failure, though the Matabele would not give up until they had lost frightfully.

This time they endeavored to counterbalance the effect of the torrent of lead which the besieged let loose, by a flight of assegais and various weapons.

Many of these failed to cover the distance and struck the face of the rock, only to fall back again; but there were some that had been hurled with muscular force that sent them among the defenders.

Red Eric had one in his thigh, luckily with little damage, the dauntless French professor was seen tugging at a shaft that had penetrated his coat and pinned him to the ground, while Bludsoe came within an ace of yielding up his life then and there, a keen pointed assegai grazing his head as he jerked back out of the way.

When the baffled assailants drew sullenly off, those on the heights breathed more freely. A few more such mad assaults and their limited stock of ammunition would be gone, when annihilation must ensue.

So the night swathed them about with her mantle of darkness. Never was night more ungraciously received, for in her train she brought new perils to the beleaguered little band of hardy adventurers—concealed by her dark robes the cunning enemy would seek to develop other schemes for overwhelming those whom they had twice assailed without result; save the decimating of their number.

Bludsoe foresaw great trouble ahead, and he endeavored to arrange for a saving in the line of ammunition.

Rocks were plentiful, and there was nothing to hinder them from accumulating these jagged fragments in certain places where they could be of the most positive value. When these were rained down upon the defenseless heads of the impis, the result must be disastrous. No doubt they would then screen themselves under their rhinoceros hide shields, but in so doing it would necessarily expose them to the full force of the pitiless streams of lead. Besides, when a rock weighing perhaps one or two hundred pounds drops some distance it is sure to acquire such frightful momentum that the unlucky savage below is apt to find himself flattened out like a pancake under his shield.

Burnham and his companion had conducted themselves as brave men should, and were of inestimable assistance to those whom they had so strangely met.

After the second repulse of the blacks, a council of war was held, and a definite plan of campaign adopted.

To remain just as they were was to give up all hope, since there were not enough provisions in the larder for another meal.

It was likewise folly to think of sallying out, since even if fortune were kind enough to allow of a passage through the ranks below they would be speedily pursued and overtaken.

Mr. Burnham proposed the only plan that contained any element of hope, and Jim Bludsoe fell in with it immediately.

The two horses had quite recovered from their fatigue, and were in good fettle for work.

What was to hinder the two scouts from making a bold dash through the lines. If they managed to escape there was a chance that help could be brought in time.

It was the only hope, and almost a forlorn one at that.

Few men would take the risk covered by such a ride, with the scales against them; but braver hearts never beat than those of the twain who plunged into a hostile country to rid South Africa of a monster.

Preparations followed, though but little could be done.

Every scrap of food and all spare cartridges they left with those who were to remain. Belts were tightened, saddle girths and bridles examined, and Burnham even partially muffled the hoofs of the horses the better to insure silence. His experience was apt to prove valuable under such conditions.

Hardly had the night settled in than they discovered something calculated to give them an uneasy feeling.

A fire sprang into existence, then another and still another, until a semicircle of flame stretched around the side of the rocky mound.

The object of this was plain enough—their enemies did not intend that those whom they besieged should creep off under cover of darkness and elude them.

Of course this crescent of flame made the task of the two bold riders the more difficult, and increased the chances of disaster overtaking them; but having embarked in the enterprise, they could not be headed by even such possible disaster.

The time came at last, when the two men squeezed a hand of every one they were leaving. Lord Bruno came to the top of the defile to see the thing through. A whispered word, another hand-shake and they were gone, swallowed up in the gloom below, while the others crouched there on the rocks, counting the seconds and listening with their hearts, so to speak, in their mouths.

CHAPTER XXX.

TO DO OR DIE.

There are times in the life experience of all men when seconds seem hours, so fraught with grave responsibilities is each little fragment that goes to make up a minute.

Such was the anxiety of the band of fugitives stranded upon this rocky mount that it seemed ages since Burnham and Armstrong had left them before a sign of their presence became evident below; and yet they understood full well that this very silence was the most favorable thing that could happen, since it declared most positively the success of the bold scouts in descending the narrow defile.

There came a sudden shout.

This was instantly followed by a shot, and immediately from scores of savage throats went up such a chorus of yells that the very air seemed to quake.

"Yonder they go!" exclaimed Lord Bruno.

Every eye was glued upon the spot where a tremendous commotion became visible. Black figures could be seen bounding toward that focal point from every direction, figures that moved their arms frantically, and made all manner of warlike gestures, figures that were fierce enough to cause a qualm of alarm in the bravest breasts.

Ah! other forms were in it—swift as a gleam of light two horses dashed into view bearing down upon the fires, those in the saddle bending low in order to take the smallest possible chance of being struck by flying assegai or spear.

Over the fire with grand leaps the horses were urged. Burnham had wisely blinded the eyes of the animals, knowing how next to impossible it would be to induce them to attempt such a thing unless some similar precaution were taken.

For half a dozen seconds there was the greatest excitement imaginable—the quick detonation of firearms and the shouts of the impis combined to make a fearful clamor.

Then it died away and all was still.

"I believe they made it," said Lord Bruno, who was laboring under intense excitement himself.

Bludsoe echoed his words.

"If they'n gone down you'd hear shouts of victory from the black boys below. That sullen silence means defeat," he said.

All bent their heads to listen, while straining eyes surveyed the dark expanse beyond the fires.

A minute passed—several of them, and their suspense became painful.

Then a tongue of fire clove the gloom a couple of miles away, immediately succeeded by a second, and the two reports presently reached their ears. X

"The signal—they have made it, by Jove!" burst out Lord Bruno.

"Thank God!" said Hastings, over whom a sensation of positive relief swept.

At least this little hope remained, and if they could only keep their savage foes at bay through the night the chances of succor arriving during the next day were good.

Armstrong and his companion knew full well where to go, and mounted on good steeds, with the lives of the little party at stake, they would exhaust every endeavor to succeed.

Englishmen never refuse to answer an appeal for aid, no matter what the danger involved.

Ere now they have penetrated the Sahara and made forced marches over a thousand miles of hostile territory to rescue a solitary fellow-countryman held a prisoner by the King of Dahomey or some rajah of Farther India.

Then began a night never to be forgotten.

Not an hour of it but what they were engaged in some way.

The cunning Matabele seemed determined to exhaust every artifice which could be conceived before combining for a grand assault. Their severe losses on the two former occasions appeared to make them a trifle shy about venturing up that miniature canyon. Perhaps they had some knowledge of the avalanche of ragged projectiles waiting to be turned loose upon the first provocation, and shrank from the encounter. At least such a grand movement was kept as a sort of dernier ressort, to be attempted when all other tactics failed.

Bludsoe and his heroes could not expect a moment's sleep. They must be on the qui vive every second of the night, for no one could tell when or where the crafty Matabele would strike, and surely eternal vigilance was the price of safety under such circumstances as these.

An hour had scarcely elapsed since the flight of the two scouts, when Red Eric detected a movement in a quarter where they had not believed an attack could be made.

The face of the rocky wall was so steep that it did not seem as though human beings could climb it; but these dwellers of the South African wilderness were next to monkeys in agility, and nothing seemed impossible to them.

He gave no alarm, but the word was quietly passed around, and when a collection of stones both large and small had been laid in, the bombardment began.

It was quite a fierce little affair while it lasted, for some of the enemy had managed to effect a lodgment in places higher up than was suspected, and taking advantage of the excitement these dare-devils attempted to carry the fortress.

One thing was against them—Rex had been placed on guard and crouched down near the centre of the enclosure he could see the outline of the rocky ramparts marked against the heavens.

The instant a dusky figure appeared in view above this, Hastings' gun spoke, and the result was disastrous to the would-be invader.

Meanwhile Jim Bludsoe and Lord Bruno kept guard over the defile, casting an occasional rock into the depths in order to ascertain whether moving forms had entered; but the time had not come for this. By degrees the allies might work their courage up to the point of desperation, and then would come the tug of war.

This first little brush was soon over, and a careful survey from all sides assured Bludsoe that the field was clear.

He was too old a campaigner to believe this success would be permanent. His study of these strange people led him to think such continuous disasters must only increase the fury of the blacks, and cause them to determine upon more desperate plans than ever to bring about the destruction of those at bay upon the rocks.

From the camps below they heard such sounds as marked a warlike movement of the impis — the hoarse notes of the tom-tom throbbed upon the night air, and there was a continuous series of weird shouts, such as Rex had heard the Zambodi warriors give vent to when dancing around the council-fire.

Marian told them what it meant—the witch-doctor with others of his ilk, had instituted this programme with the design of arousing the latent passion in the breasts of those whose bitter experience in the earlier engagements might be inclined to make them loath to again face the deadly guns of the besieged.

By degrees their savage natures would be inflamed until the point was reached where nothing could hold them back.

That was the hour Bludsoe looked forward to with apprehension, for he knew their fate hung in the balance.

Again some trick was unearthed by means of which they hoped to catch the defenders of the heights napping.

Again a rally, a fusillade of stones, and a shot or two.

This time as before, they were successful in dislodging the foe, whose evident design it was to annoy them rather than carry the fort; but the end was not achieved without some little waste of energy, and several less cartridges to account for.

No doubt the wily Hassaje knew what he was doing, and had set about a systematic method of utilizing his immensely superior numbers. When a detachment of his men had grown weary they could be withdrawn and a fresh batch pushed forward in their stead, while with the whites there was no relief.

The strain must tell in the end. This may not appear to be a generous mode of conducting warfare, but it is good soldiering, for the end and not the means count when foes meet in battle array.

At midnight they had repelled just five such assaults, very much on the same order.

There would come the discovery, a bombardment of stones and the flight of a few assegais from those points where strong arms could send them over the ramparts, the whole melee being accompanied by a series of screeches that a legion of fiends in Tophet might have envied, every warrior in sight of the fort lending his voice to swell the racket.

Then the whole affair would die away, and an interval elapse before the next outbreak.

Such a night will remain stamped indelibly upon the memory until time shall be no more with those who take part in its tragic occurrences.

Bludsoe and his employer held many conferences, while Rex talked in a low voice with the young girl, whom he found bearing up under the strain in a remarkable manner, thanks to the self-reliance which necessity had taught her during her life among the brabarians.

She never tired of asking questions about the world, which she knew only from reading, and the descriptions given by the man she had called her father.

Rex found himself more than ever charmed by her naive simplicity, and the noble character of her mind—indeed, he could not remember ever having known so grand a nature in woman. Part of this was doubtless due to her own disposition, but the man who had kidnapped her in order to be revenged, must have experienced qualms of conscience that compelled him to do everything in his power to educate the mind of this wilderness flower.

Again and again Rex would find it necessary to suddenly leave her side in order to lend his assistance toward repelling some sudden attack.

He went from love to war with the readiness such a soldier of fortune always shows. Besides, he could not forget that his blows were struck to defend Marian as well as in any other cause, and this thought alone was enough to nerve his arm to wonderful deeds of valor.

Thank God! the night was wearing on.

A few more hours and in the east would appear the first gray lines of coming dawn.

Would they all be there to welcome it?

Who could say?

Each man was grimly resolved to do his duty. No doubt, facing such a dread outcome, their thoughts roamed over vast distances to scenes that were dear to them. To Lord Bruno appeared his beloved England. How many myriads of her sons years after that green isle of the sea when separated by desert and oceans from home? There is no country on earth, however remote, where an Englishman may not be found, driven there perhaps by the feverish pulse of business, or it may be, the love of adventure, that has ever been and always will be a predominant trait in the Anglo-Saxon constitution.

Thus far the allies had not gained any appreciable advantage, while many of their men were placed hors de combat by encounters with the missiles so energetically driven down upon their heads by those entrenched above.

Bludsoe was inclined to believe the impis were gathering for a grand assault all along the line, when the heights would be stormed in every available quarter by eager fanatics to whom death had little terror, since the incantations of the witch-doctor had promised a quick passage to Paradise on the part of those who fell.

In this particular the Matabele and their cousins are not unlike the Mohammedans, a part of whose belief it is that to fall in battle is the most glorious fate allotted to man below, since those who die thus are favorites of the Prophet, being immediately transported to rest in his bosom in the beautiful gardens where perpetual fountains play and all is peace.

Numerous little things gave Jim this idea, and his training told him to beware of the hour before dawn.

Strange that the instinct of savages the world over teaches them to select this time for an attack—doubtless because as a usual thing men sleep the soundest at the latter end of the night, and are most likely to be surprised.

Every precaution had been taken that lay within their power. The rest must be left to heaven.

The Joy of Living

Life to the normal, healthy, Canadian boy or girl should be a continual joy. If it is not, then there is something wrong. There is lack of proper development, consequently the blood is thin; the nerves unstrung, the muscles soft and flabby, vitality low and the capacity for enjoying life at a very low ebb. Moreover, there is constant danger of attack from Consumption, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, La Grippe and all kinds of Lung Trouble. If your boy or girl is in this condition, do not treat the matter lightly, lose no time in putting matters right. In FERROL (The Iron-Oil Food) you will find the remedy required; Cod Liver Oil to build up the tissue, Iron to purify and enrich the blood, and Phosphorus to tone the nerve and brain. Ferrol will quickly and infallibly restore a normal, healthy and vigorous condition.

At all Druggists—free sample from The Ferrol Co., Limited, Toronto.

Watery Blood,
Declining Health.

STRENGTH AND VIGOR CAN ONLY BE MAINTAINED BY MEANS OF PURE, RICH BLOOD.

Dr. Chase's
Nerve Food

For many generations doctors have realized the importance of the blood as the source of life and health, but it is only in more modern times that science has discovered the best means of forming new blood and so rebuilding the wasted tissues.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the result of careful study of this problem, and has proven by far the most successful method of restoring weak, watery blood to a healthful condition.

Anaemia, chlorosis, nervous exhaustion and prostration and each and every disorder which arises from insufficiency in the quality and quantity of the blood are readily cured by the regular and persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

By noting your increase in weight while using this great food cure you can prove beyond dispute that new firm flesh and tissue are being added.

Miss M. Bone, 29 Alexander St., Belleville, Ont., states:—

"For some time past I have been troubled with nervousness, which was probably due to close confinement at school, and as a result of the nerves being affected, I was often quite dizzy. After having taken a course of treatment with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I can say that I am completely restored to health. This preparation seemed to have an upbuilding effect on my system and I am no longer bothered with dizzy spells."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

When It Pays to Feed.

The profit resulting from feeding cattle depends on a great many factors which enter into the operations, says Breeder's Gazette. It may be said that it will always pay to feed cattle provided they are bought right, fed right and sold right, and it is always possible for the feeder to lose money, provided he does not understand the business or base his calculations on sound judgment. Many cattle feeders have lost money during the past year. The one factor chiefly accountable for this is that about nine-tenths of the cattle went into the feed lot at too high a valuation in comparison with the selling prices for finished cattle. The reverse is true this year. The depression in market prices of fat cattle and loss resulting from last year's feeding operations have made feeders cautious, and it is believed that the number of cattle going on feed this year is far below that of the previous year, notwithstanding the fact that feeders have been selling abnormally low.

The Lengthening Shoulder Line.

The new drooping shoulder, which makes womankind practically helpless as far as any upward movement of the arms is concerned, is exploited in the extreme in the accompanying model for a cloth or flannel waist. This one is in white with a pelerine yoke reaching almost to the elbow and slightly pointed at the back, the material being there laid in plaits as in front. The front double box plait is entirely a separate added affair.

NO MAN OR WOMAN CAN HAVE DYSPEPSIA

And Still be Agreeable, Attractive and Popular—A Certain Cure in Reach of All.

There is nothing that will put you to the front so rapidly in business or social world as a cheerful disposition and a pleasant appearance. Other things being equal people will go out of their way to give the fellow a lift who always wears a cheerful countenance. The man or woman with a cranky disposition and a sour face will always meet with an indifferent if not a chilly reception. The commercial traveller, who is the recognized business barometer, appreciates better than anyone the value of this rule and governs his actions accordingly.

Dyspepsia destroys all the agreeable qualities that enter into a man or woman's make-up. It is almost a human impossibility for anyone with a severe case of dyspepsia to look pleasant. The continuous, miserable, cast-down feeling is bound to make itself shown in the appearance and conversation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the sufferer's certain cure. They are so recognized all over the world. The cures they have brought about and the happiness they have caused and the suffering they have relieved has made their name a house-hold word in all the English speaking world.

The reason that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a certain cure is that they are a natural cure. There is nothing to prevent them curing. They contain the essential ingredients of the digestive fluids of the stomach and simply do the identical work of the stomach, relieving that weakened organ and permitting it to rest and recuperate. Could anything be more simple or natural? They are bound to cure. They cannot help themselves. It is just like putting a new stomach into a man — if that were possible—and letting the old one go off on a vacation. Rest is what it needs. Nature will do her own work of restoration, never fear.

All druggists means all druggists. They have become so necessary to the people that the druggist simply has to keep them anyway. There are other remedies that he can make much more money on if he could sell them, but he can't. He will not take chances on losing his customers by not always having on hand a supply of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

KILLED IN C.P.R. WRECK

Twelve People Lose Their Lives and 25 or 30 Are Injured.

Two Soo Trains Collide Near Arnprior—Windows Were Frosted and the Weather Was 18 Below Zero—Orders to Westbound Train to Take Siding at Sand Point Were Disobeyed—Complete Lists of the Dead and Injured.

Ottawa, Feb. 10.—With a death list that will probably reach 14, and 25 or 30 more or less seriously injured, the collision between the east and west-bound Soo trains near Arnprior yesterday morning furnishes one of the most appalling railway mishaps ever recorded in the Ottawa Valley.

The dead—Joseph Jackson, engineer, Ottawa; W. McMullen, news agent, Montreal; Robert Thompson, express messenger, Montreal; John Toole, baggageman, Ottawa, died at Union Station; Joseph Chalut, 95 Wall street, Hull, Que.; Dolphie Seguin, 191 Brewery street, Hull, Que.; J. Carrier, shantyman, address unknown; M. Leboeuf, Gaspe, died in Catholic Hospital; Ernest Dubois, Hochelaga, fireman, died on train coming to Ottawa; Nelson Robertson, express messenger, Montreal; two unidentified.

The injured—Harvey Brosseau, St. Casimir, Que., leg broken and badly shaken up; Eustache Brosseau, Gaspe, ankle crushed; Ovide Brosseau, St. Casimir, badly crushed, may die; W. Pouilliot, St. Francois Xavier, Que., leg broken; James McCall, Ottawa, skull fractured, recovery doubtful; J. J. Higgins, Cantley, Que., badly shaken up; E. Seguin, Hull, hand and foot crushed; J. Dudley, engineer, Ottawa, arm broken; G. Caron, Gaspe, bad scalp wound; Ed. Beach, Ottawa, slightly injured; A. P. Black, Ottawa, slightly injured; Peter Rocheleau, Gatineau Point, knee sprained; W. Raile, Ottawa, chest crushed; Peter Throttier, Hull, leg bruised; Alphonse Demarche, feet frozen by exposure; Etienne Cardinal, Ottawa, leg broken; Antoine Gendron, St. Regis, rib broken.

There are patients in St. Luke's Hospital. One was taken to the Catholic General, and others only slightly injured went to their homes.

The accident was caused by the west-bound train hands disobeying orders. The train left Ottawa at 3 a.m., an hour late, and on reaching Carleton Junction orders were issued to take the siding at Sand Point, three miles west of Arnprior, to let the east-bound train cross. Engineer Dudley and Conductor Nidd, both of Ottawa, experienced men, with fine railroad reputations, were in charge of the train. Dudley, who is in St. Luke's Hospital, refuses to talk, while Conductor Nidd, who was uninjured, says he did not forget the order, but did not know the train had passed Sand Point. It was dark, the snow was drifting and the weather was 18 below zero, the windows all being frosted. The train was going at a fast clip and ran into the east-bound one with an awful impact.

Street Cars Collide.

Detroit, Feb. 10.—In a collision between a big Northwestern and a Fourteenth avenue line car, corner Grand River and Henry streets, at 11 o'clock Monday night, four people were more or less seriously injured.

Shot For a Deer.

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 10.—An Italian logger named Pazendi was shot and instantly killed on Bowen Island by Albert Revere, who was out deer hunting. Something was seen to move in the bushes. Revere fired and Pazendi's death was instantaneous.

Boy Killed By Bob Sleigh.

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 10.—Fourteen-year-old William Douglas, while out playing with a small hand sleigh, collided with a large bob sleigh. He was thrown into the street, his head striking the hard ground with considerable force. He was taken home and just as he got there said he was all right. A moment later he became unconscious and died.

Outrages By Organized Labor.

Toronto, Feb. 10.—The International Master Painters' Association met in annual convention for the twentieth time yesterday morning here. About 500 delegates were present from all parts of the States and Canada. President W. J. Edwards of Boston, Mass., delivered the annual address. He dwelt upon the outrages by organized labor. Every shop should be equally open to union and non-union men. Unjust means should be denounced and made illegal whether employed by employer or employed. The convention will continue to-day and to-morrow.

The Dentists Meet.

Toronto, Feb. 10.—There was a record attendance at yesterday's session of the fifteenth annual meeting of the Ontario Dental Society. Technical papers were read, and these officers were elected: Hon. president, R. E. Sparks; president, A. W. Thornton; vice-president, Dr. Mitchell; secretary, G. G. Hume, and treasurer, H. E. Eaton.

Atlas Contributories.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

A long portage makes a heavy canoe.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes; "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured. I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Signed, JEAN VALCOURT

The Flagging Energies Revived.—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be not relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These comes from stomachic troubles. The want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare powder, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression and reviving the flagging energies.

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes; "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

MAKING PORK.

Proper Feeding Essential if the Business Is to Be Profitable.

Where the hand separator is used and the milk skimmed while yet warm from the cow the skim milk has a sort of sentimental value to the farmer that it loses when cooled, carted to the creamery, mixed with a hundred other lots and returned cold or sour or both. The feeling which the farmer entertains for the different products is such that he takes, as a rule, little interest in the last, but is careful how he feeds the first, and studies to make the most of it. When he begins to do that he soon becomes a more successful feeder and breeder.

One of the most available and profitable uses for skimmed milk is found in feeding pigs. Here, however, as in many other lines of farming, we find a large measure of possible profit sacrificed to carelessness or ignorance. Skimmed milk alone is not an economical food for swine. Fed in combination with grain and pasture it is one of the most profitable pork producers known. In the combination the milk solids seem to have an influence on the growth and development of the pig far beyond that of the same amount of digestible nutriment in any other form.

The experience of many careful feeders leads to a conclusion that is contrary to the general belief—that is, when milk and grain are fed separately the grain is better digested, and it takes relatively less grain per pound of gain than when the milk and grain are mixed and fed as slop. One of the most successful feeders I have known feeds mixed ground grains in shallow boxes dry, the milk being fed in V shaped troughs, which are washed clean every day.

In an experiment with pigs averaging thirty pounds at the beginning one lot was fed mixed grain without milk, one lot two pounds of milk to each pound of grain and another lot four pounds of milk to one pound of grain. They were weighed each week, showing an equivalent of grain for skim milk when fed two to one as follows: One hundred pounds of milk produced the same as thirty-one pounds of grain, but when fed four to one the hundred pounds of milk only equaled twenty-four pounds of grain. After these pigs passed the hundred pound mark the best results were secured with only one and a half pounds of milk to one pound of grain.

As a supplement to grain and milk good pasture may be equivalent to one-half the ration, but on pasture alone the grain is too slow to be profitable. Under the combination system, with well bred pigs on good pasture, one and one-half tons of mixed grain with three tons of skim milk should produce one ton of pork.

Alfalfa makes the best hog pasture; red clover next. A mixed annual pasture of barley, oats and sorghum is good. Rye and winter wheat are both successfully used. In Oregon I found some hogs doing exceedingly well on vetch for summer pasture. At the Wisconsin experiment station one acre of rape showed a feeding value for swine equal to 2,767 pounds of corn.—C. L. Smith in Chicago Tribune.

THE HORSE BREEDER

It is a well known fact that horses and colts that run out in the winter thrive provided they are furnished with comfortable shelter nights and have a feed of good hay and a fair ration of grain, says Texas Farmer. They are animals provided by nature with a heavy coat and are well adapted to withstand the rigors of winter. They will thrive better under a common sense regime than by petting and pampering. A successful eastern breeder says: "The shelter should not be drafty, of course, but it should not be so nearly air tight that it will not ventilate itself on cold nights. The foul air in the close and warm stable is far more injurious to the colts and horses than clean, pure air or almost any low temperature can possibly be. Blanketing is oftener overdone than underdone. The horse standing in a blanket on a cold night may be seriously affected when the blanket is thrown off in the morning. If he stands blanketed night and day during the cold spells he will get into such condition that he will take cold easily when a draft hits him. Coddling is one thing the horse cannot stand. Cold weather coddling in particular is calculated to weaken him. Treat him on natural lines in the winter, and he will respond by getting into and by remaining in good condition."

Useful Weight.

The matter of weight in draft horses should be better understood, both as to what weight really means in a draft animal and as to wherein its usefulness lies, says a correspondent of Stockman and Farmer. Draft horse weight should not be merely pounds. Fat can be secured by generous feeding, but true draft horse weight is not fat, but heavy bones and muscles. And in judging a draft horse in regard to this important feature of his makeup the judge should be able to distinguish between the animal that weighs well merely because it is loaded with fat and the one which has the bone and corresponding muscles to be a weighty horse without being made as fat as a prize winning steer. We might say that the judge should discriminate between useful weight and ornamental pounds of fat. Some horses that have not the bone and muscular substance to be really weighty horses are made so by fattening. It takes a horseman to judge of such things, and nobody else has any business to try it.

BALTIMORE RECOVERING.

People Will Rely Entirely Upon Themselves For Their Resurrection.

Baltimore, Feb. 10.—Baltimore has already recovered from the first stunning effect of its fiery trial and is rising like a Phoenix from its ashes. The citizens have pulled themselves together and the talk is no longer of the past, but of the future. They have resolved, too, to dispense with outside assistance and to rely on their own energies for their resurrection. Temporary offices have been opened everywhere and labor is in demand for the clearing away of the ruins.

The buoyant feeling was greatly increased by the discovery that the vaults, strong rooms and safes had in almost every case withstood the flames and that the anticipated tremendous loss in securities would not materialize.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

A GOOD ATTENDANCK AND HIGHLY INTERESTING SESSIONS.

The annual convention of the Sidney Sabbath School Association was held in the stone church, fourth concession, on Friday, Feb. 5th. There were two sessions, afternoon and evening. The attendance at both was good, considering that the roads were in such a state that in many parts of the township the cross roads were so blocked as to be impassable. The fact that so many were out, under such unfavorable circumstances, shows that the good old township has lost none of her old-time energy in a good cause.

After devotional exercises, conducted by Rev. D. Williams, Mr. D. W. Ketcheson, President, took the chair and called for reports from the schools represented. The reports read indicate that the schools are doing good work.

The officers elected for 1904 are: D. W. Ketcheson, President; Wm. Blakely, Vice-President; Lester Ross, Secretary-Treasurer. The executive committee to consist of the above mentioned officers, all Superintendents of schools, and the resident ministers.

Rev. D. Williams then spoke on Decision Day. In a short address he threw out many excellent suggestions. He urged on teachers and Superintendents to remember that the one great object of a Sunday School was to lead the child to decide for Christ. The parents should co-operate with the teacher in this work. Make every Sunday's work a preparation for Decision Day, which should be only a summing up of the work accomplished.

Mr. Holgate in his usual happy manner gave his ideas on how to promote temperance in the school. He would in every possible way in the school teach the necessity of total abstinence. This, however, is not enough. Parents must co-operate. He was glad to see that a good work is being done by the public schools. Then we must make use of such assistance as we can get from the Legislature until such time as public opinion will support our law makers in giving us prohibition.

Rev. Mr. Thompson led the devotional exercises in the evening. A very pleasing feature of the evening's programme was a welcome song by the Stone Church school. Rev. W. W. Peck, in a very pleasing way, replied to this.

Mr. O. S. Hicks spoke on the preparation of the lesson by the teachers, and Rev. R. T. Courtice on the preparation of the lesson by the pupil. Both were very able efforts and were so full of good ideas that in a short space it would be impossible to summarize and do them justice.

Rev. W. W. Clark in a masterly manner dealt with the parents' relation to the child. God's word teaches us that the child is a loan from God and is to be so trained and developed as to become a king and priest unto God. This can be done by constant home training. This was the method followed by the Jews as shown in the scriptures. Jesus himself founded the kingdom on the cradle. The Sunday school is only a supplement to home training. If children are not so trained the responsibility will rest on some one.

Excellent and appropriate music was rendered by the school and choir of the Stone Church, as well as by Mrs. Marvin and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Vermilyea.

After a hearty vote of thanks had been tendered to the ladies of the Stone Church for their very great kindness in entertaining the delegates and others, the session was brought to a close.

A man never can think of as many things to say as when he is being shaved.

THE JUNGLE BEAUTY

SHE PLUCKS HER WARDROBE FROM THE TREES AND VINES.

Lace Bark Is the Favorite Ball Dress Fabric of the Semicivilized Belle of the West Indies—Living Jewels That Outshine the Diamond.

Down in the tropical jungles of Central America and the West Indies the head of the family is not worried by milliners' and dressmakers' bills. The semicivilized belle of these lands knows how to get nearly the whole of her costume from the jungle. She manufactures it herself from the materials she gathers from nature. Though she may be able in rare cases to get from the one shop ten or fifteen miles away a few yards of cloth with which to make her dress, any trimming she may wish to put upon it must be searched for in the woods.

Lace bark is her favorite material for making anything light and dainty. This lace bark is the film which covers the heart of the lace bark tree. The natives carefully remove it and soak it in running water for three or four days in order to get off the gum and unnecessary fiber. After that it is bleached on the sands by the river and sprinkled now and then to whiten it. When it has become a creamy white it is pressed with a hot iron or a heated stone and is ready for use. It has a fine lacy appearance and runs into more artistic patterns than any manufactured article. When made into a dress it is wonderfully beautiful.

The jungle girl uses it sparingly on her ordinary clothes, but for her ball dress flounce after flounce is used to give a fluffy look to the skirts. She knows that it becomes her as nothing else would.

Her jewelry consists of beautifully colored seeds strung together in the form of necklaces, bracelets and tiaras. In addition to these, on the night of the ball she catches the brilliant fireflies which swarm in the jungle and artistically arranges them in her dusky locks. The jungle girl would not exchange her "peenie wallahs," as she calls the fireflies, for the diamonds of the northern belle.

The jungle girl's hats are a marvel to behold. She weaves them herself from the jippi jappa grass, and can get any shape or style she fancies. She trims them with the netty fiber of the cocoanut palm and the gorgeous wings of the mountain parrakeet, which is shot and brought home by her father and brother. Even her parasol and umbrella are supplied by kindly nature. When the sun is too hot or the rain too heavy a big plaintain or banana leaf does as well as anything bought in the largest stores of an American city.

A creole belle is as fond of perfume as the daintiest American woman and is just as particular that it shall be of the best kind. She goes to much more trouble to procure it, but then she knows that it is always pure and fresh. She first picks her fresh flowers, and then, by some process handed down from one generation to another, she distills it.

The secret method is often known to only a few families, and they would not give it away for any sum of money. The lucky holders of the secret are of course envied by all who know them. Although others may receive presents of the much valued scent from those in the secret, they cannot make it themselves and therefore cannot afford to be as lavish with it as they wish.

The tropical girl's soap is procured on the way to the bath. As she walks down to the river to bathe she stops here and there to gather soap berries and cuts a piece of stick called "chewstick," which she uses as a toothbrush. She chews the end of it until it becomes quite soft and froth gathers at the end. She then rubs her teeth well with it. This is the best toothbrush on earth, as it not only prevents the teeth from decaying, but keeps them beautifully white and clean. People in other countries, knowing the value of this chewstick above all others as a dentifrice, have it powdered and exported to them.

In many parts of South America the natives cannot buy cloth to make their clothes, so they have to spin it themselves out of cocoanut fiber, river weeds and bamboo fiber. The cloth woven from the bamboo fiber is very soft and silky.

Unlike the West Indians, the South American belle wears shoes of a kind. These are made of a coarse woven material like sailcloth, which is attached to soles of rawhide. They are the most comfortable shoes imaginable and are used by the soldiers of South America when on the march. They are called "alpagattas," and Americans who have traveled in South America invariably bring them home to their wives and daughters for bath slippers. Those who are lucky enough to have a pair would not exchange them for any other slippers, however costly. No other footgear equals the "alpagatta" for comfort and durability.

Of Course.

"All the defendants they've brought before us so far," said the first juryman in the criminal court, "appear to be so thin and miserable."

"Yes," replied the other, "naturally they have a pinched look."

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

The attendance at the opera house last night was limited, owing to the very cold weather. The drama, "A Man of the World," was presented, and gave general satisfaction. William Bonelli as Sir Harry Romer and Rose Stahl as Hope Lovejoy were the leading characters and portrayed their parts well. The other members of the company also did fairly well. The stage settings were pretty, especially in the second and third acts, representing Lovejoy's garden at Barnet, near London.

GEORGE GROSSMITH.

George Grossmith, who appears here on Tuesday, Feb. 16th, at the Carman Opera House, has an individuality that is so pleasing, his humour is so quaint and fetching and his versatility is so marked, that he is able to keep his audience in a continual ripple of merriment throughout his recital. Although such an entertainment must delight every fun-loving person, yet to the musical minded the sarcasm is sometimes doubly keen. Only a musician can know how excellent a musician Mr. Grossmith is. His deft touches at the piano, often given as a mere aside, are made with a surety and ease that speaks of hidden virtuosity. His voice is not a remarkable one, yet he can suggest everything with it, from the sentimental tenor to the roaring bass. It is the art of concealing art carried to its most attractive point. One is too constantly laughing to attend to the points of artistic excellence.

QUEENS AND THE CHURCH.

REPLIES OF PRESBYTERIES TO QUESTIONS AS TO RETAINING THE UNIVERSITY.

It is learned that of the twenty-eight presbyteries to which the memorandum of the General Assembly commission regarding the retention of Queen's University by the Presbyterian Church, was submitted, twenty have replied, giving their views on the same.

Nineteen have expressed the desire that the present relation to the Presbyterian Church in Canada should continue.

One thinks it should not continue, but indicates no alternative.

Sixteen are in favor of the making of an appeal for support to the membership of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and are prepared to further such an appeal.

Three are in favor of appealing to the country at large, as well as to the church, on the ground of the excellent work the University is doing for general education in Canada.

One thinks that as it is doing secular work, the church should not be expected to support it.

One presbytery approved of all the recommendations of the commission as submitted.

Six presbyteries are in favor of keeping the Board of Trustees constituted as it is at present.

Six presbyteries are in favor of the election of a portion of the Board by the General Assembly, and the enlargement of the representation of the Council of the University on the Board of Trustees.

The remaining eight presbyteries have not touched on this point.

A SERENELY HAPPY MAN

Is Mr. Thos. McGlashan, of North Pelham, who was cured of muscular rheumatism by Nerviline, the most powerful rheumatic remedy in the world "I suffered all manner of pain for years," he writes, "and Nerviline was the only thing that did me any good. I can heartily recommend Nerviline for all forms of rheumatism; it goes to the very core of the pain and brings lasting relief. Let every sufferer from lame back, aching joints and swelled limbs use Nerviline. It's sure to cure and costs 25c for a large bottle.

DIED IN THE NIGHT.

AN OLD MAN FOUND DEAD NEAR HIS ROOM.

Mr. Wm. Young, hostler at the Albion Hotel in this city, died very suddenly last night. Owing to an injury to his leg, he was admitted to the hospital on January 1st, and remained in that institution until yesterday, when he was discharged. He returned to the hotel and appeared to be in good health and spirits. At a few minutes after 8 o'clock he went up stairs for the purpose of retiring. Shortly after Mrs. Drowley, in passing through the hall, found Youngs lying upon the floor of the hall up stairs. An examination revealed the fact that he was dead. Dr. Yeomans, coroner, was summoned and pronounced heart failure to be the cause of death. The deceased was 76 years of age and a native of Trenton. He was born at Albany, N.Y., and for years was chief driver with D. Rice's circus. He finally located at Trenton, where his son lives. The remains were prepared for burial and were taken to Trenton this morning.

DISTRESS AFTER EATING.

CAN ONLY BE CURED BY REMOVING THE CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE.

There is only one way to cure indigestion; The medicine must act upon the digestive organs—not upon their contents. Medicine should not do the stomach's work, but should make the stomach do the work nature intended it should do. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do this as no other medicine can. They tone up the stomach, restore the weakened digestive organs and promote natural digestion. There is no doubt about this—it has been proved in thousands of cases that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure indigestion when all other medicines fail. Mr. Eleear Robideux, St. Jerome, Que., offers his testimony to substantiate this. He says:—"For some years I was a great sufferer from indigestion. My appetite became irregular, and everything I ate felt like a weight on my stomach. I suffered much from pains in the stomach and was frequently seized with dizziness and severe headaches. Nothing I tried did me a particle of good until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and these, after taking them for about two months, completely cured me. It is nearly two years since I discontinued the use of the pills, and I have not since had the slightest return of the trouble."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure not only indigestion, but every trouble due to poor blood and shattered nerves. They will not fail if the treatment is given a fair trial. Don't take any pink colored substitute—don't take anything but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. You will find the full name printed on the wrapper around every box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mr. MacLean's Resignation.

A meeting of the congregation of St. Andrew's Church, in conjunction with the Kingston Presbytery, was held here last evening, presided over by the Rev. Mr. Gracey, of Gananoque, moderator. All matters pertaining to the resignation of Rev. M. W. MacLean, Pastor of St. Andrew's, were discussed and referred to a committee composed of the managers, Elders and trustees, who are to report at a meeting to be held on Tuesday, 23rd inst. At this meeting representatives from the church will be appointed to attend the next meeting of the Kingston Presbytery.

OVERALLS AND SMOCKS.

Where to get the best value in overalls and smocks. It is worth knowing. The Oak Hall placed large orders last fall, before the advance in cotton goods, and are now able to offer you these goods at old prices. Kindly keep this in your mind when buying.

Mutual Improvement.

The young men of Mr. O'Flynn's Bible class of Bridge Street Methodist Church held a mutual improvement meeting last evening at the residence of their teacher. Mr. James Reeves, the first secretary of the class, was present and gave some interesting reminiscences. Members of the class from the city and the different colleges took part in the proceedings. Important questions were discussed and music furnished by the members of the class. After light refreshments the meeting was closed with "God Save the King."

TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

Sports and Pastimes

HOCKEY.

The members of E Company of the Fifteenth Regiment challenge any other company in the Regiment for a match. Failing to induce a match with their comrades in arms, the company will play any other team in the city barring the intermediate and junior teams.

The employees of Chown's manufacturing concern would like to try conclusions with Lewis' tinkers.

It is probable that Picton and Napanee will play off their tie in the Trent Valley League in Belleville on Saturday night.

The Kingston Whig says: The Beechgroves had an easy victory over the Picton Pirates last night, winning by 5 to 0, in a very ragged contest. Only four of the Picton team played, but they were assisted by the old Frontenac goal keeper, Hiscock, also by Hazlett at point, and Hamilton on the wing.

The Brockville Recorder of yesterday says: "After the game at Smith's Falls last night with Perth, the winners and Smith's Falls, who drew the bye, tossed up to settle which ice to-morrow night's game would be played on. Brockville won the toss and consequently the Mic Macs will be here to-morrow evening. It will be the deciding game of the series. Should the Granites win they will play Belleville, winners of group two intermediate series, here, on either Friday or Monday evening. McDonald, of Smith's Falls, will be the referee for to-morrow night's game." This tossing for ice seems to conflict with the fixture made by the O.H.A. Further should Brockville win to-night, how will their team be able to play Belleville there on Friday night, as fixed, considering that Brockville seniors have a match with Cornwall at Brockville on that night.

CATARRH OF THE HEAD

Is very common, but awfully dangerous, because it causes deafness and leads to consumption. Cure is as certain to follow the use of Catarrhozone as day is to follow night. You simply breathe the fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which spreads through the nasal passages, throat and lungs, driving out every vestige of catarrh. "I was cured of chronic catarrh of the nose and throat," writes Ernest M. Wilkinson, of Laurencoton, "after many years of misery by Catarrhozone, which is a splendid remedy to free the air passages from mucous. Catarrhozone relieved quickly and my cure has been permanent." Price $1 for two months' treatment; trial size 25c.

WHAT IS DYSPEPSIA?

Qualms, nausea, longing for food, yet dreading to eat. You may have the real thing, but Ferrozone will cure you like it did S. D. Huntingdon, of Hamilton, who says: "I frequently was attacked with such acute dyspepsia that I thought it must be heart disease. I used Ferrozone and got relief. I kept on using Ferrozone and was cured. My digestion is in perfect order and I can eat anything to-day." Nothing is as good as Ferrozone for dyspepsia and those bothered with weak stomachs. Price 50c at druggists.

Liability of Farmer Employers.

An English farm laborer recently died from blood poisoning, and his widow brought suit for damages against his employer under the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act. It was shown that the deceased had suffered an abrasion of the skin on the nape of the neck as the result of carrying heavy bags of fertilizer upon his shoulders, and the inflammation that followed developed into blood poisoning, the inference being that the wound was poisoned by the fertilizing material.

Although it did not appear that the employer had been unduly careless or that he had imposed unnecessary risk upon his employe, the court ordered him to pay £150 (nearly $750) to the widow and children of the deceased workman, and as an appeal was taken he was ordered to pay the widow £2 a month until the matter was settled. The case is of interest to farmers generally as showing the sweeping nature of a law that would seem at first thought to apply chiefly to factories and other lines of industrial effort far removed from the farm.

India's Sacred Cattle.

Few people traveling in India can fail to notice the part played, whether in the flesh or its representation, by the cow and the ox. Sacred cattle wander unmolested and unmolesting through the streets of the cities, more especially in the south, generally decorated with garlands of flowers; stone "nandis," the bulls of Siva, keep guard before his temples and round his tanks; they are portrayed in fresco or in carving on the walls of many a rock carven. Oxen turn mills, plough the land, are the drawers and carriers of water, and, above all, are invaluable for drawing loads. Cattle, as is well known, are by Hindoos held in great and superstitious reverence. Ganges water poured over a cow's tail being equivalent to the kissing of the sacred book or taking an oath. Yet, unfortunately, the draft bull often receives very rough treatment at his driver's hands. So long as the animal's life is not taken ill-treatment counts as nothing among these people who regard the brutes as sacred.

STILL THEY SAY FIGURES WON'T LIE

Premier Ross Figures Out a Surplus—Col. Matheson a Deficit.

Financial Critic of the Opposition Uncovers a Deficit of About a Million and a Half Dollars—The Premier Makes It a Surplus of $600,000 on a Year's Business—Provincial Debt Between One and Two Millions.

Toronto, Feb. 10.—Yesterday's session of the Legislature was distinguished by two speeches dealing with the financial condition of the province. That of the Premier occupied nearly two hours in its delivery, while the financial critic of the Opposition, Col. Matheson, replied in about an hour. Dealing with the same figures, each arrived at a different result. Premier Ross finds a surplus of two millions and a half, while Col. Matheson uncovered a deficit of about a million and a half and argued that the debt of the province is between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000.

Mr. Ross said the province began last year with a surplus of $1,939,262 and closed with a surplus of $2,519,164, having improved its position by over $600,000. There was a balance in the bank of $1,994,679. The average expenditure for the past six years was $4,131,000, while for the last year the expenditures amounted to $4,888,982. There were some extraordinary expenses, such as sugar beet bounties, $75,000; iron bounties, $25,000; railway bonuses, $230,000; good roads, $23,000; university and mining school, $84,000; common school fund, $10,000, or, in all, $427,000; so that the ordinary expenses were much less than $4,888,982. There was an increase of $41,000 in the cost of civil government, of which $15,000 was for increase in salaries. Legislation cost $98,428 more, the Gamey investigation costing $47,000 and the increased indemnity to members being $20,749. Education cost $140,111.34 more than the preceding year, of which a large portion was for technical education, and the large grants to the University and the Mining School at Kingston.

Cost of Public Institutions.

There had been an increase in the cost of maintenance of public institutions of $57,638.57, the total cost being $922,067. In the Agricultural Department the increase had been $144,506.20, for which the beet sugar bounties and the increased grants to dairy schools were responsible.

The revenue for 1903 was $5,446,000.14, the largest revenue in the history of the province, thanks to the timber sales held in December.

The Premier was dealing with the funds held by the Dominion in behalf of Ontario, upon which interest at 5 per cent. had been settled as payable to the province. This amount was stated to be $4,758,135.15, and to this was added $1,460,653.20, making a total of $6,218,788.35. Upon this Mr. Ross had credited $226,183.73 for interest.

Where the Money Goes to.

Dealing with the increases in expenditures estimated for this year, Mr. Ross said there was provision for a House of Refuge in the County of Grey and for a Hospital for Consumptives. The School of Science would be completed this year, and the amount provided for the Hospital for Epileptics would go a long way towards its construction.

The Premier said the estimated revenue would be considerably larger than last year.

Mr. Whitney—About the same.

Continuing, the Premier said he was looking forward to an increase. There was no fear of a deficit. No accident that could happen would make our expenditures greater than our receipts.

The assets of the province in 1903 were $8,383,306.11 and the expenditures $5,834,141.99, leaving a surplus of $2,549,164.12. Since this statement was made the receipts from timber sales had increased about a million, so that the surplus at the present time was in round figures about $3,500,000.

Col. Matheson Replies.

Col. Matheson, replying, said he did not propose to follow the Premier thru all the sinuosities of his speech. The people were anxious to know how the province paid its way, rather than to hear nice phrases concerning the growth of our exports and the general prosperity of the people.

He claimed that the financial statement was not true to facts, as, in addition to the expenditures of the province, the province had incurred a liability of $250,000. The receipts of the province were given as $5,401,053.13, which included receipts from Crown lands of $1,335,000, the sale of assets, and a reduction of the capital invested in drainage debentures of $21,000. Deduct these amounts from the sum given would leave the ordinary receipts at $4,100,000. The expenditures he figured to be $5,100,000, including the Soo payment of about a million. Making all allowances for expenditures on capital account, the deficit amounted to $621,000 for the past year. Mr. Matheson was proceeding to discuss the item of interest paid by the Dominion on the capital held and debts due to Ontario, when the Premier said he had received from the treasurer an explanation of the apparent discrepancy in the statement. The province had received the full 5 per cent. for the whole year, and only one-half a year for the common school fund.

Col. Matheson said the fact was the province owed the Dominion a half a million more than was set out in the statement.

Cut Off Officials.

Col. Matheson said there should be a general reduction of expenditure by cutting off useless officials. It was all right to spend money on sugar bounties if we had the surplus money, but this was not an expenditure that was contemplated at Confederation, and he doubted if it was to be done over again the government would undertake to pay the bounties.

The Penetang Reformatory cost $30,400 for 100 boys. The coal bill for the reformatory last year was more than the coal bill for the Parliament Buildings. There should be a fixed grant for the University. There was no check on the expenditures of the University, but whatever deficit was found the government paid.

It was irregular to pay the Soo workmen, but there was an excuse for payments in case of the visitation of disaster. No such payment as $250,000 was contemplated by the people, and it would not have been made if there had not been an election. He was told that accounts were paid, and other sums laid out, to help the Liberal candidate in the election.

Deficit of $1,213,000.

Col. Matheson figured that when the statutory grants were paid, which would be included in the supplementary estimates, the total expenditures would reach the sum of $5,007,736, and the revenue $5,384,872. Of the receipts one and a half million would be from bonuses on timber sales, leaving actual receipts at $3,884,372, making a deficit of $1,213,000. The province was not in a position to stand such an expenditure. The province was being depleted of its timber resources, and in a few years there would not be that source of revenue. In four years the present administration had increased the expenditures one million dollars, while the administration of Mr. Hardy reduced the expenditures by $100,000. There had been an increase in the railway debt of $970,000.

The member of South Brant had said this province had no debt. There was a debt of four millions on railway annuities; the Premier admitted there was a debt of a million and a half to the Dominion, and the province has undertaken the construction of the Temiskaming Railway at a cost of six millions.

No Increase in Receipts.

There has been no increase in the receipts, except $200,000 on succession duties, which had no permanency and may disappear altogether this year, while the expenditures had increased by leaps and bounds. If the pulp lands had been sold by public auction instead of given to friends of the government, the treasury would have been benefited to the extent of two million dollars. Out of seven pulp concessions only one was in operation to-day. Col. Matheson also condemned the giving of fishing privileges to friends of the government by order-in-council. The same way with the Niagara Power Co., worth from a million to two millions, and it was not alone in these concessions that the province was being robbed. He referred to the limits given to Captain Sullivan, Cane Bros., Chew Bros. and others. Referring to the evidence before the Public Accounts Committee last year, Col. Matheson said he had information that Cap Sullivan benefited from at least four deals in the Crown Lands Department. It was impossible while in opposition to get at all the facts, as the investigators last year were obstructed at every turn.

The defalcations of Mr. McDougall had shown that the audit of the books was a farce, and the absence of prosecution of McDougall was not out of deference to him but because the government dared not prosecute him.

Mr. Gibson: I would like the hon. gentleman to repeat what he said; that the prosecution was a sham.

Mr. Whitney: He didn't put it that way.

Col. Matheson said he was bound to compare the prosecution of McDougall with that of Callaghan. There were two points in which the Attorney-General had failed in his duty. One was that he didn't prosecute the men who were responsible for the ballot frauds in West Elgin and North Waterloo.

Mr. Gibson: These men were prosecuted by the hon. gentleman's friends, and my predecessor wrote the Crown Attorney to give them every assistance.

Mr. Whitney: Yes, but he didn't do it.

Mr. Gibson: He did.

The Case of Callaghan.

Col. Matheson, referring to the case of Callaghan, said the Crown prosecutor challenged 17 gentlemen called as jurors because they were Conservatives. The Attorney-General was responsible until he dismissed the man responsible for the prosecution. There was no parallel for this case in Ontario.

The next shot was directed at Hon. Mr. Latchford, who, Col. Matheson said, was not competent to build 200 miles of railway, and it had to be given to a commission.

Mr. Pense of Kingston will speak on the budget to-day or Thursday.

Negotiating With U.S.

Montreal, Feb. 10.—Mr. Tarte again hit out from the shoulder. At a great meeting held last night in the interests of Mr. Bergeron, in St. James division, the ex-Minister of Public Works, took Sir Wilfrid Laurier to task in a vigorous fashion. Mr. Tarte made the important announcement that the Canadian Government was negotiating with the United States Government with a view to securing reciprocity treatment. He agreed that this was the reason for the Premier's hesitancy in his Monument National speech.

Committed For Trial.

Montreal, Feb. 10.—Hugh Graham of The Star and J. I. Tarte of La Patrie, charged by Hon. Raymond Prefontaine with criminal libel, appeared before Judge Choquette yesterday morning. They waived examination, and were committed for trial.

TORONTO MUNICIPAL CORRUPTION.

Assessment Commissioner Fleming Denies Page's Incriminating Evidence.

Toronto, Feb. 10.—The Assessment investigation was very hot yesterday. The forenoon was consumed with evidence submitted to Judge Winchester concerning the other branch of the investigation. In the afternoon Assessment Commissioner Fleming was on the stand for three hours. He denied Page's incriminating evidence in toto, and also swore there was no truth in the valid accusation which charged him with paying Ald. Woods' election expenses with a promise of hush money if the alderman did not squeal on the witness during the investigation.

Value of the Kangaroo's Tail.

So important is the kangaroo's tail in his rapid progress that experienced hunters with guns are accustomed to fire at the point where this appendage joins the body, when, the tail being disabled for its office of balancing, the animal is as effectually stopped as if hamstrung. Hit elsewhere, except with a rifle bullet or at point blank range, the kangaroo is pretty likely to get off.

One peculiarity of the kangaroo is that, after being started up, he very rarely swerves from his course, through which peculiarity he is easily "potted" by hunters, who conceal themselves while a man on horseback drives the herd toward them.

HOW RUSSIANS VIEW IT

Czar's Subjects Declare Japan Stabbed Russia in the Back.

WAR FEELING TRIUMPHANT.

Emperor Nicholas Addresses Petty Naval Officers and Makes Them Middies—Czar Also Declares War and Makes an Appeal to His Subjects—Japan to Declare War Formally—Great Britain and United States Will Be Neutral.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 11.—The intense indignation with which the news of the "stab in the back" inflicted by Japan was received here seems to be general throughout Russia. The whole Empire is fired by the war fever.

The newspapers in general chorus denounce the action of Japan as being treachery, declaring that it is "truly Asiatic," but insisting that the issue of the conflict will not be decided by the naval engagements, as the Japanese will have to meet Russia on land, when the score will be wiped out.

The anti-British feeling here is bitter, it being asserted that the Japanese attack on Port Arthur was launched from Wei-Hai-Wei (until recently a British naval base).

When the Czar Spoke.

There was a great scene at the Naval Academy yesterday afternoon, when the Czar personally advanced the senior class to the rank of officers. His Majesty, who wore an admiral's uniform, in addressing the cadets said:

"You are aware, gentlemen, that two days ago war was declared upon us. The insolent foe came by night and attacked our stronghold and fleet. Russia now needs her navy as well as her army. I have come to-day to promote you to the rank of midshipmen. I am confident that, like your revered predecessors, Admirals Chicagof, Lazaref, Nakhimof, Karilof and Istomin, you will work for the welfare and glory of our beloved fatherland, and devote all your energies to the fleet over which flies the flag of St. Andrew."

After His Majesty's departure, the newly promoted officers hired sleds and drove up and down the quay fronting the winter palace, shouting wild hurrahs. Generals, carried away by their emotion, saluted the youngsters.

Re-Arming Russian Artillery.

The Government is sending out 300 extra locomotives for use on the Manchurian Railway. A final consignment of material to complete the rearmament of the Russian artillery in the Far East was despatched from Moscow Sunday. It consisted of 72 quick-firing mountain guns and 17 carloads of ammunition.

CZAR DECLARES WAR.

Nicholas Writes the "Supreme Manifesto" With His Own Hand.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 11.—The official Messenger yesterday morning contains the following "Supreme manifesto":

"By the grace of God, we, Nicholas II., Emperor and Autocrat of All the Russias, etc., make known to all loyal subjects:

"In our solicitude for the maintenance of peace, which is dear to our heart, we made every exertion to consolidate tranquility in the far east. In these peaceful aims we signified assent to the proposals of the Japanese Government to revise agreements regarding Corean affairs existing between the two Governments. However, the negotiations begun upon this subject were not brought to a conclusion, and Japan, without awaiting receipts of the last responsive proposals of our Government, declared the negotiations broken off and diplomatic relations with Russia dissolved.

"Without advising us of the fact that the breach of such relation would in itself mean an opening of warlike operation, the Japanese Government gave orders to its torpedo boats to suddenly attack our squadron standing in the outer harbor of the fortress of Port Arthur. Upon receiving reports from the Viceroy in the far east about this, we immediately commanded him to answer the Japanese challenge with armed force.

"Making known this our decision, we, with unshaken faith in the help of the Almighty and with a firm expectation of and reliance upon the unanimous willingness of all our loyal subjects to stand with us in defence of the fatherland, we ask God's blessing upon our stalwart land and naval forces.

"Given at St. Petersburg, January 27, 1901, A.D. (New calendar Feb. 9), and in the tenth year of our reign. Written in full by the hand of his Imperial Majesty.

"Nicholas."

Japan to Declare War.

Tokio, Feb. 11.—A formal declaration of war was expected last night. The proclamation has been prepared and approved by the Japanese Cabinet. Foreign Minister Komura has gone to the palace to secure the Emperor's approval.

British Proclamation Coming.

London, Feb. 11.—It was announced in the House of Commons that a proclamation of British neutrality will be drawn up at a special Cabinet meeting to-day.

King Christian Acts.

Japan's Diplomatic Position.

Paris, Feb. 11.—Dr. Motono, the Japanese Minister here, gave out a lengthy official communication yesterday reciting the history of the negotiations with Russia and maintaining Japan's adherence throughout of the integrity of China and Corea.

U.S. Will Be Neutral.

Washington, Feb. 11.—Russia yesterday invited of the United States a declaration of her neutrality in the Far Eastern war, and Secretary Hay last night sent the draft of the neutrality declaration to the President for his signature. It will be issued to-day.

Having received enough favorable replies to insure the concurrent action of European powers in his endeavor to localize within as small an area as possible the hostilities in the Far East, and to insure over as much of China as possible her neutrality, Secretary Hay last night addressed notes to Russia and Japan inviting their co-operation in this principle. It was shown in advance that both the combatant powers desire the localization of the war.

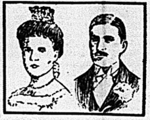
Kurino Gets Out.

London, Feb. 11.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from St. Petersburg says that M. Kurino, the retiring Japanese Minister to Russia, and his staff, have left there for Berlin. There was a large crowd of people at the station platform when the party boarded the train. Police and gendarmes kept a space clear for the travelers, and there was no hostile demonstration.

KING GAVE AWAY THE BRIDE.

Brilliant Ceremony at Wedding of Prince Alexander and Princess Alice.

London, Feb. 11.—Prince Alexander of Teck and Princess Alice of Albany, were married yesterday afternoon at St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle, where Queen Victoria was married on the same date, in 1840. The Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by other clergy, officiated, and King Edward himself gave away the bride.



PRINCESS ALICE. PRINCE ALEXANDER.

It was a brilliant assemblage of members of Royal families, foreign princes, princesses, ministers, diplomats and other distinguished personages, the men all in court or levee dress or uniform and the women in evening dress. The display of jewels was magnificent. There were five Royal bridesmaids, all cousins of the bride. The Seventh Hussars, the bridegroom's regiment, lined the pave.

NO TARIFF TINKERING.

Announcement By the Finance Minister at Hochelaga Meeting.

Montreal, Feb. 11.—"We do not believe in tariff tinkering," said Hon. W. S. Fielding last evening at Westmount, where the Finance Minister spoke on behalf of the Liberal candidate in Hochelaga. The Finance Minister added that there would be no time before the meeting of Parliament to prepare for a general tariff revision, yet he added that this did not mean that urgent cases would not be attended to. He said that it was a revenue tariff and was working very well, and he could show that a moderate tariff was the best for farmers and manufacturers. Mr. Fielding said he hoped that a satisfactory agreement would be made with the Grand Trunk Pacific, but the road would be built anyway.

Toronto Municipal Scandal.

Toronto, Feb. 11.—Another numerous list of bogus voters similar to the falsifications admitted by Ald. Woods was exposed during the civic investigation yesterday, and with this surprise came the positive evidence of Chief Clerk Forman of the Assessment Department, in corroboration of Harry Page's implication of Commissioner Fleming in the fraud. These two features were the striking developments of the six hours' work.

Magistrate Denison yesterday committed Sam Thompson for trial. He is charged with fraudulently depositing ballot papers in the box. He is out on $600 bail.

Municipality Wins Case.

Kingston, Feb. 11.—A cable from City Solicitor McIntyre in England, announces that Kingston has won its case before the Privy Council re the appeal of the Light, Heat and Power Company. The company appealed in the hope of establishing its right to $80,000 for the franchise, which arbitrators named as the value if it had a valuation. The city now gets the company's plant at the original award, $170,373.

THE JAPANESE SOLDIER.

There is an uncommon amount of worrying among ex-military authorities in this country, says the New York News, over the fact that the Japanese have no profane terms in their language. The Anglo-Saxon tradition is that the soldier must be "full of strange oaths, and bearded like a pard." The little brown men have neither the oaths nor the whiskers.

This ability to swear is curiously supposed to be some sort of proof of masculine efficiency. Witness the delight of the average theatre audience when the hero of a romantic play, who has heretofore seemed too good to live, brings out a good round monosyllabic imprecation! But, after all, would this swearing business not lose half its force if it were not for the consciousness of shocking somebody's prejudices? Everybody knows that when a man consigns his enemy to the lowest depths of perdition he really does not want him to go there, and would, in case of necessity, work heroically to get him out of a burning car or some such predicament.

Considering, therefore, that oaths really do not mean what they seem to mean, may not the Japanese language express the feelings of the Japanese quite well enough for the purpose? The Japanese officer, we are told, can call another person "a beast" in moments of exasperation, and that is all he can do. Perhaps that is enough. To be a beast—some kinds of beast — some two-legged kinds of beasts—would be a very serious matter, indeed. Which would be likely to make the average man most wrathful, to be sworn at in the ordinary way or to be called a mean, low-down little rat?

Complaint is made in St. Petersburg that the attack on their fleet in Port Arthur was "a stab in the dark." Japan's action was in no sense contrary to the rules of warfare among civilized nations. On the contrary it was a very daring exploit, well conceived and ably carried out. But what did the Russians say in 1854 when, before war was declared their Black Sea fleet attacked the Turkish fleet in the harbor of Sinope and destroyed it together with some thousands of Turks? The present day critics in the Russian capital have evidently forgotten some of the things that happened fifty years ago, although history has fully recorded them.

It is said that a six months' cruise will decrease the speed of a ship 16 per cent. This is owing to the Barnacles that gather on the hull. No wonder that the Ontario ship of state, with a thirty-two years gathering of Barnacles sticking to her cannot make any progress and is drifting hopelessly. — Belleville Intelligencer.

It is also said that it costs $25,000 to clean the Barnacles off one war ship. It is costing Ontario a lot more than that to clean off the Barnacles and parasites from the Ship of State. Fifty thousand dollars here, and thirty thousand there, and a hundred and one annual pilferings—they will help in the sum total.—Brockville Times.

The independent Toronto News is of opinion that Mr. Borden, the Conservative leader, will make friends, and staunch friends, very readily. It is manifest that he is to be an active leader. He is not shirking even the hardship and drudgery of bye-elections. The work is arduous, but it is necessary if he is to give cohesion to the party, and establish his own ascendency in its councils.

Not exactly. A general election is near at hand, and the people of Canada will certainly have a voice in regard to Sir Wilfrid's extention of office.

Danger Cries of Birds.

The approach of danger is expressed by a universally intelligible cry. The blue tit has a peculiar sound, "iss," so indicative of fear and terror that when heard the wood is silent in an instant. It is said that she often utters it from pure love of mischief.

"Every bird," says Bechstein, "has received from nature the power of uttering a song or certain sound by which it can communicate its desires to other birds. The chaffinch's call varies with its feelings. When on the wing it is 'Eyak! Eyak!' Its expression of joy is 'Fink! Fink!' If angry, it makes the same call more quickly, and 'Trief! Trief!' is a sign of tenderness or melancholy. The raven calls out 'Graab! Graab!' slowly or rapidly, as its emotions change."

The Way of the World.

When Thackeray was in this country he called on General Scott, full of admiration for his remarkable campaign in Mexico and eager to hear the warrior explain how battles were fought and fields were won. "Well, now you know all about it," remarked a friend as the novelist returned from a two hours' tete-a-tete with the soldier. "Not at all," replied Thackeray, with a twinkle in his eye. "The General takes no interest in strategy. I found that literature was his forte."

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

GEORGE GROSSMITH COMING.

George Grossmith, who appears here on Tuesday, Feb. 16, at the Carman Opera House, is now making his farewell tour of America, as he does not propose after this to leave England. Since he left the stage after his great success in the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, Pinafore, Patience, and the Pirates of Penzance, Mr. Grossmith has devoted himself entirely to his own engagements as an entertainer, and he has made more money out of his individual efforts than the greatest star that comic opera has known. There is probably no man in the English speaking world to-day to whom it owes so many laughs as it does to George Grossmith. He and his great piano are enough to keep an audience in a continual ripple of merriment for two hours every evening. In addition to being a humorist, Mr. Grossmith is really an excellent pianist, as anyoneone who has heard the delicate and charming effects he obtains on the piano will realize, and he is also a very excellent vocalist, as his performances in comic opera will show.

MOVING PICTURES.

A big audience was at the Baker Theatre last evening to see the England's Moving pictures that do everything but talk, presenting the indoor circus. VERMILYEA & SON.

A Goddess of Africa

A Story of the Golden Fleece.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "MISS CAPRICE," "DR. JACK'S WIFE," "DR. JACK," ETC., ETC.

Many times Lord Bruno and Rex would crouch behind the ramparts and looking yearningly toward the region from whence help must come if it ever did come, listen with all their might, hoping to detect some far away sound that would give them new courage—the distant trampling of hoofs, the faint melody of a bugle, or perhaps such cheers as only hearty Anglo-Saxon lungs are capable of sending forth.

Alas! they waited in vain.

No signal of hope came out of the south. It looked as though they were stranded there, and must win their own fight or die in the last ditch.

The cowboys showed never a sign of alarm. Before now they had known what it was to lead a forlorn hope, and while perhaps none of them had ever experienced just such a predicament as this, it was all the same in the end—plenty of work, with a possibility of a glorious end.

Time crept on.

Lord Bruno struck match after match in the endeavor to see the dial of his watch.

In half an hour the first thread of gray would appear. They might have taken heart of grace at this but for the positive belief that the storm was about to burst — the feeling was in the air — it affected them in divers ways — they knew it, and often words are unequal to the task of explaining what appeals to our convictions.

Nor did they err.

A brooding silence hung over all, which, in itself was enough to engender suspicion, after the clamor that had made night hideous ever since the sun went down.

Then came a single cry, which Rex was almost positive must have proceeded from the old tyrant of a witch-doctor himself.

It came as a signal.

If the cover were thrown from the infernal regions, and all the fiends of Tophet united in one grand outburst of diabolical sounds, the result could hardly have exceeded that frenzied combination of shouts following closely Hassaje's signal.

CHAPTER XXXI.

THE PASSING OF JIM BLUDSOE.

Now for it.

Each one of those seven men nerved himself for the terrible ordeal, and when the fact is positive that life and death are involved in the issue, many a weakling astonishes himself by the desperate energy he throws into his actions.

The allies had carefully planned the assault, and those various little attacks which were repelled without and tremendous display of force had been mere "feelers" as it were, to show what disposition the defenders would be apt to make of their strength.

When the attack was on in earnest it seemed as though the black whelps sprang up in almost every quarter—they must have by degrees sought hiding-places along the walls in each previous assault, acting upon orders, and remaining for hours awaiting the grand signal that meant business.

Through the defile they came in a dense mass, those behind pushing the wretches in the van, to be presently treated to a dose of their own medicine.

Down came the avalanche of rocks, and the little canyon became a slaughter pen, for men went under like ripe grain. Still those behind pushed on trampling upon the bodies of their comrades.

Men, weapons and great ox-hide shields all mingled in the greatest confusion, but those who had not yet tasted death advanced like so many machines.

It was a cruel business, but those who were above had nerved themselves for anything, and so long as the sharp-pointed missiles held out they showed no signs of halting.

By mere numbers alone, pushed on by their fanatical belief in the favor of the gods whom Hassaje represented, the horde of black, sinewy forms might crush its way to the top.

Having run the gauntlet of rocks they must face the blasting, withering fire of the Winchesters and revolvers, and if in spite of all this they forged to the top of the pass, making a gory mat out of their luckless fellows, it would be to meet three men who could fight like gladiators hand-to-dand, swinging their guns like cricket bats and hurling the impis back as fast as they crossed the line, so long as human nature could stand it.

And while this scene was taking place on one side of the fort, others hardly less desperate were occurring near by.

Every man had his hands full. Rex who had not suspected the enemy could steal such a march upon them was amazed to see the number of black forms that started to crawl over the barrier. He hardly knew which one to fire at first, but realizing the folly of delay made a start.

Such was the infernal din that he would hardly have known his piece had been discharged only from the flash of fire that shot from the muzzle, and the fact that his target fell off the wall.

Monsieur Jules had also found an object at which to blaze away, and the tremendous bellow of the great yager gun make its impression upon the general din. As for the savant, the recoil tumbled him over in a heap, though he was speedily on his feet again, as spry as a feline.

There was an abundance of work on hand for every member of that little band. Had they been individually favored with four hands instead of two, they might have kept busy.

The sable hued barbarians seemed to be in inexhaustible supply — for every one whom Rex and his fellow laborers in the good cause knocked back, two seemed to spring into existence.

With each passing minute of time it became more and more certain that the allies had decided to make a supreme effort to finish the business one way or another — either they would exhaust the strength of the fort's defenders or else complete their own extermination.

No longer were the whites without wounds, for in several places hand-to-hand conflicts with the fierce impis were taking place, and these fanatical followers of the voodoo doctor proved to be fighters when under the battle influence.

The stock of rocks which had been used to bombard the crushing throng in the defile had become exhausted, and there was no chance to secure a fresh supply.

Although the narrow passage way was a horrible mixture of dead and wounded braves, the jostling throng continued to push on as irresistibly as fate itself.

In vain did those above fire volley after volley into the mass — the great ox-hide shields were able to stay even the progress of bullets, such was their exceeding toughness and thickness, and with the steady creeping motion of the rising tide the impis pushed on, gradually drawing closer to the top where the Winchesters and revolvers were spitting out tongues of flame.

Could nothing be done to stop this steady advance — in a brief interval it must reach the crest — must flow over the top and engulf the few whites who endeavored to manfully hold their own against the advance of the foe, which was not unlike the resistless march of a mighty glacier, save that its progress is downward while they climbed upward.

Now the foremost war shields overlapped the crest, and were suddenly cast aside to expose the fierce figures of the braves who had made this assault.

With cries that would have done credit to demons they sprang at the whites.

Only a few cartridges remained, and these were put to good service; but the impis scrambled over the crest faster than they could be cared for, and presently what promised to be the last tragic scene of the drama commenced, when the defenders of the little fort among the rocks were compelled to wield their guns as clubs, and meet the rush of numberless foes, savage for their lives.

They fought like brave men, long and well, and not one of them but who performed prodigies of valor upon that field.

Hope they had none — desperation alone urged then to resist to the last gasp.

The end seemed close at hand. Their number began to decrease. Bludsoe, the bravest of the brave was down. He had been carrying consternation into the midst of the enemy, and wherever his clubbed rifle swept there mourning followed.

One of the cunning blacks seeing how impossible it was to force a way within the circle which Jim's whirling weapon covered, dropped to the rocks, and rolled to the feet of the cowboy — then, clasping his arms about Jim's legs he threw him down, just as an assegai, hurled by no other than the hand of Hassaje himself, pierced Bludsoe's breast.

Thus fell an heroic spirit, in the performance of duty. All his life had Jim Bludsoe seen action — it was his business to take part in such dramas as seldom fall to the lot of most men — he had played his little part in pushing forward the torch of civilization and crowding the blackness of ignorance and savage superstition to the wall. In his own way he had carried out the role for which nature had best fitted him. No longer would the roar of battle disturb this hero's slumber — for him the reveille had sounded in another land.

Bludsoe's fall weakened the little garrison very much, but it did not paralyze them. Such was the condition of affairs that even though but one should be left that last survivor must believe it his duty to continue the battle.

They had managed to get together after a degree, which was all that saved them from immediate destruction. Back to back they fought, delivering and receiving blows. When all were heroes, why mention the valorous deeds of a single member of that gallant little band?

Lord Bruno, because of his magnificent physique, was a prominent mark for the attack of the savage blacks, and it was only by the most herculean efforts that he managed to avoid the numerous missiles that were hurled at him.

The numbers of their foes instead of diminishing constantly increased, for though casualties occurred among them, those who drew out of the melee wounded were more than replaced by fresh arrivals.

This could not last long — the end must speedily arrive — indeed, it seemed but a question of a few minutes at the most before one and all of the whites must have met the fate of Jim.

As they fought like Trojans Rex and Lord Bruno chanced to come together.

The gray light of dawn had crept over the scene even while this deadly hand-to-hand conflict was taking place, and when the furiously fighting Briton shot a glance at his friend's face, he found it almost unrecognizable on account of the powder grime, and splotches of blood, either from his own vein or that which came from enemies struck at close quarters.

But Lord Bruno saw something else — he discovered Hastings' countenance illuminated with an eager expression, and the English artist on the instant surmised that poor Rex must have had his reason shattered in the horried din of battle, for any man who could laugh or even show the faintest hope under such conditions as these must certainly be out of his mind.

If Rex was mad there must be a method to his condition. What was this he shouted in the ear of his companion:

"Did you hear it?"

"Hear what?" bellowed the big athlete, as he launched his rifle against the foe and sent several blacks flying in a confused heap.

"The blessed notes of a bugle!" cried Rex.

"Bugle — you are away off, my boy. It was some call of these accursed devils."

"No, no, I heard it. There—listen — now tell me I am crazy!"

An Lord Bruno's ears caught a never-to-be-forgotten sound. Thank God! it was the clear, thrilling note of a bugle that arose above the awful clamor of battle.

Others heard it too — the battle cries grew less in volume, so that from the region beyond came the heavy thud of many horses' hoofs — aye, and the glorious cheers from the throats of British soldiers.

Burnham had kept his word, and just in the nick of time the British South Africa mounted troops had reached the scene — had they been five minutes later the tragedy would have been complete.

CHAPTER XXXII.

LOVE'S SACRIFICE.

When the black allies realized what a trap they were caught in, consternation came upon the majority of them, and they began to leave the apex of the rocky mount with even more celerity than they had shown in reaching it.

Through the gray of morning the oncoming resources could be seen, advancing as fast as their horses would carry them, and sending forth encouraging shouts.

As their enemies melted away from in front of them the tired defenders of the fort let their arms drop, and answered the shouts of their coming friends.

It was at this moment a black hideous figure arose from among the rocks, holding an assegai in his hand; a figure that might have been recognized as that of old Hassaje, the witch doctor of Zambodi.

Not ten feet away stood Lord Bruno, all unconscious of his peril—he had detected the presence of the valiant Armstrong at the head of the on-sweeping column, and waving his hat while sending cheer after cheer from his stentorian lungs.

Without a warning he heard a sudden shrill cry behind him, and whirling about was just in time to see Little Phil sink at his feet pierced through with an assegai that had undoubtedly been intended for the Briton, while a black figure he knew full well was bounding for the parapet.

Waterford heard a gun sound beside him, and realized that Rex had kept a last bullet in his Winchester for some desperate purpose. He saw the witch-doctor leap high into the air and then fall like an inert mass upon the rocks, his devilish incantations forever stilled by the young American's lead.

The Lord Bruno threw himself down beside the boy who had saved him at what a fearful cost.

A moment later and he called Rex, who found him, the strong man, actually weeping.

"Don't think I have gone out of my senses, Rex; but a strange thing has happened, the most marvellous thing in the course of my whole existence. Fool—blind dolt that I was never to have suspected the truth."

"Tell me," said Rex, in a maze.

"You remember—Little Phil — I promised a girl in Natal to take her brother with me. I was to blame—I made love to her, and then said good-bye without speaking of my intentions. Little Phil—that brother—is Madge herself!"

"I might have suspected it," said Rex, as a score of things flashed through his mind.

"But you didn't, any more than myself. We were all blind. And now, God bless her. I am afraid she has given her life for me. Come, bring the doctor if he is able to move, and see if there is any hope. Why did she do it—I am not worthy of such a sacrifice:"

Little Phil smiled when they bent over her—the consciousness that she had saved his life made her happy.

"It is just as well—this was my mission. He is an English lord, and could never have married a poor girl like me," she kept repeating, begging Lord Bruno not to weep.

The doctor reported the case almost hopeless, but everything was done that lay in their power, and Marian upon learning the truth, proved an exceedingly clever nurse.

First of all they left the rocky fortress with its ghastly mementoes of battle, and sought a new camp to secure a short rest ere taking up the march for Buluwayo.

The hills were alive with the Matabele, and it would not be safe for even such a company of well armed border fighters to remain in the enemy's country, since the impis could muster thousands of braves if given time.

By slow stages they made the journey, and Buluwayo was reached at last.

The girl still lived, buoyed up with new hope, for Waterford had breathed words of love into her ears, and besought her to stay for his sake—that he would be proud to make her his wife, since she reigned in his heart as his queen.

Heaven was very good—although her wound had appeared to be fatal, she survived the crisis and began to mend. Lord Bruno was all devotion, and Marian could not but love the gentle girl who had been ready to give her life to save the man who had won her heart.

Rex had recovered from his slight wounds, and amused himself in making little excursions with the professor in search of oddities, and in the company of Marian, now his promised wife.

It was a happy time.

Meanwhile there had been skirmishes between the hostile forces, but that wizard of South Africa, Cecil Rhodes, had come to the front and his magical influence brought about peace. His name was one to conjure with among the natives—they believed in him above all men, because he treated them fairly.

The negotiations for peace have become a matter of history, and gave Mr. Rhodes an opportunity for displaying his character as a man without fear.

It was about noon on a Friday that John Grootboom arrived in Mr. Rhodes' camp and asked to see those in command, stating that six principal chiefs, two Princes, Lobengula's brothers, and thirty-four indunas

Only tell me which book to send. You certainly know of some one who is sick—some sufferer who will be grateful for the help my book offers.
And that book tells of a way to help. Tells of a way so certain that I, as a physicain, offer that help on trial. The book tells how for thirty years in hospitals and at bedsides I searched for a way to cure deep-seated and difficult diseases. It tells how I perfected my prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. How by scientific experiment I traced out the causes that bring on chronic diseases.
I found invariably that where there was a weakness the inside nerves were weak. Where there was a lack of vitality that the vital nerves lacked power. Where weak organs were found, I always found weak nerves. Not the nerves commonly thought of, but the vital organs' nerves, the inside —the invisible nerves.
This was a revelation.
Then my real success began.
Then I combined ingredients that would strengthen, that would vitalize these nerves. That prescription I called a restorative. It is known the world over now as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. After that I did not fail to cure one case in each hundred. In the extremely difficult cases my failures for five years were one in each forty treated. I found cancer incurable. Cancer is for surgery, not medicine.
Then how to get this prescription to sick ones everywhere was my thought. I must announce it in the public press. But, thought I, will they realize the truth of my discovery—the real power of Dr. Shoop's Restorative? Then a way came to me—like an inspiration. "I will offer it to the sick on trial. Then they will know I am sincere."
I wrote a reliable druggist in each city and village in America. They agreed to co-operate with me. Now by any sick one

This is my way of clearing your mind of all doubts as to what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do.
No matter how prejudiced, you cannot dispute this absolute security I offer. You cannot resist an offer like this if you are at all sick.
If you have a weakness, write me. If you can't do things like you used to do them, tell me about it. Write in confidence. As a physician I will tell you a way to help. Get my book now—to-day.

SAMURAI AND JIU-JITSU.

The Most Wonderful System of Athletics in the World.

More than 2,500 years ago there sprang into existence in Japan an order of knights who were known as the samurai. To them was imparted all the learning, the polite breeding and the forms of superiority that mark the gentleman. They were skilled in arms and versed in the arts of war, for they were the emperor's fighting men, and none but they were allowed to bear arms.

As there could not always be war on hand, and as it was considered beneath the dignity of the samurai to go into any ordinary callings, it came about naturally that these little knights found much idle time on their hands. Being men of war, they turned their attention to athletic feats.

One among the samurai conceived the idea of learning by practice the location of every sensitive nerve and muscle in the body. After that he discovered all the joints of the bones that could be seized in such a way as to give momentary power over the muscles of an adversary. He practiced with his fellow samurai, and thus by degrees was developed the most wonderful system of athletics known in the world.

The Japanese call this work jiu-jitsu. The deft pressures applied in the practice of jiu-jitsu produce only momentary pain, but do not really injure the muscles or nerves. In all other things the Japanese are the most polite people in the world. So it follows that even in their fighting they have developed a humane yet effective method of self defense. They do not strike out with the clinched fist and seek to bruise, as do the Anglo-Saxons in their boxing contests.

A knowledge of jiu-jitsu enables one almost instantly to convince his opponent that it is useless to fight. There are now schools of jiu-jitsu everywhere in Japan. Every soldier, sailor and policeman is obliged to perfect himself in the system. A Japanese policeman, possessed of the art, has been known single handed to reduce to submission and to take to the police station four sturdy sailors of a foreign Asiatic squadron

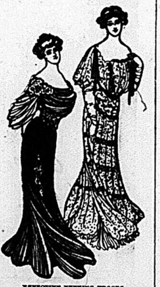
FULL DRESS GOWNS.

Velvet the Rage—Dinner, Reception and Ball Toilets.

In velvets the new light weight quality called chiffon takes the lead in everything except for costly cloaks and coats. Its sheen and exquisite pliability have entirely changed the old treatment of velvets into this modern one, where everything is possible in the way of handwork. Smartness has declared for small checks in dress velvets intended for street costumes. The middle tone of any one of the colors in vogue is often crossed by line squares of black or gray or by a lighter shade of the same foundation color.

Single colored velvet costumes are for more ceremonious purposes and admit of fur trimmings of the costliest character. Violet, blue, French and stone grays, fawn, green, fuschia purple and cardinal red, together with black and gun metal shades, form the gamut of best choice. These costumes are, according to preference, made up with the dressiness of lace and passementerie trimmings or with a charming simplicity of line and fur trimmed expensively.



EFFECTIVE EVENING FROCKS.

The princess dinner gown here shown is of black chiffon velvet over white taffeta. The foundation is finished with a plaiting and a deep ruche edged ruffle of white chiffon. The velvet princess has panels of handmade black silk lace inserted at the sides, rising in high points almost to the hips, and the chiffon is beneath these full length. The inset girdle and the cape effect at the back and over the shoulders are also of the coarse silk lace.

With one breath Sir Wilfrid claimed that the Fielding tariff was a tariff for revenue only; in the next he declared that when the proper day came the tariff would be revised along protectionist lines following the same principles adopted in 1897, justice to the consumer without injustice to the manufacturer and leaving to the workingman the employment to which he has a right.—Montreal Gazette.

BAKED APPLES.

The Way to Make a Convenient and Delicious Dessert.

The difference between apple sauce stewed quickly over the fire and that baked slowly for several hours in a moderate oven is so great that one could easily believe that different fruits had been used. Each method, if carefully followed, produces a delicious result, and, while some persons have a strong preference for one or the other, to my mind it is difficult to decide which is the better way. Therefore it is well to use both methods, cooking the first apples that come in midsummer by stewing, and later, when the cool days of early autumn make a fire less objectionable, trying the baking.

The dish for baking is as important as that for beans baked properly and also for Indian puddings, and should be the same in style and material. Cut the fruit (and you may use in this way any kind of apples or pears which are too green or hard to use uncooked) into quarters; then remove the cores and skins. Allow one cup of sugar and one-half cup of water to two quarts of fruit. The amount will vary with different apples, and it is important not to use too much sugar, for the long cooking seems to develop the natural sweetness of the fruit. Cover them closely and cook in a slow oven four or five hours or until they have a deep rich red color. If they cook too fast, the steam will cause them to burst and run over the edge and result in a mushy sauce, but a moderate heat, long continued, will leave each quarter distinct in the clear sirup. Let it cool in the pan and turn it out without any stirring of the fruit. This may be poured at once into sterilized jars and sealed the same as canned fruit, if you are not likely to use it all soon. As a sauce for a breakfast or dinner it is acceptable; with cream and hot biscuit for supper it is delicious, and as a filling for pastry shells it is convenient.—Home Science Magazine.

CHEESE CURING ROOMS.

In Spite of Much Discussion There Has Not Been That Improvement That There Should Have Been.

A Department of Agriculture (Ottawa) bulletin says: The question of improvement in curing rooms has been much discussed for two or three years past, and the advantages to be derived from such improvement have been clearly set forth, yet there has not been as much progress made in this direction as there ought to have been, and something more seemed necessary to convince those engaged in the manufacture of cheese that it is a matter of economy if nothing else, to spend sufficient money on the improvement of curing rooms to ensure proper control of the temperature at all seasons of the year.

Central Cool Curing Rooms—With the object of providing a practical working illustration on a scale sufficiently large to attract general attention, and to get a comparatively large number of people directly interested in the results four large central or consolidated cool cheese curing rooms were established by the Dominion Department of Agriculture in the spring 1902.

The Saving in Shrinkage.—At these four illustration stations over 70,000 cheese from some 40 factories have been cured during the last two seasons. As the cheese were collected from the factories, a number from the same vat from all factories were set aside each week, and after being carefully weighed, one was placed in the curing room and the mate to it put in the upper storey where the temperature was not controlled. When the cheese of the corresponding week were sold, these cheese were again weighed as before, and the difference in shrinkage noted. From this difference the saving in shrinkage on the whole lot was calculated. The following table shows the actual saving of shrinkage on all the cheese handled this season to date at the four Cool Curing Stations:

A GOOD HEAD.

Curing room.	No. of cheese.	Shipped weight.	Shrinkage saved.	Value.
Brockville	9,534	761,299	9,569	$1,011 59
Cowansville	14,080	1,137,159	13,684	1,497 44
St. Hyacinthe	9,255	711,076	6,816	490 76
Woodstock	12,893	1,013,552	14,410	1,464 17
	$45,769	$3,623,336	$14,609	$1,669 76

The total value of the saving, namely, $1,669.76 represents the interest at 6 per cent. on over $75,000, or in other words would provide for a capital outlay of nearly $2,000 for each of the factories contributing cheese. As everyone knows the past two seasons have been remarkable for the very cool weather and moist condition of the atmosphere that prevailed all summer. In an ordinary season the saving of shrinkage would be very much greater, because a high temperature and a dry air are two conditions that increase the shrinkage.

Improvement in Quality.—But the saving in shrinkage is only a minor consideration. The main one is the great improvement in quality. The cheese cooled in the cool rooms and those cured in uncontrolled temperatures have repeatedly been examined and compared by a large number of cheese buyers, cheesemakers and others, and in every case the cool cured cheese has been pronounced the best in quality.

Effect of High Temperature on Quality.—In this experimental work there have been many opportunities for observing the effect of a high temperature on the quality of the cheese. The first effect of a high temperature and one which is always noticeable is to make the texture of the cheese rough and mealy, and in extreme cases show a greasiness which is undesirable, or in other words it destroys that silkiness of texture always present in cheese at its best. Bad flavors are intensified at the higher temperature and many cheese go "off" flavor, while their mates that are cool cured remain sound and clean. All cheese become sharp and "tasty" much quicker at the high temperature. Cool curing will not make a fine cheese out of a poor one, but still cheese which are a little weak and open, or on the other hand have a little too much acid, show up better when cool cured than they do when cured at ordinary hot weather temperatures.

One cannot help thinking what great benefit would accrue to the Canadian cheese industry at large, if all the cheese were cool cured. Indeed, it is doubtful if anyone can properly estimate it. We have had in the past two seasons a most excellent illustration on this point, inasmuch as the comparatively slight improvement in quality, due to the unusually cool summers, had the effect of encouraging consumption to such an extent that the demand forced prices up to a point that few ever expected to see again.

Arrangements for cool curing cheese will doubtless be worked out in different ways, according to local circumstances and conditions. The larger factories will probably make the necessary improvements in connection with their own buildings. Combination or consolidation may be effected in some cases, but the jealous rivalry which exists among factories stands in the way. It is quite probable that a considerable portion of our cheese will in the future be cured in the warehouse of the exporters and commission merchants.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

A long portage makes a heavy canoe.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes; "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Signed, JEAN VALCOURT,

The Flagging Energies Revived.—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be not relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These come from stomachic troubles. The want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare powder, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression, and reviving the flagging energies.

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

THE FIRE CROWD.

As a Rule It Likes a Big Blaze and Crashing Walls.

"There is one curious thing connected with fires," said a thoughtful man, "and that is the fact that while the fireman is always a hero in the public estimate and while men and women have all kinds of admiration for these brave fellows they yet want to see them get the worst of it in the fight against the flames. It is an interesting fact that the average man and woman are not at all anxious to see the firemen get the fire under control. They would much rather see the flames spread until the affair developed into an immense conflagration. Mind you, the trait is not at all vicious. There is no malice in it. It is simply the love of excitement and adventure, things that are so deep rooted in human nature that we may not control them at will. Besides, we want to develop our heroes to the limit. We want our firemen to fight a good fight against long odds and under great difficulties. We cannot quarrel with this feeling in the human makeup. After all, it is what one may call the poetry of human nature, and without it this old system of ours would be dull and prosaic indeed. Of course, you will always find a few persons around a fire who are directly concerned in the fight the firemen are making. They want to see the flames put out. In the case of some of the spectators it means bread and meat. It means the loss of a position or maybe the loss of home. But I was speaking of the vast majority of men and women who gather to witness a fire. The fire is the thing with them. They want to see a big blaze and hear the crash of the walls and all that sort of thing. Did you ever take the trouble to analyze a fire crowd? In the first place an alarm of fire will draw a crowd quicker than anything in the world. Whenever the bells begin to clang and the engines go rushing down the street you will see men, women and children rushing this way and that in order to see as much as may be seen of the fire and fire fighters. The hour of day or night does not make so much difference. The crowd will get there in some way and for some reason, though the great majority of the persons have no sort of interest other than idle curiosity. Once on hand, they want to see a good fire, and that's why I say they want to see the flames get the best of the firemen. They will go away and talk about what a game fight the fire laddies made. Human nature is a curious thing, is it not?"

Never Occurred to Him.

"I don't know why it is," said Mr. Glossup as he came downstairs red eyed and sleepy and greeted his guest, "but I never can get used to the striking of that clock in our room.

"It has such a loud, insistent 'bang' when it strikes the hours that it wakes me up nearly every time. We've had it in the house two or three years, but I can't become accustomed to it. We would have put it in the attic long ago, only it's a present from my wife's mother, and that would never do. Good clock, too, aside from that, but it worries me nearly to death. I wish I knew what to do with it."

"Why don't you wind merely the timekeeping part of it," said his guest, "and let the striking part go unwound?"

"Johnson, you have saved my life!" exclaimed Mr. Glossup joyfully. "I never thought of that."

She Took Them at Their Word.

Keuka lake is one of the most attractive of the great chain of lakes in the interior of New York state. Bluff point at its head is a bold promontory which rises grandly and impressively. It was upon the banks of this lake that the famous "Jemima Wilkinson" founded a colony nearly three generations ago and announced that she could walk upon the water of the lake. A large crowd gathered to see her undertake the experiment. Turning to her followers, she asked, "Have you all faith that I can walk upon the water?" "We have! We have!" her followers replied. "Then there is no use in my undertaking to do so," she replied. "If ye have faith ye shall be saved without my walking upon the water."

An Apt Quotation.

The readiness of repartee of Thomas B. Reed was never better illustrated than on one occasion when he went to visit a friend who lived at the top of a long and narrow flight of stairs. Half way up Reed missed his footing and fell to the bottom. His friend, hearing the racket, rushed to the door and shouted down the semidarkness of the hall, "Who is that?"

"'Tis Eiser rolling rapidly," drawled the man from Maine as he picked himself up.

Chickweed.

Like the plantain, which the Indians called "the white man's foot" because it sprang up wherever the whites penetrated, the chickweed seems to follow the track of the white colonist, and in New Zealand the Maoris call it "the mark of the paleface." The little flower is a sort of barometer. It opens when fine weather is coming, remains closed if rain is in the air.

Both Artists.

"My pa," said the blind man's boy, "can tell dimes from pennies and nickels from quarters by just feeling of them."

"Huh," replied old Hardphist's son, "that's nothing! My pa can tell the difference by the smell."

A woman is never known to advertise for the return of stolen property "and no questions asked." She would ask questions or die.

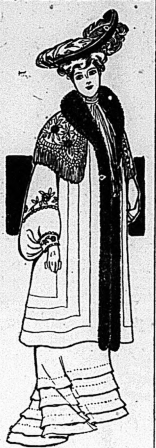
GIRLS WITH SMALL INCOMES

They Must Select Their Costumes With Great Care.

The girl with a small income must choose her costumes with care, but if she does this she will often find herself better dressed than her sister whose larger means sometimes make her purchase things without due reflection.

Always remember that it is better to have one good costume than three indifferent ones. Study the styles carefully, and choose what you find best suited for you.

With one walking costume of mixed goods and a dressy tailor made for visiting, a girl will find herself well dressed for the street. The walking costume may be made of black flecked with white, of navy blue or of brown, the skirt kilted just to clear the ground and the jacket three-quarter length.



GRAY CLOTH COAT.

The gloves and petticoat should match the costume with which they are worn.

A turban shape is pretty to go with the walking costume, and it may be trimmed with shaded cock's plumage.

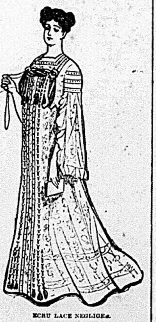
JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

Colors and Fashion Adopted by Well Gowned Women.

Bright blues are very smart for afternoon gowns, made with the hat to match. Browns and grays are to be met with on all sides, and quite a bit of lavender and purple is also popular. Coarse laces are dyed to match blue and brown chiffons, and the effect of a gown of this description is very smart.

The real old fashioned Marie Antoinette belts are being revived, and these are boned in a dozen places so that they will be sure to retain the shape of the figure.



ECRU LACE NEGLIGEE.

The new skirts are fuller than ever, and they are much better made unlined and simply worn over a slip or a well fitting underskirt.

Petticoats are becoming more voluminous, and they have more ruffles than ever in order to hold out the full skirt. These new petticoats require as much skill in cutting as an outside skirt.

Ecru lace is used in a variety of ways for gowns, waists and even negligees. In the picture you will see a negligee of this ecru lace trimmed with dainty narrow velvet beadings.

MANNERS IN BUSINESS.

Brains and Good Deportment a Winning Combination.

The value of brains in business can not be overestimated, of course; but neither can the value of manners. Don't make the error of supposing that brains are everything. You may have the best set of brains in the town, but if you haven't the manners of a gentleman nobody is going to appreciate you. Your manner is the outward indication of what you are within in the estimate of most people, and if the manner is disagreeable few will take the trouble to examine into you any further.

The consensus of general opinion is that the man who goes about with porcupine quills as his manners hasn't any brains worth bothering about. Did you never notice that the men who employ large forces of intelligent people look at an applicant closely, ask a few seemingly unimportant questions and promptly employ or dismiss him? They don't sound his brain depth; they don't obtain his biography; they don't inquire into his social standing; they size him up from his manners, and if he is brass on the surface they don't look for gold within.

The employer knows that if an applicant's manner strikes him favorably it will also favorably strike people with whom he comes in contact in his work. And nobody knows better than a big business man that a favorable first impression means half the sale. People are apt to think that if there is any place where manners are of little consequence it is in business, where cold calculation so largely takes the place of feeling. But the truth is that nowhere else are manners of such importance as in everyday dealings. There is no capital and equipment any young man can have that will pay him better than good manners. There is no possible calling for which this does not better fit him. If he has brains the world owes him something, but unless he has good manners he will have a hard time collecting it.

A WHISTLER PICTURE.

The Dramatic Manner of Its Finish and an Anticlimax.

Whistler was one day visited by a foreign artist, an old acquaintance, with whom Whistler had not as yet quarreled. He was received with genuine cordiality, and, artist-like, he ran round the studio looking at everything. One small picture seemed to charm him especially, and he said, "Now that is one of your good ones." "Don't look at it, dear boy," said Whistler airily, "it's not finished." "Finished!" said the visitor. "Why, it is the most carefully finished picture of yours that I have ever seen." "Don't look at it!" persisted Whistler. "You are doing injustice to yourself, you are doing injustice to my picture, and you are doing injustice to me!" The visitor looked bewildered, when Whistler, in a theatrical tone, cried out: "Stop: I'll finish it now!" Then he procured a very small camel's hair brush, fixed it on a long and slender handle, mixed a little speck of paint on his palette, dipped the tip of his brush into it, and then, standing off from his picture and with the action of a fencer with his rapier, he lunged forward and touched the picture in one spot with his pigment. "Now it's finished," said he. "Now you may look at it." This was all highly dramatic, and indeed very well acted, but, as in the case of some stage plays, the final act of Whistler's performance proved to be an anticlimax. The foreign artist took his leave, but, finding that he had left his umbrella behind him, called for it next day. The servant, recognizing him, told him that Mr. Whistler had gone out for the day, but invited him to go to the studio and seek his umbrella. He went there and found it, but also took the opportunity of having one more look at the picture which had been "finished" for his special benefit the day before, and then he saw that the little dab of wet paint which Whistler had so dramatically put on he had afterward scrupulously wiped off again!—Frederick Keppel in The Reader.

Hidden Water Supply.

The investigation of a neglected spring or rivulet may bring to light a valuable supply of water for gardening or domestic purposes. A surprising quantity is often obtainable by installing a ram at some seemingly insignificant source. A ram is cheap, because the first expense is the last, there being no cost of maintenance, and it is satisfactory, because the ram requires no attention. Once started, it takes entire care of itself.—Country Life In America.

Twenty Shots In His Head.

At the present time there is a keeper on a Hertfordshire estate who has about twenty shots in his head. Nearly thirty years ago this man was accidentally shot by an under keeper, and there were twenty-two holes in the hat he wore, which is preserved to this day. The injured man never had the shots extracted, was long between life and death and completely lost his hearing.—London Standard.

Qualified Approval.

"How did you like the opera?"

"First rate," answered Mr. Cumrox. "I didn't care much about the tunes they played, but it was a great comfort to have enough noise to drown the vacuous conversation that was going on around me."

A Looking Glass.

Mr. Crittick—Miss Artz tells me she does most of her painting now on glass.

Miss Spertz—I think she means with the aid of a glass.

NO FAITH CURE.

About Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

They Cure Stomach Troubles and Indigestion, Anyway, Whether You Have Faith in Them or Not.

All physicians agree that the element of faith has a great deal to do in the cure of disease.

Firm belief and confidence in a family physician or the same confidence and faith in a patent medicine have produced a remarkable cure in all ages.

This is especially true in nervous troubles, and no field offers so prolific a harvest for the quack and charlatan as the diseases arising from a weak or run-down nervous system.

Nevertheless, the most common of all diseases, indigestion, and stomach troubles, which in turn cause nervous diseases, heart troubles, consumption, and loss of flesh, requires something besides faith to cure.

Mere faith will not digest your food for you, will not give you an appetite, will not increase your flesh and strengthen your nerves and heart, but Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do these things, because they are composed of the elements of digestion; they contain the juices, acids and peptones necessary to the digestion and assimilation of all wholesome food.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest food if placed in a jar or bottle in water heated to 98 degrees, and they will do it much more effectively when taken into the stomach after meals, whether you have faith that they will or not.

They invigorate the stomach, make pure blood and strong nerves in the only way that nature can do it, and that is from plenty of wholesome food, well digested. It is not what we eat, but what we digest that does us good.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by druggists at 50c for full-sized package.

Little book on cause and cure of stomach troubles mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

ONLY ONE WAY.

To Purify the Blood, Increase Flesh and Strength and to Cure Indigestion.

Secret Patent Medicines Will Not do it.

There is a Simpler and Better Way.

There is only one way to purify the blood, only one way to increase flesh and that is through the stomach and digestive organs. Why? Because the stomach and digestive organs make blood and flesh, bone, nerves and sinew. Did you ever see a person blessed with a healthy, vigorous stomach and digestion who had impure blood, muddy, sallow complexion, or who had weak nerves, sleepless nights and the thousand and one pains and aches arising from poor digestion? No, because perfect digestion converts the food eaten into pure blood, strong nerves and muscles, and all the flesh a person needs to have for health, symmetry, and beauty.

Every person knows whether or not his or her digestion is what it should be, but every person does not know what is the safest and best way to secure and preserve a healthy condition of the digestive organs. It is not done by the use of any wonderful secret patent medicine, but by the use of certain harmless digestive principles, which taken at meals, will digest the food anyway, regardless of the weak condition of the stomach.

Dr. Brooks recommends a combination of vegetable essences, fruit salts, pure aseptic pepsin and Golden Seal, prepared in convenient tablet form, and sold by druggists every where under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

These pleasant tasting tablets are to be dissolved in the mouth after each meal, and, mingling in the food in the stomach, digest it perfectly. There is nothing wonderful about this. Any physician or chemist knows that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do this because repeatedly tested and proved, and thousands of cured dyspeptics have found it to be true also.

Dr. Harlandson states that these tablets increase flesh because they digest flesh-forming food like eggs, meat and ordinary everyday food; for the same reason they purify the blood and strengthen weak nerves. In no other way can it be done, because flesh, blood, and nerves are obtained from the food we eat.

Dr. Jennison once stated that he believed a fifty cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets would give more real benefit than $50 worth of ordinary doctor's fees.

These tablets may be found at any drug store.

ARE YOU THIN?

Do You Want to Become Fleshy?

A Few Simple Rules.

Flesh and Not Fat Is What Is Needed.

What thin people want is flesh, and not fat. To be symmetrical and properly proportioned every person should have a certain amount of flesh. To be plump does not necessarily mean to be fat. Fat is undesirable; it clogs and retards the action of every muscle, interferes with the healthy action of the heart and lungs, and when excessive pre-disposes to fatty degeneration of vital organs, to say nothing of the discomfort, more or less, resulting from excessive adipose tissue.

Common sense would suggest that if one wishes to become fleshy and plump, the thing most needed would be flesh-forming foods; in other words, albuminous foods, like eggs, beef, oatmeal, etc. The kinds of food that make flesh are the foods that form the greater part of our daily bill of fare.

Now, the only reason so many people remain thin is because their stomachs do not properly and completely digest and assimilate the flesh-forming beefsteak and eggs we eat every day.

There are thousands of such people, and they are really dyspeptic, although they may not suffer any particular pain or inconvenience from their stomachs. If such persons would take, with their meals, some preparation like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, the food would be quickly digested, and the proper degree of plumpness very soon secured, because these tablets are prepared exactly for that purpose. They will digest every variety of flesh-forming food, which is the sole reason why they so quickly build up and strengthen thin, dyspeptic men and women.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets cure dyspepsia and every form of indigestion on this common sense plan, that they digest the food promptly, giving strength to every nerve and organ of the body, while at the same time the stomach has a chance to rest and recover its natural vigor. Nothing further is required to cure any stomach trouble, or to make thin, dyspeptic people strong, plump and well.

This excellent preparation is manufactured by F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., and sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package.

FREE TO MILLIONS.

A Valuable Little Book Sent Free for the Asking.

Medical books are not always interesting reading, especially to people enjoying good health, but as a matter of fact, scarcely one person in ten is perfectly healthy, and even with such sooner or later sickness must come.

It is also a well-established fact that nine-tenths of all diseases originate with a breaking down of the digestion; a weak stomach weakens and impoverishes the system, making it easy for disease to gain a foothold.

Nobody need fear consumption, kidney disease, liver trouble, or a weak heart and nervous system as long as the digestion is good, and the stomach able to assimilate plenty of wholesome food.

Stomach weakness shows itself in a score of ways, and this little book describes the symptoms and causes and points the way to cure so simple that any one can understand and apply.

Thousands have some form of stomach trouble and do not know it. They ascribe the headache, the languor, nervousness, insomnia, palpitation, constipation and similar symptoms to some other cause than the true one. Get your digestion on the right track and the heart trouble, lung trouble, liver disease, or nervous debility will rapidly disappear.

This little book treats entirely on the cause and removal of indigestion and its accompanying annoyances.

It describes the symptoms of Acid Dyspepsia, Nervous Dyspepsia, Slow Dyspepsia, Amylaceous Dyspepsia, Catarrh of the Stomach, and all affections of the digestive organs in plain language, easily understood, and the cause removed.

It gives valuable suggestions as to diet, and contains a table giving length of time required to digest various articles of food, something every person with weak digestion should know.

No price is asked, but simply send your name and address, plainly written on postal card to F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., requesting a little book on Stomach Diseases, and it will be sent promptly by return mail.

Dogs vs Dyspepsia

They do not have Dyspepsia because the stomach of a dog secretes six times as much pepsin and twice as much hydrochloric acid as the stomach of a man.

STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS

have cured thousands of men and women of Dyspepsia and Indigestion because they supply what every weak stomach lacks: Hydrochloric and lactic acids, pure aseptic pepsin, ginger and Golden Seal to increase the secretion of gastric juices. They cure Nervous Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Gas and Fermentation, Billiousness, Constipation or any form of weak digestion.

"FATUOUS INSOLENCE"

Is Claim of Mr. Harcourt About Educational System Such?

Minister of Education Says It Is the Best in the World, But Col. Whitney Points Out That It Is Afflicted With Dry Rot—Changes Criticized in the House By Mr. Hoyle—Ministers Answered Questions By Members.

Toronto, Feb. 11.—In the Legislature yesterday afternoon W. H. Hoyle (North Ontario) brought the subject of the educational system of Ontario under review. He moved for a return, showing the number of students admitted to the Normal schools of the province since September, 1903; how many prior to admission taught less than twelve months in a public school, and how many did not take a model school course and secure a certificate of competency. He said it was a great surprise to educational circles when they read in The Educational Monthly of Canada that there was a scarcity of teachers, and that the department was prepared to receive a limited number of students, say 25, who had received junior leaving certificates, but who had not taught one year as required, and who would be granted interim certificates. This was a radical change, Mr. Hoyle said. It was well known that there was a great scarcity of applications from those who desired to attend the Normal schools as compared with previous years, and he deduced that this was owing to the action of the department in lengthening the course from six months to one year.

Scarcity of Teachers.

He quoted from an interview with the Deputy Minister of Education in October that the Ontario educational system was seriously threatened by the scarcity of teachers, which was due almost entirely to the low salaries. The speaker did not find by the returns that there was a scarcity of teachers. In 1901 there were 8,403 teachers, and in 1902, 8,497 teachers. Last year 2,618 persons presented themselves at the junior leaving examinations, of which some 1,269 passed and these received notice to present themselves to the Normal schools without attending the model schools. As to the statement that low salaries were responsible for the scarcity of teachers, Mr. Hoyle said that in 1901 the average salaries paid to male teachers was $431, and to female teachers $306, while in 1902 the figures were $436 and $313, the highest salaries ever paid in Ontario. How did the Minister of Education propose to raise the salaries of teachers?

Another point was the large decrease in the number of scholars attending the public schools, of 6,494 for 1902 over 1901, while there was an increase of attendants at separate schools of 1,977 over 1901.

The Best Course Taken.

Hon. Mr. Harcourt said if Mr. Hoyle had been possessed of the fullest information he could agree that the department had taken the best course. It was a wide question why the attendance at rural schools had decreased. It was true that the boys flocked to the city. There was a more important question, which was: How to prolong school life? The department had issued interim certificates for years.

Mr. Hoyle had complained of the extension of the Normal School term from six months to one year. Mr. Harcourt compared this with the State of Massachusetts, where the Normal School term is four, three and two years. The teachers had been asking for this change for years. There was not a six months term Normal School on this continent.

Not Long Enough.

If they had made a mistake at all, it was in being contented with a one-year course. The attendance at our Normal schools during the last few years has been abnormal. During the last six months there had been a scarcity of teachers and numerous applications for extension of certificates. There were other reasons for the scarcity of teachers. Industrial enterprise were attracting the young men, and the Northwest was also attracting numerous persons who would have supplied the want of teachers in this province.

Mr. Harcourt made a long defence of the system, which he claimed was the best in the world.

Afflicted With Dry Rot.

Mr. Whitney also took a hand in the debate. It was a fact, he said, that was almost generally admitted that the general educational system of the province was afflicted with a serious visitation of dry rot, and these defects would continue to exist until there was a change in the system from the top to the bottom.

Then the matter dropped, the motion for the return asked for being dropped.

Replies to Members.

In reply to Mr. Murphy, the Provincial Secretary said the Government had not decided to grant aid to assist in the maintenance of the Isolation Hospital.

Mr. Smyth (Algoma), enquired how many petitions had been presented to the Government for aid to build and repair colonization roads and bridges in Algoma for the past five years. Hon. Mr. Latchford promised to bring down the desired information. Hon. Mr. Davis also gave the list of permits in the Townships of Chesley and Cheslea additional during 1901, 1902 and 1903.

The Premier replied to Mr. Sutherland: The Government had applied to the Dominion for the usual railway subsidy for the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, without receiving any definite answer. It is the intention of the Government to renew the application.

There "seems to have been" no communication, written or verbal, the Premier told Mr. Whitney, between the returning officer for North Renfrew and the Government, with reference to the return made by him to the writ of election after the death of the late John W. Munro.

Mr. Stratton informed Mr. Clark of Centre Bruce that the Government did not permit any of its employes to engage in private business, when it interfered with the proper discharge of his public duties. Dr. Chamberlain, Inspector of Prisons, was not interested financially in a private hospital in Hamilton.

A number of bills were read a first time.

The Usual Cause of Dyspepsia,

AND INDIGESTION IS CONSTIPATION AND CURE CAN COME WHEN THE BOWELS, LIVER AND KIDNEYS ARE REGULAR AND ACTIVE.

DR. CHASE'S Kidney-Liver-Pills.

Digestion is not confined to the stomach, for by far the most difficult part of the process of digestion takes place in the intestines and depends on the activity of the liver in supplying bile and the regularity of the kidneys and bowels in removing the waste matter.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills bring prompt relief and cure for dyspepsia, indigestion and constipation, because they have a direct and combined action on the kidneys, liver and bowels, making these organs regular and active in their work of cleansing the system.

Instead of merely aiding digestion they have a beneficial action on the entire digestive system. They remove the cause of trouble and ensure the healthful functions of the various organs of digestion and excretion. The cures they bring about are thorough and lasting.

Mr. Wm. Rogers, carpenter, Deseronto, Ont., writes:—"I wish to say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the best medicine I ever used, as they entirely cured me of dyspepsia. I suffered something awful with dyspepsia, and had to be very careful of what I ate and to diet myself so much that life was scarcely worth living. The use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills seemed to remove the cause of any trouble for they have completely cured me. I can recommend them most highly as a cure for dyspepsia."

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box of his remedies.

CATARRH OF THE HEAD

Is very common, but awfully dangerous, because it causes deafness and leads to consumption. Cure is as certain to follow the use of Catarrhozone as day is to follow night. You simply breathe the fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which spreads through the nasal passages, throat and lungs, driving out every vestige of catarrh. "I was cured of chronic catarrh of the nose and throat," writes Ernest M. Wilkinson, of Laurencoton, "after many years of misery by Catarrhozone, which is a splendid remedy to free the air passages from mucous. Catarrhozone relieved quickly and my cure has been permanent." Price $1 for two months' treatment; trial size 25c.

Faithful Pastor Appreciated.

The Management of St. Andrew's church presented the following resolution to the congregational meeting, which was unanimously adopted:

The Board of Managers sincerely regret the cause which compels the Pastor, Rev. M. W. Maclean, to resign, after a faithful ministry in St. Andrew's Church of 30 years. The Rev. gentleman will not only be missed from the pulpit, but there will be a void in the hearts of his people which will be difficult to fill.

COST OF WAR NEWS.

REPORTS OF THE WAR WILL COST ENORMOUS SUMS—HOW THE NEWS IS SENT.

In the war between Japan and Russia, word of the first shot fired in far eastern waters would reach this country across 12,481 miles of ocean bed, says the London Express.

The tiny electric impetus put in motion by the key of the operator in far Nagasaki will instantly plunge under the eastern sea and come to land in China, near Shanghai, 470 miles away. Then that little throb will work southward round the China Coast to Hong Kong, 945 miles. At Hong Kong (British) it will dive under the China Sea to Saigon, in Anam (French), 951 miles; from Saigon it will cross the bed of the sea to Singapore (British), 628 miles. Or it might go by way of Labuan, Borneo (British) 1,971 miles.

Through the Malacca strait to Penang 298 miles, and then a great plunge westward through the wild Nicobars and under the tropical Bengal sea 1,289 miles, to Madras. At Madras it will spring from the dark depths into the flaming Indian sunshine; on a thread of glinting wire it will span the Deccan, leap jungle and stream until it comes down to steaming Bombay.

Never resting, the brave little spark will take to the water again, traverse the broad Arabian sea to Aden, 1,850 miles, thread its way up the scorching Red sea, flying ever westward, to Alexandria, 1,584 miles. And from Alexandria it will travel deep under the balmy Mediterranean to Malta, out to Lisbon, and so to London, 3,205 miles.

Every word forced so laboriously through those 12,481 miles of solid wire will cost 1s 11d. This is the newly reduced rate for press messages, at which many thousands of words will be sent. For private messages the rate is 5s 8d per word, or 4s 10d a word by the Russian route.

How long would the news take to come? Curiously enough, rather less than no time at all. A press message recently despatched from Japan at 2.05 p.m. reached London at 1 p.m. on the same day—say, an hour and five minutes before it started! Of course, that is an ancient and very simple paradox. Japan time is nine hours ahead of London time. The message, therefore, took 7 hours and 55 minutes to come. It overtook the sun—that is all.

ABOUT OVERCOAT BUYING.

Yes, probably most men have all the overcoats they want for this winter. But what about next winter? Lots of men are taking advantage of the clearing sale of overcoats at the Oak Hall, to provide for next winter. Some do not look that far ahead, but the men wanting to make money will see the advantage.

Evangelistic Services.

There was a good attendance at the Bible reading in the Baptist Church yesterday afternoon, Mr. Shields' address on "Paul's Prayer for the Ephesians," being very helpful. The audience present at the evening service was a large one. After Mr. Whyte had sung several selections, Mr. Shields preached from 2nd Samuel, 20:8—10, his subject being "A Dangerous Rival." David had decided to appoint Amasa, who had been involved in the rebellion of Absalon, as captain of the army instead of Joab. He had commanded Amasa to assemble the host of Israel in three days, but he had been slow in obeying. Joab, who was bent on destroying him, through his tarrying was enabled to catch up with him, and under the guise of friendship slew him with a sword which he had in his hand, that been unnoticed by Amasa. So to-day God had purposes for the sinner. He would make the rebel to be a prince, but many were like Amasa, and deferred obeying the commands of God until the evil one came, who was bent on their destruction. Satan always carried a sword, and though professing friendship, as Joab had, would accomplish the death of the sinner out of Christ. In response to an appeal for immediate decision, at the close of the address, several stood up. The subject for this evening will be "What God said to the biggest man on earth."

Lecture This Evening.

The lecture to be delivered this evening in the Y.M.C.A. rooms by Mr. J. W. Johnson, F.C.A., of Ontario Business College, will deal exhaustively with one of the most important subjects with which business men in all parts of the world have to deal, namely, "Foreign and Inland Bills of Exchange."

Let every sufferer from lame back, aching joints and swelled limbs use Nerviline. It's sure to cure and costs 25c for a large bottle.

Sports and Pastimes

HOCKEY.

The teams in group 1 of the intermediates were very closely matched. First they played a tie, winning two games each. Then, on neutral ice, Brockville beat Perth at Smith's Falls on Monday night by 3 to 2, and last night, on their own ice, Brockville defeated Smith's Falls by 1 to 0. A remarkably close fit all round.

—o—

To the great surprise of the Belleville team and the intense disgust of their friends, the Brockville Granites to-day telegraphed their decision to default the games with the local team for the championship of groups Nos. 1 and 2. Some strong comments were made on this seemingly unsportsmanlike action of the Granites, but The Intelligencer will await their explanation before commenting further on the subject.

The Bellevilles will meet the Marlboros of Toronto, winners in groups Nos. 5 and 6, in Toronto on Wednesday next.

The 15th Bugle Band accept E Company's challenge, and would like to meet them at an early date.

HORSE AND TRACK.

W. H. Comstock, Brockville, lost his fine hackney stallion, "Paragon," from an internal complication. Mr. Comstock purchased "Paragon" in Philadelphia, Pa., about a year ago, paying $1,900. He carried off several prizes at the fairs of 1903.

Ottawa's record ice meeting collapsed yesterday, owing to lack of patronage. The only race was the 2.12 trot and pace, in which Looking Glass defeated Celia, Gipsy Girl and Corinna. Best time 2.21.

SPORTING NOTES.

W. E. Quinn, who makes a specialty of jumping on ice skates recently made a high jump of 4 ft. 1 3-4 inch, claiming to have beaten the world's record. Mr. John Davidson, who will appear at the rink this evening, has a record of 4 feet 3 inches. He will make an attempt to excel Mr. Quinn's record.

I. O. F. Members.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

MORE DANGEROUS THAN THE THEATRE FIRE.

Chicago still sits clothed in the vesture of mourning, bowed in grief over the terrible disaster that befell her people through the Iroquois Theatre fire. The keenness of [illegible] adds zest to the demand for a thorough investigation into the cause, and for the enactment of strict measures to prevent a repetition of the horror.

Would to God that this sad event might also serve to convince the public how best to deal with a far more destructive, subtle and deceptive evil, namely, the saloon curse. Instead of hundreds, thousands are annually swept out of existence, and yet the facts, arguments and warnings, presented by reformers are, only too apt to be laughed to scorn or waved aside. There is a feeling on the part of thoughtless people that every attempt to stamp out vice and drunkenness is needless. They will take all the risks, there is no danger. No danger! The chances of tampering with strong drink and coming out unscathed, are even less than the chances which the theatregoers on that fatal afternoon, of coming out alive. Why not heed the warning and thus secure safety and happiness?—Extract from "Union Signal."

Entertained by Their President.

A very enjoyable afternoon was spent yesterday by the members of the Auxiliary of the W.M.S. of the Tabernacle at the home of their President, Mrs. (Rev.) A. Campbell, Victoria Ave. After the usual business had been transacted, a most interesting programme of a missionary character was presented, at the conclusion of which refreshments were served. A hearty vote of thanks was given Rev. and Mrs. Campbell for their hospitality.

WHAT IS DYSPEPSIA?

Qualms, nausea, longing for food, yet dreading to eat. You may have the real thing, but Ferrozone will cure you like it did S. D. Huntingdon, of Hamilton, who says: "I frequently was attacked with such acute dyspepsia that I thought it must be heart disease. I used Ferrozone and got relief. I kept on using Ferrozone and was cured. My digestion is in perfect order and I can eat anything to-day." Nothing is as good as Ferrozone for dyspepsia and those bothered with weak stomachs. Price 50c at druggists.

Charged With Theft.

James Chard, who resides near Frankford, was arrested yesterday by High County Constable Duffin on the charge of stealing a load of wood, the property of John T. Howard. It appears that the wood was piled along the side of the road, and it is alleged that Chard took a load, nearly a cord, and sold it. The accused denies the charge. He was brought up before Magistrate Flint this morning and the trial was in progress this afternoon. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown, and Mr. McMahon defended Chard.

Great actions, like great men, appear only at intervals.

MANY SUMMONED.

A BIG PARTY CHARGED WITH VIOLATING RAWDON'S LOCAL OPTION LAW.

A case which is exciting considerable attention in the Township of Rawdon will be tried on Thursday next at the Village of Stirling. The Township in question is under local option, and it is alleged that the law has been broken, and broken by those who should assist in its enforcement. Some time ago P. A. Lott, a brother of Byron O. Lott, the Grit candidate for the Commons in West Hastings, was appointed by the Township Council as a special constable, and one of his duties, so we are informed, was to see that the local option by-law was enforced.

A few evenings ago a gathering took place at a temperance house at Springbrook, at which a majority of the Township magnates and a number of the prominent yeomen of Rawdon were in attendance. It is alleged that liquor was provided and quite freely indulged in by the majority of those present.

The result is that Constable Lott has, through the License Inspector, laid an information against the proprietor of the house and the guests. The number of summonses issued by Police Magistrate Flint is voluminous, as some 50 persons are involved. The outcome of the affair will be awaited with interest.

THE CAVE OF GHOSTS.

This Is One of the Wonder Places of New South Wales.

One of the curiosities of Oakley creek, N. S. W., is a cave which very few people care to enter. It is of the usual order of stalactite and stalagmite shapes and figures, but in order to get inside it the visitor must crouch down and squeeze himself through a narrow opening and grope his way in the inky darkness for a few yards till he can stand erect and light a torch.

As soon as he has done this he sees faintly the weird shapes assumed by the water dripping from the limestone and he hears a whirring noise. He feels inclined to make his exit at once, but he hears something moving all round him, and presently something touches him.

He concludes that there are uncanny spirits about, and this sensation is multiplied many times in intensity when on turning to retrace his steps he finds himself confronted by a tall, ghostly figure.

If the visitor has a strong nerve or has been forewarned, which is not always the case, he recognizes that the ghostly figure is a senseless block formed by the dripping from the limestone, and that the moving creatures are bats.

There is one part of the cave which no man has dared to explore. It is called the blowhole. One adventurous visitor was about to squeeze himself through this narrow aperture when it occurred to him to throw a stone through. He did so, listening for the stone to touch bottom, and the dull sound that finally reached him convinced him that there was a sheer drop of 200 feet on the other side of the blowhole.

Condensed For Four Days.

"There was a good old lawyer of the good old southern type," said a judge, "who had a most eloquent way of pleading. His brief for three days had been a marvel of classical allusion and legal erudition.

"The judge, however, became a trifle impatient and, as gently as he could, intimated that the docket was somewhat crowded, and it might be to the client's interest if the lawyer could contrive to end his plea. And, do you know, the old barrister declared that the last four days of his argument were a marvel of condensation."

Critics.

A party of compositors and printers from the country, up for a day's outing in London, visit the National gallery and pause in front of Turner's "Ulysses."

Foreman (to his companions, both lost in admiration)—It's marvelous! All done by hand too!

Second Compositor and Printer (enthusiastically)—Why, it's every bit as good as color printing!

Born Diplomat.

The famous portrait painter threw down his brushes with a sigh.

"What is the matter?" asked his elderly blossom of a customer.

"It's no use!" he cried. "I can never reproduce your loveliness."

Inference.

Dorothy—What Frank Werser ever could have seen in Bessie Brown is past my knowledge.

Bella—Why, Dorothy, I didn't know you cared so much for Frank.

Marriage.

"Marriage is like a besieged city."

"In what way?"

"So many of the people are trying to get in and so many to get out."

To be a consistent hypocrite is the craft of a very fine artist.—Schoolmaster.

MODERN UTOPIAS.

European Countries In Which Pauperism Is Unknown.

Denmark claims that there is not a single person in her domain who cannot read and write. On the northeast coast of New Guinea the island of Kutaba, surrounded by a wall of coral 300 feet high on one side and from 50 to 100 feet on the other, maintains thirteen villages of natives, to whom war, crime and poverty have been unknown since the beginning of their traditions. The most peaceful and comfortable community in Europe is the commune of the Canton Vaud, in Switzerland. Nearly every one is well off, and there are no paupers. Finland is a realm whose inhabitants are remarkable for their inviolate integrity. There are no banks and no safe deposits, for no such security is essential. You may leave your luggage anywhere for any length of time and be quite sure of finding it untouched on your return, and your purse full of money would be just as secure under similar circumstances. The Finns place their money and valuables in holes in the ground and cover them with a big leaf. Such treasure is sacredly respected by all who pass it, but in the rare event of a man wishing to borrow of his neighbor during his absence he will take only the smallest sum he requires and place a message in the hole telling of his urgent need and promising to repay the amount on a specified date. And he will invariably keep his word, for the Finn is invincible in his independence.

Agneta Park, near Delft, in Holland, is another Utopia example. A tract of ten acres has upon it 150 houses, each with its little garden and with certain common buildings and common grounds. The houses are occupied by the employees of a great distilling company, who form a corporation which owns the park. Each member owns shares in the corporation and pays rent for his house. The surplus, after all expenses have been paid, comes back to him as dividend. If he wishes to go away or if he dies his shares are bought up by the corporation and sold to the man who takes his place.

PICKINGS FROM FICTION.

Life is short—avoid causing yawns.—Eleanor Glyn in "The Damsel and the Sage."

A man's conscience is the best barometer of his ability.—Owen Kildare in "My Mamie Rose."

Women's counsel may not be worth much, but he who despiseth it is not wiser than he should be.—Amelia E. Barr in "The Black Shilling."

Human nature is not always at its highest level, and heroic sacrifices arise only from heartfelt motives.—Sir George Trevelyan in "The American Revolution."

Life is the only real counselor. Wisdom unfiltered through personal experience does not become a part of the moral tissues.—Edith Wharton in "Sanctuary."

Do not attempt to do a thing unless you are sure of yourself, but do not relinquish it simply because some one else is not sure of you.—Stewart Edward White in "The Forest."

Don't be fooled by a cheer or by a crowd. Cheers are nothin' but a breeze, an' as for a crowd, no matter who you are, there would always be a bigger turnout to see you hanged than to shake your mitt.—Alfred Henry Lewis in "The Boss."

The Hedgehog.

The hedgehog runs the roads in England freely. He is a quaint little fellow, our hedgehog, having far more intelligence than people give him credit for. It is curious, as you stand perfectly still in the middle of the road, to see him come running along, then stopping to sniff and whine and examine the high, strange object that hardly breathes lest he startle the little creature. Then, with a gentle grunt, he will pass you by. A very low yet decided grunt he gives, and he whines as well.

Shaking Hands at French Funerals.

A most painful custom at French funerals is the posting at the exit door of the church wherein the ceremonies take place of the male head of the deceased person's family, the widower or the eldest son or brother, whose duty it is to shake hands with every person who has been present at the obsequies when once they are over and people are going away. It is not etiquette for the gentleman to speak to anybody, but if he is moved to tears his weeping is considered a most appropriate action.

Precocious.

"Oh, yes, we were a very young couple—mere children, in fact. I was but a simpering schoolgirl in short skirts, and George was just a boy in jackets. I remember how pleased he was when he cast his first vote."

"But he didn't vote until he was twenty-one?"

"George was very precocious. He voted much earlier than they usually do."

Motherhood Up to Date.

"Think of a woman with her social responsibilities having a child!"

"Disgraceful! But they say she is fond of it."

"That's the strange part. She is almost like a mother to it."

Writing and Dressing.

Dorothy—Don't you feel in awe of literary women?

Dora—No, indeed. My literary cousin says it takes more sense to dress well than it does to write a book.—Detroit Free Press.

CAPTURE 2,000 TROOPS

Mikado's Cruisers Take Five Rich Russian Transports.

JAPAN SEIZES MESAMPHO.

The Island Kingdom Has Now Absolute Control of the Corean Channel—Her Score Up to Date Results in Total of Eleven Russian Warships Out of Action—Mistress of Eastern Seas—Latest War News.

London, Feb. 11.—A special despatch from Tokio, dated yesterday, says it is reported there that three transports of the Russian volunteer fleet, conveying about 2,000 troops, have been captured by the Japanese off the Corean coast.

JAPAN'S NAVAL VICTORY.

A Total of Eleven Russian Warships Now Out of Action.

London, Feb. 11.—A summary of the losses sustained by Russia in the first 24 hours of the war with Japan shows that eleven Russian warships were placed out of action in one way or another and that the Japanese did not lose a ship. The losses were as follows:

Battleship Retvizan, torpedoed and beached at Port Arthur.

Battleship Tsarevitch, torpedoed and beached at Port Arthur.

Battleship Poltava, hole below water line at Port Arthur.

Cruiser Novik, hole below water line at Port Arthur.

Cruiser Askold, hole below water line at Port Arthur.

Cruiser Diana, hole below water line at Port Arthur.

Torpedo gun vessel Korietz, destroyed at Chemulpo, Corea.

Gunboat Mandju, said to have been seized by the Japanese at Nagasaki, Japan.

Another report, however, says the Mandju is at Shanghai.

Five Russian Boats Captured.

London, Feb. 11.—Despatches to The Daily Mail from Tokio and Nagasaki, dated Feb. 10, report the arrival at Sasebo, Japan, of two large Russian steamers. One is the Volunteer Fleet Association transport Ekaterinoslav, which recently landed troops and arms at Port Arthur, and the other is the steamer Argun, belonging to the Chinese Eastern Railway Company. Both were captured by the Japanese cruisers Sai Yen and Hei Yen in the neighborhood of Fusan, Corea. The Ekaterinoslav is of 10,000 tons displacement and had been fitted up as an auxiliary cruiser. She had 30 rifles on board and was on her way from Vladivostock. The Argun was going to Vladivostock from Nagasaki. The Russian whalers Glorice, Nicolai, Alexander and Michel, captured by the Japanese, have also arrived at Sasebo.

Japan Seizes Masampho.

Tokio, Feb. 11.—Japan seized Masampho Sunday, and despatched a heavy force there. Japan will fortify the port and establish a naval base there. Masampho is an exceedingly important point, as it controls the Corean Channel, and is an excellent base for future operations.

Thirty Russians Killed.

London, Feb. 11.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Mail says an important bridge on the Manchurian Railroad has been blown up and 30 men have been killed.

Captured at Least Five.

Tokio, Feb. 11.—The Japanese have captured at least five Russian commercial steamers, including the Ekaterinoslav, Mukden, Russia, Argun and Alexander. They were captured by the Japanese in Corean and adjacent waters at various times since Saturday by small cruisers. Some of the steamers are rich prizes. The small steamer Koick is detained at Yokohama, its status not being clear.

Gale Raging at Port Arthur.

London, Feb. 11.—In a despatch from Che Foo, dated Feb. 10, a correspondent of The Daily Mail says: "A northeast gale, which is raging here, bodes no good to the crippled Russian ships. Complete demoralization reigns at Port Arthur. Advices received here from Kwan Ting, Manchuria, say that 10,000 armed Chinese unofficially recognized as Government troops, are operating in the district, and are expected to attack the railroad guards when they hear of the Russian disaster."

THE BATTLE AT CHEMULPO.

The Korietz Fired First on Japanese Torpedo Boats.

London, Feb. 11.—Baron Hayashi's official advices, referring to the battle of Chemulpo, is as follows:

"On Monday a Japanese squadron escorting transports met on the way to Chemulpo, Corea, the Russian gunboat Korietz, as the latter was coming out of port. The Korietz took an offensive attitude towards the Japanese vessel and fired on the Japanese torpedo boats. The latter discharged two torpedoes ineffectively and then the Korietz returned to her anchorage in the port. Early in the morning of Tuesday, Admiral Urik, commanding the Japanese squadron, formally called on the Russian warships to leave Chemulpo before noon. The Admiral added that if his demand was not complied with he would be compelled to attack them in the harbor. The two Russian warships left the port at about 11.30 a. m., and a battle ensued outside the Polynesian Islands. After about an hour's engagement the Russian warships sought refuge among the islands. Towards the evening the Russian cruiser Variag sank, and at 4 a.m. to-day, Feb. 10, the Korietz was reported to have also sunk, having been blown up. The officers and men of the two sunken vessels sought refuge on the French cruiser Pascal. There were no casualties on the Japanese side."

RUSSIAN VICTORIES.

Stories From St. Petersburg Have Not Yet Been Confirmed.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 11.—Some of the newspapers here print extras, claiming a Russian victory at Port Arthur. Three Japanese warships and four torpedo boats are reported to have been seriously crippled. One report says the Japanese battleship Skikishima was sunk. The people are demonstrating, but there is no official confirmation of the report, and the announcement is discredited.

Vladivostock, Feb. 11.—Private telegrams received here report the complete rout of the Japanese by the Russians on the Yalu River. These advices also claim that Chemulpo, Corea, has been occupied by Russian soldiers and marines.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 11.—A despatch to The Central News from Port Arthur says the Japanese fleet returned there Tuesday afternoon and again bombarded the Russian fleet and forts, but that it soon withdrew. The losses to the Russians, the despatch says, were small. During the firing a Japanese cruiser grounded.

Russians Massacre Chinese.

London, Feb. 11.—Special despatches from Tokio announce the arrival of the Japanese. The Tien-Tsin correspondent of The Standard sends in a report that the Russians have massacred 100 Chinese at Liao Yang, in consequence of which the officials at Shan Hai Kwan are greatly alarmed and are appealing to Pekin for protection.

Other despatches from Tien-Tsin say that 400 French troops have been ordered from there to Seoul, for the protection of the French legation at the Corean capital, the Emperor having taken refuge there.

Russian Injured By Russian.

The Che Foo correspondent of The Daily Express asserts that the Russian cruiser Diana was injured by a shot from the Russian shore battery at Port Arthur, and that the cruiser Novik and the battleship Poltava have also been beached at Port Arthur.

Special despatches from Port Arthur report that fugitives from Vladivostock accuse the Russians of openly looting Japanese houses there without interference by the police.

The Mikado is personally superintending affairs, and the cabinet holds daily sessions. The Government has issued orders for the protection of all Russian subjects residing in Japan.

Alexieff Gets Busy.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 11.—Viceroy Alexieff began yesterday the mobilization of the army reserves in Eastern Asia.

The publication of extra editions of the newspapers containing accounts of the reported injuries to Japanese ships during the Port Arthur engagements, and the sinking of the Japanese battleship Shikshima, led to a demand upon the editors for the source of their information. They replied: "It came from the British Embassy."

These reports were received everywhere with manifestations of joy, but nothing confirming them has come from Alexieff.

Canadian Built Japan's Navy.

London, Feb. 11.—Cassier's Magazine says the foundations of the Japanese fleet were laid by the Canadian Vice-Admiral Sir Archibald Lucius Douglas, K.C.B., during his mission to Japan. The admiral was born in Quebec on Feb. 8, 1842, and was the son of the late Dr. George Mellis Douglas, inspection physician of that port. He entered the Royal Navy as a cadet on the nomination of Governor-General Sir E. W. Head in April, 1856.

Ear Burned to Crisp.

Listowel, Feb. 11.—B. Rothwell, ex-principal of the Listowel public schools, met with a particularly painful mishap. He banked the furnace fire for the night and went upstairs, but turned to go downstairs again, lost his footing, and fell headlong down the steps. The lamp he was carrying was smashed, and the oil, which covered his face and head, took fire. Mr. Rothwell sustained several very severe burns, his left ear being almost reduced to a crisp.

Collision at Paris.

Paris, Feb. 11.—While a G. T. R. engine was taking water here at noon yesterday it was run into by a freight train. Both engines were badly damaged by the collision. The Hamilton auxiliary train while engaged in lifting the light engine, capsized. James Guest was severely injured, being badly scalded about the face, head and chest. The accident is said to be due to the disregarding of the semaphore signal.

Free Press Apologizes.

Ottawa, Feb. 11.—The Free Press last night published an apology to Hon. F. A. Latchford in connection with the libel suit arising out of the recent municipal campaign. This is taken to mean the end of the proceedings for libel. The case against D'Arcy Scott continues and that gentleman will be examined for discovery on Friday.

Three Years at Kingston.

St. Catharines, Feb. 11.—Thomas Blake, late clerk in St. Catharines postoffice, was sentenced by Judge Carman yesterday morning, to three years and three months in the penitentiary, for robbing the mails.

Quits the Commons.

Ottawa, Feb. 11.—D. C. Fraser, member for Guysboro, N.S., has been appointed to the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, vice Justice Henry, superannuated.

The Life of Man.

Thousands of people are suffering for the want of life giving current, which nature intended they should possess. They do not live, they simply exist; in the faces of thousands can be read the story of a wasted life and blighted hopes. Joys and pleasures are unknown to them because their vitality is being sapped away by some disease. Many have sought relief in drugs and patent remedies to relieve their mental and physical sufferings. They are soothed for a day or may be for a week, falsely braced up until the effects of the drugs wears off like the momentary bracing sip of whiskey. They sink lower in vitality and with the hope exhausted, lose confidence in themselves and decide to abandon all efforts to recover their power, feeling there is no hope for them. All this is caused from a wrecked nervous system or poor digestion, the steam of the system has run down and wants recharging. There is only one thing that will do it and that is electricity. Every nerve in the body is charged by this life giving power and when once lost from over work or other causes has got to be restored before the system works in a healthy state. As we have often said before, don't believe what we say alone, come and get a free treatment to convince yourself. The Gilmour Electric Belt is the only appliance sold to-day which will give the current. A sick person requires to get well. We will show you a list of names of people right here in Belleville who have got cured by the use of this appliance. You can go and see them for yourself, is not that good enough evidence for the truth? You have not got to go to Toronto or any of the other large cities, right here in this city we can refer you to 50. This belt has all the attachments for treating bladder and kidney trouble, varicocele, sexual weakness in any form, rheumatism, neuralgia in the neck and face, sciatica, varicose veins, nervous trouble or paralysis.

The despatch adds: "Tokio witnessed a smaller Mafeking celebration last night. Thousands of students paraded the streets, accompanied by many bands of music and carrying torches, flags, colored lanterns and transparencies emblazoned with war pictures. National airs were sung and cheers were continually given. The various processions surrounded the palace wall and visited the Government offices. The Russian legation overlooks a square where the thousands of people had assembled to witness the celebration of the Japanese victory, but the windows of the legation were darkened. The crowds were orderly and sober. British residents of Tokio were cheered wherever they appeared."

"Details of the Chemulpo engagement received here say the captain of the Variag remained on board his ship and blew her up after the crew escaped. Part of the crew swam to a French ship and others got ashore.

"One report says that the French warship notified the Russians of the Japanese approach. The Korietz engaged the Japanese cruisers first, while the Variag protected the transports. The Korietz was soon destroyed."

This correspondent adds, three Japanese torpedo boats were sunk with great loss of life.

London, Feb. 12.—In a despatch from Copenhagen, a correspondent of The Daily Mail says: "The Russian Baltic squadron of fifteen warships passed through Danish waters yesterday en route for the Far East around Cape Skagen; but, as a fierce storm was raging in the North Sea, the Russian admiral ordered the squadron through the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal."

Greater Number Disabled.

Berlin, Feb. 12.—A despatch to The Vossiche Zeitung from Yokohama says the greater number of the Russian warships at Port Arthur have already been disabled, and that several Japanese warships have been sent home for repairs.

More Japanese Cruisers.

Rome, Feb. 12.—A cypher cablegram received here contains the information that the Japanese cruisers Nishun and Kasuga are expected to reach the scene of the war on Sunday and that they will disembark their Anglo-Italian crews and substitute Japanese.

One Awaited By Two.

Shanghai, Feb. 12.—The Russian gunboat Mandjar is still here. It is understood that two Japanese warships are awaiting her at the mouth of the Yang Tse Kiang.

RAILWAY RENDERED USELESS.

Russians Cut Off From Supplies—Wreckers Were Probably Boxers.

London, Feb. 12.—A special despatch from Tien Tsin confirms the report that the Manchurian railroad has been blocked by the blowing up of some of the line, and that thirty Russians were killed in the explosion.

Did Boxers Do It?

Vienna, Feb. 12.—Disquieting reports have been received here from Pekin regarding the attitude of China in the Russo-Japanese conflict.

The Neue Weiner Tageblatt says it is believed in well informed circles that the reported destruction of a railroad bridge in Manchuria is possibly the work of an advance party of "Boxers" who, it is understood, China is organizing for the invasion of Manchuria.

It is understood that also the representatives of several of the powers at Pekin have informed their Governments of China's intention to send 200,000 "Boxers" to Manchuria.

Alexieff the Whole Thing.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 12.—Admiral Alexieff has been appointed to the supreme command of the Russian land and sea forces in the Far East.

Bans on Telegrams.

The Admiralty has issued specific orders that no telegrams from the Far East, either for private persons, newspapers or news agencies will be transmitted. The Admiralty will give out official reports.

Admiral Skrydloff, commander of the Russian Black Sea fleet, has left quietly for the Far East to take command of the Russian fleet there.

The Red Cross Society sent the steamship Mongolia, loaded with hospital stores, to the Far East on Sunday.

Japs Coaxing Chinese.

Tien Tsin, Feb. 12.—The Russian garrison was withdrawn yesterday to Shang-Hai-Kwan. The Japanese are flooding Pekin gratis with newspapers containing reports of the Japanese successes against Russia. The Russians have laid submarine mines at Dalny.

RUSSIAN CHARGES DENIED.

Wei-Hai-Wei Was Not Used By the Japanese Fleet.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 12.—Reporting the charge that the Japanese attack on Port Arthur was made from Wei-Hai-Wei (on the north coast of the San Tung peninsula) The Novoe Vremya yesterday bitterly assailed Great Britain. "In allowing Japan to use the harbor as a basis of operations," says The Novoe Vremya, "Great Britain violated the fundamental principles of neutrality. Wei-Hai-Wei must be regarded henceforth as part of Japanese territory, and Great Britain has forfeited the right to participate in any deliberations over the eventful fate of the harbor."

Absolutely Untrue.

London, Feb. 12.—It was said at the Foreign Office here last evening that the assertion of The Novoe Vremya of St. Petersburg that the Japanese fleet, in its attack on Port Arthur, used Wei-Hai-Wei as a base for its attack on Port Arthur is absolutely untrue.

Hay Has the Stage.

Washington, Feb. 12.—The move made by Secretary Hay in connection with the proposed neutralization of China has aroused the greatest interest in diplomatic circles here. The Secretary is negotiating directly with the European Foreign Offices through the resident American Ambassadors and Ministers. It was stated yesterday some, but not all, of the countries, addressed here, replied, and that these replies were generally favorable. Such information as the American State Department has is to the effect that Japan would welcome an international agreement neutralizing China.

Russia's Internal Troubles.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 12.—Serious disturbances are reported to have broken out at Reval, the fortified seaport on the Gulf of Finland. Four companies of soldiers are said to have been despatched to suppress the rioting. The disturbances are believed to be connected with labor troubles.

Charged With Bigamy.

Toronto, Feb. 12.—Robert W. Miller was charged in the Police Court yesterday with bigamy. He is alleged to have married Victoria P. Martin, a Sundridge girl, two years ago, and last February he married Alice Williams of South River, Ont. He is 34 years of age and has been a section boss on the railway. The case arises out of a charge of nonsupport preferred by his last wife and a serious charge is also laid by his little daughter.

Died From His Injuries.

Bracebridge, Feb. 12.—Wednesday night at Utterson, while crossing the track, Kenneth Morrison of Bracebridge fell and was struck by the express, having his foot taken off, and receiving a severe scalp wound. The injured man was taken to Huntsville and died yesterday morning. He leaves a wife and six children.

A Million Dollar Fire.

Oswego, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Two firemen were injured, one fatally, in the fire which practically destroyed the large plant of the Corn Products Company in this city, causing a loss estimated at $1,000,000.

More Quo Warranto.

Windsor, Feb. 12.—Ex-Ald. James Craig of Amherstburg has at last carried out his threat to make an attempt to unseat the Amherstburg Town Council, and has begun quo warranto proceedings.

Strathcona Not Well.

London, Feb. 12.—Neither Lord nor Lady Strathcona could accept the invitation to the Teck marriage, as Sir Thomas Barlow, the King's physician, forbade.

To Egypt.

London, Feb. 12.—Joseph Chamberlain and Mrs. Chamberlain started for Cairo, Egypt, yesterday on a prolonged holiday.

Daily Intelligencer.

A "HAPPY FAMILY."

The independent Toronto News has, like The Intelligencer, been giving attention to the opinions expressed by leading Liberals on the tariff question. Our contemporary remarks:

> It is not easy to get at the Liberal position on the tariff. Like the weather forecasts, it is necessary to have special reports from the Georgian Bay, from Ottawa and the St. Lawrence, from the Gulf, from the Maritime provinces and from Lake Superior and Manitoba. The probabilities indicate rising temperatures at Guelph, Brantford, Hamilton and Toronto, maximum temperatures for Montreal and neighborhood, general low pressure for the Maritime provinces, with rising temperatures at Cape Breton, and stationary or lower temperatures for Manitoba and the Territories.
>
> Mr. Scott, at Regina, is for stability, tending towards decrease of duties. Senator Edwards, of Ottawa, calls for the abolition of all imposts. Mr. Guthrie, of Guelph, demands adequate protection. The Liberal candidates for Centre York and Halton would have the temperatures adapted to market gardening and fruit growing. West Huron wants salt protected. The Sault and Cape Breton would like better tariff support for iron and steel production. The West would exclude scrub animals and grain products from the United States. The Liberal manufacturers, regardless of locality, demand adequate protection, and the effectual discouragement of dumping. Mr. Brodeur and Mr. Prefontaine would afford substantial support to all existing industries, and concede all tariff adjustments necessary to meet changed conditions. Mr. Sifton would not surrender even the "secondary industries" to Mr. Chamberlain.
>
> As to the Premier, The News quotes the enigmatical remarks which he made at Montreal, the most important portion of which was the following:
>
> "We reformed the tariff in 1897, but since then new conditions have arisen and the day will certainly come when the Government will again have to take into serious consideration the necessity of reforming the tariff. When that time comes I must say to you in the name of my colleagues, in the name of the Government and in my own name, that we will reform the tariff, that we will follow the same principles which we adopted in 1897; that is to say, we will give justice to the consumers without injustice to the manufacturers and leaving to the workingman the employment to which he has a right. My words, I believe, are clear enough. There are those who accuse us constantly before the country of being free-trade doctrinaires. The Liberal party may contain those who are free-trade doctrinaires, and those who are protectionist doctrinaires. For my part, I incline neither to the one side nor to the other. I wish only to be practical.

This utterance will, doubtless, remarks our contemporary, be interpreted as low tariff in the West, and as adequate protection in the industrial communities, and for political purposes it will unite in a firm fraternal grip high tariff Guthrie and free trade Edwards, and low tariff Scott and the great host of the unidentified who will follow the leader into battle. It will be remembered that in the Biglow papers we have the "Speech of Honorable Preserved Doe in Secret Caucus," in which it is declared that

"Ef he must hev beliefs nut to b'lieve 'em tu hard."

A very happy family, indeed!

It is getting to be quite the proper thing now to give a nice . . .

TIMELY TOPICS.

Did you ever notice the many points of similarity there are between the little game we call life and the grippe, or the grip? Spell it as you like, though we have noticed that ultra-fashionable people spell it the long way. But as we were saying, the grip, like life, is simple enough if it weren't for the complications. In the game of life many a man passes from the cradle to the grave with no more romance or "action" in his career than comes to a tree growing alongside the road. Another man, from almost the moment of his birth, is up against tumultuous occurrences and the strenuous life, and almost any year of his existence has enough "action" in it to furnish a plot for a novel. One man never rises above the mediocrity of ordinary clay; another grows to be distinguished, and every once in a while, at a Bridge Street anniversary, his name is pointed to with pride as a wide-browed genius whom you couldn't keep down with anything but a monument.

• • •

As in life, so in grip—it's the "complications" which distinguish one case from another. One man has the grip; in a few days his fever burns out and he goes on his way rejoicing, thanks to certain remedies which never go out of fashion. Another man gets it, and, after fighting against it wearily for a few days he succumbs and sends for the doctor, who gazes on the sufferer compassionately. His practised eye sees "complications" at once. The subject is in for the time of his life. The bursting, throbbing pain across the temples, you are told, is because the grip, always seeking the weakest part, has settled in your eyes. Even this causes you to breathe a sigh of relief, for you had always been led to believe that your weakest part, though it was in your head, was not your eyes. The doctor retires and you hear him giving his directions. "A liquid diet." What a snap that would be to some estimable citizens of your acquaintance! To you it merely brings disgust! And powders and potions, some nasty, some a little nastier. The grip is soon gone but the "complications" are a long time a-dying, and you lie there unable to read, or smoke, wondering if this life isn't a dream, after all, and whether you haven't wakened up in a world where there is no snow and ice and hockey, and where Aldermen wear wings instead of Tam o'Shanters.

• • •

And then you sit up and wonder where in thunder all your strength has gone to; and you gradually build up again till about the tenth morning, when the partner of your joys and sorrows helps you into your overcoat, pats you on the back to keep up your courage, and out you go to face the cold world once more. And oh! the riotous joy of living! You feel strong enough to wrestle and throw anybody you meet, providing they are under nine or over ninety. But, when all's said and done, there are two good points about the grip; The first is its versatility—it always comes at you in a different way; and the second is the fact that, so far as known, no doctor has ever mistaken the grip for appendicitis, and operated on the helpless patient. So, if you haven't had the grip, say a good word for it; you'll say precious few after you get it.

Russia is now threatened with internal troubles, just as though the Japs were not worrying the poor Czar enough.

THAT WILL BE EVANGELIST SHIELD'S SUBJECT TO-NIGHT

LAST NIGHT'S ADDRESS.

Another large audience was present at the service in the Baptist Church last evening. Mr. Whyte's solos become more tender and persuasive each night, while Mr. Shield's addresses are as eloquent and instructive as ever. The subject for last evening was "What God said to the greatest man on earth," and the text, Nahum 1.14. Sennacherib, king of Assyria, was a mighty monarch who had subdued kingdom after kingdom, until his empire was the greatest in the world. While he had made himself great in the sight of men, he had also made himself vile in the sight of God, and this terrible message, that God would dig his grave was sent to him. The subject for this evening will be "Mind your own business." The meetings will be continued next week, but there will be no meetings to-morrow.

VERMILYEA & SON.

A Goddess of Africa

A Story of the Golden Fleece.

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

and captains of the Matabele impis were gathered in solemn council in the hills four miles away. The meeting was being held in secret, as the chiefs were afraid to come into the open, owing to their distrust of the white troops. They wished, however, to see Mr. Colenbrander, whom they trusted as a friend, and Mr. Rhodes would be welcome if he was willing to attend the council.

Thereupon, without hesitation, Mr. Rhodes decided to go. The military staff wished to accompany him, but Grootboom strongly advised that no such step should be taken, as it would defeat its object and involve Mr. Rhodes in great danger. Accordingly, Mr. Rhodes, Dr. Sauer, Mr. Colenbrander and the press representative started for the spot indicated, every man taking a revolver in each pocket, except Mr. Rhodes, who went unarmed. John Grootboom and John Makings made up the party to the number of six, and together they moved quietly into the rugged portion of the Matoppos, the route lying overland covered with kopjes and honeycombed with caves. Four miles from camp the six reached the foot of a huge kopje and one hundred yards further on was the trysting place. Mr. Rhodes and his companions dismounted and took up their position by a large ant heap and waited, while Grootboom advanced to the kopje to say the party were awaiting the appearance of the chiefs.

Suddenly there was a gleam of white from the kopje, and all the chiefs filed out in a row, headed by one carrying a white flag. They drew near to the party in silence and squatted round them in a semicircle. The Indaba lasted for five hours, all the points at issue being fully discussed and full explanations proffered by the white men to allay the uneasiness which the chiefs evidently felt at certain possible consequences of the surrender.

Then the chiefs arose, and each threw a small stick at the feet of Mr. Rhodes, indicating their willingness to surrender their guns, while another similar stick meant that they were ready to hand over their assegais. In return Mr. Rhodes promised that the desired abolition of the native police force should be taken into serious consideration. The chiefs solemnly replied that hostilities should cease at once, and guaranteed the safety of the roads and of the coaches. Mr. Rhodes and his party were so impressed with the honest motives of the chiefs that they even expressed their willingness to return to their stronghold with them.

The chiefs, whose names were Somabulana, Mluzalu, Secombo, Dhlism, Gunn, Manyta, Maleve, Sikhota, Nyanda and Bidi, together with Lobengula's brothers, Manya and Kavula, held absolute sway in the Matoppos. Consequently the news of their surrender, which Mr. Rhodes insisted must be unconditional, a stipulation to which, moreover, the chiefs agreed caused great rejoicing in Buluwayo and over the whole border.

Meanwhile Rex and Lord Bruno had organized a secret expedition to the land of the Zambodi, to recover the contents of the cache. They found the golden treasure and the precious gems safe and sound, and as the utmost care was taken to avoid any collision with the natives, no occasion arose to necessitate the use of firearms.

On the way back they visited the lone grave in the bush and dropped a tear in memory of the gallant fellow who had fallen as he had ever lived, with his face to the foe; nor will Jim Bludsoe ever be forgotten while life remains to them.

Long ere this Rex had told Lord Bruno the strange story of how he learned about the contents of the buried temple from a sea captain whom he was enabled to assist when in dire distress and dying of the plague in Bombay.

Although there were some reason to believe the man might have been suffering under an hallucination, he seemed so positive, and the adventure promised such amazing results if it resulted the right way, that in the end Rex decided to kill two birds with one stone, having long intended to make a journey through the heart of Darkest Africa.

The result was his expedition which had turned out so disastrously from the point of an exploration, but eminently successful as an argosy.

At the time we write, a little party of four has left Cape Town on a staunch English steamer bound for London. Lord Bruno is no longer a bachelor, and a more devoted husband it would be hard to find than the big Englishman who bends over his wee wife, anticipating her every wish. They have been comrades in camp and in battle—they will be comrades through life.

And Rex looks eagerly forward to their arrival in old England, since he has the promise of the fair god to enter into a contract, whereby it will be his privilege to worship at her shrine "until death do them part."

THE END.

A Tough Rawhide Story.

A Hopkins man in an early day, relates that most veracious of all Missouri newspapers, the Hopkins Journal, hauled lots of cord wood and used rawhide harness on his teams. Rawhide, we all know, expands when wet and contracts on drying out. Well, this man was hauling an exceptionally big load one day when a thunderstorm overtook him just as he reached a long hill leading to his home. He was walking beside his team that he might pay close attention to them and did not notice what the rain was doing for his rawhide harness until the top of the long hill was reached, when to his utter amazement the wagon stood at the bottom of the hill, the rawhide tugs being fairly stretched into fiddle strings. He was puzzled for a moment, but just then the sun came out, and a happy idea found lodgment in his fertile brain. He unhitched the team, fastened the tugs securely around a big tree and went in to dinner. When he returned the sun had caused the rawhide to contract sufficiently to bring the wagon up that steep hill with a momentum that smashed both front wheels when it came in contact with the tree around which the tugs had been fastened.

How Cigar Dealers Lose Custom.

"This may be a good cigar," said a man as he puffed at it, standing for a moment in the shop, "but I don't seem to relish it. Guess my stomach's a trifle off."

"That's just the way it is," remarked the philosophic tobacconist. "About 200 persons come into this store every day. Some of them spend $10 a week with me for cigars, and others don't spend $2. I lose a certain amount of this trade every week not because I keep inferior goods, but when smokers get a bit out of condition and the cigars don't taste as good as usual they will blame the cigars, and off they go to another shop.

"But it works about the same way with all. My dissatisfied customers go to some other man's store, and other men's dissatisfied customers come to me. So it evens up in the end. Out of every ten strangers who drop in here for the first time to buy a cigar I know by experience that I can count on one or two of them becoming regulars."

DON'T BE SORROWFUL, DARLING

Oh, don't be sorrowful, darling,
And don't be sorrowful, pray!
Taking the year together, my dear,
There isn't more night than day.

'Tis rainy weather, my darling,
Time's waves they heavily run,
But, taking the year together, my dear,
There isn't more cloud than sun.

We are old folks now, my darling,
Our heads are growing gray,
But, taking the year all around, my dear,
You will always find the May.

We have had our May, my darling,
And our roses long ago,
And the time of the year is coming, my dear,
For the silent night and the snow;

But God is God, my darling,
Of the night of death so grim;
The gate that leads out of life, good wife,
Is the gate that leads to him.

—Rembrandt Peale.

HAUNTED BY A TELEGRAPH DISPATCH.

A Murderer's Touch on the Instrument Betrayed Him.

Dick Ramsey and I had gone west to make our fortunes. What that means none but an eastern boy who has tried it can tell.

We roughed it together, sometimes faring well when we happened to fall into the camp of a hospitable westerner, but more often tramping it from village to village looking for the work which was never found and wondering when we should strike our "streak" of luck.

Finally we separated, Dick to take the position of station agent at Lakeville, a new settlement, and I to go on to Riverdale, ten miles beyond, to hold a similar position. We could talk by wire, but we found that further communication would be impossible, for we were well tied down and after our separation did not see each other again.

Dick was a gentle sort of fellow, one of those dreamers who never get on in a worldly way, but the dearest companion imaginable. I missed him terribly for awhile, but his occasional talk at the wire told me he was alive and well.

One afternoon there came a frantic call at the wire, and I hurried to the instrument to hear Dick tapping off the words that the express train had been delayed and to hold the "runaway," due at the station ten minutes later, until I heard from him. Directly after the message came the line: "Express train in sight. Something wrong. Stand by." I waited a full minute; then came Dick's familiar tap tap: "Express is being run by strange hands. They have stopped at this station. Send relief."

There was a second's silence; then, before I could flash the alarm along the line, the tapping began again. It ran: "Everything all right. Goodby."

I signaled for him to repeat the message, and again came the words: "Everything all right. Goodby."

I held the instrument in my hand and debated with myself upon my course of conduct. I did not want to needlessly send the alarm along the line. On the other hand, why had Dick sent his first message? I touched the instrument and asked, "Is everything all right, Dick?" And the answer came back, "Everything is all right."

It did not seem at all like Dick's touch, but I laid it to nervousness and quieted my fears while I waited for the "runaway."

I recalled that Dick had told me over the wire the previous evening that the "runaway" would have a large sum of money aboard, which it was to transfer to the express at his station.

When the "runaway" came up, I notified the engineer that the express was waiting for him at Lakeville, and I also casually mentioned that the alarm had come from there, but that afterward I had received a message that all was well.

He seemed disturbed and advised me to repeat the story to the United States marshal aboard, which I did, with the result that the train pulled out of the station prepared for emergencies, though neither they nor I thought anything of the hasty message that had been flashed to me.

Ten minutes later the message came over the wires from Lakeville: "Found train in charge of highwaymen. Dick Ramsey murdered at instrument. Object was to rob the 'runaway,' but we overpowered them after a desperate struggle. Notify the stations along the line to send relief."

This, in brief, was the story of the death of Dick Ramsey, and after I had seen him laid away in the graveyard at Lakeville I packed up my goods and journeyed farther on, for I could not remain so near the scene of my old friend's death.

Well, strange things happen, and after I had found a position with the same company 30 miles away I was assigned back to Lakeville.

I found the village grown into a settlement of very fair size and the simple little station replaced by a very pretentious one, while the humble little churchyard where they had buried poor Dick Ramsey was gay with flowering shrubs, and spires of marble lifted themselves here and there among the trees. Dick's grave was still marked by the rude cross I had placed over it.

Well, in the duties of my new position I am afraid I forgot Dick, and for weeks at a time I never thought of the mound behind the church and the poor fellow who had come with me from home and whose joys and sorrows had been mine for so long.

In Dick's place at the instrument there sat an honest little chap, and assisting him was another lad, for the station at Lakeville now boasted half a dozen employees.

High above the station, on a bluff that commanded the finest view in town, was the home of the president of the company, a man who had fought his way up and who now boasted his millions.

The president was a tall, dark man, with stern features, but a kind heart, and often I watched him with envy as he alighted from his private car and entered the handsome victoria which carried him behind his spanking team up to his home on Lakeville heights.

Often the president did not go up to the city, and on these occasions he wired me on his private line, and I wired to the city for him.

One day, chancing to sit at the instrument, there came a call on the president's wire, and, responding, I received this message: "Let me know if the road is clear."

A minute later I called up his private wire and tapped, "The road is clear."

"All right," came back the answer.

It was a simple enough message, but it set my pulses throbbing. Mechanically I touched the button and repeated the message, "The road is clear," and immediately came back the words, "All right."

I sat at the instrument like a man in a dream, and my thoughts were with Dick, who had sat at the same spot five years before and had touched that same instrument. What was there in that reply that so fascinated me, or was it the anniversary of poor Dick's death that made me fanciful?

That afternoon the president came down to the station on business, and I looked at him closely. He must have seen me watching him, for he shifted his position uneasily and nervously handled the instrument. I may say that he was an expert operator and preferred telegraphing his messages to writing them.

As I watched him I remembered hearing the strange story of his rise; how from an operator on a distant road he had suddenly become a stockholder, a director and finally the president of the road, and how his wealth and holdings were known far and wide.

He seemed ill at ease that day, and I withdrew my eyes and busied myself elsewhere. But more than once he caught me looking at him.

Twice that day the president drove down to the station, and slowly he drove home again, as though he were disturbed about something. The third time he came it was almost dark, and I heard him send his coachman home, telling him that he would follow soon on foot.

For half an hour the president busied himself around the station, a most unusual thing for him, and when he finally took leave it was to walk hurriedly away in the direction of the churchyard, a journey which I often took myself.

Scarcely realizing what I was doing, I pulled my cap over my eyes and started after him. What excuse I would make if he turned and saw me I knew not. I only understood that some force was pulling me onward and that same force was taking me over the same road and in the very footprints of President Greydon of the Lakeville and Laska railway.

To my surprise, he turned the corner as he reached the church and, plodding his way past it, opened the gate which led into the churchyard and slowly wended his way among the graves. Noiselessly I followed him. Through the narrow paths we went, he the substance, I the shadow close after him.

But, horror of horrors, he stopped! And, my God, he bent over Dick Ramsey's grave! Lower and lower he sank until he was upon his knees and his hands were spread out upon the soil. In the uncertain light of the rising moon I could see that he threw back his head, that his face was drawn and deadly white and that his lips were moving.

I must have stepped upon a twig, for a sound betrayed me. Springing to his feet, he turned and faced me, not ten feet away.

With a cry of rage he sprang toward me. "So you followed me!" he cried fiercely between his teeth. "You dogged my steps!"

He was a powerful man, but in the struggle which followed I easily mastered him and had him pinioned, white and panting. "Do not add another murder," I said fiercely, "to that of Dick Ramsey."

"How do you know?" he whispered.

"I recognized your hand upon the wire. I was the agent at the next station when you—took Dick's place—you remember—five years ago—today!"

"Oh, God, yes!" he cried. "Shall I ever forget? When I had to come to this cursed place to live, I thought it might disappear after awhile. But it grows stronger every day. I live with it, see it, hear it—that poor fellow—all the time! Yet I had to do it or be killed. There was a gang of us. Oh, oh!" he cried, and, breaking down utterly, the proud president of the road buried his face in his hands.

It was a strange scene, we two there in the moonlight, accuser and accused, he trembling, I revengeful.

"I tried to lead a better life," he continued, "and on my gains I succeeded well. But, oh, the misery of these years! I thought tonight if I could see his grave and pray upon it I might be forgiven and have rest." His eyes sought the spot where poor Dick lay with crushed skull.

"What are you going to do?" I asked after we had stood there in silence.

"Give myself up now, I suppose," said he. "There is no other way."

The next day the whole country was ringing with the strange confession of President Greydon. He made a clean breast of it and was so manly and sincere in his repentance that nobody was sorry when his sentence was placed at a term of imprisonment instead of the death penalty, which is so summarily dealt out to criminals in the newest of the western towns.—Columbus Dispatch.

Timber Raft to Cross the Ocean.

A raft to contain 14,000 piles is now being constructed at Seattle, Wash., by a San Francisco firm, to be towed to Japan. When completed the raft will be 635 feet long, 53 feet in diameter and will contain 14,000,000 feet of lumber. Although rafts of this kind are frequently towed from the Puget Sound to San Francisco, it is feared in marine circles that the task of towing such a craft across the Pacific is somewhat risky.

Know How to Get Well.

Send No Money. Simply Ask For My Book.

Learn of my discovery — how to treat, not the organs themselves, but the nerves—the inside nerves—that operate them. Learn of my offer—a month's treatment at my risk.

Not free treatment, mind you, with nothing ever to pay. Such an offer would belittle the physician who made it.

But I believe in a sick one's honesty—his gratitude. That if he is helped he will pay the cost of my treatment—and gladly. When I fail, I ask not one penny. But failure is seldom. Over 600,000 sick ones have accepted this offer.

"Send me your name. I will arrange with a druggist near to you to let you have six bottles

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

Take it a month at my risk. If it succeeds health costs but $5.50. If it fails the druggist will bill the cost to me.

39 out of 40 in the past have paid for the medicine. Would they pay if it failed? Forget for a moment that this is a printed announcement. Consider me as a physician in your town and that I am saying to you—"be glad—be well; be rid of the dark days. I can help. And so sure am I, that I ask no fee—nothing—until you are benefited." Would you—would anyone—refuse?

True, I cannot well come to you. But you can come to me—by letter. Can tell me all about your case. I waste no time in driving nor with office hours. Every moment is effective. I treat, probably, a thousand cases where most physicians treat a hundred. And from this abundance of experience I have learned. For experience — more than all else—teaches a physician how to cure.

Will you write me to-day? It's natural to delay. To put off from day to day. To wait, perhaps when you should not. But why? Isn't my offer broad enough? Can you—can anyone—desire a fairer offer? You risk absolutely nothing. I risk all. Yet I am ready and willing to help you. Why wait? Why wrong yourself by doubting—by delay—by prejudice, perhaps?

Take up a pen—a pencil even—and write me a postal to-day. Know now how to get well.

OPERATIONS A FAD.

PUBLIC GRADUALLY AWAKENS TO THE FACT.

The latest fad in operations has been the appendicitis fad; before that the fad for rectal operations (piles, etc.) held sway. Hundreds of patients were frightened and hurried into hospitals, operated upon and robbed of their last dollar when the trouble was a simple case of hemorrhoids or piles only, easily cured at home with a simple remedy costing but 50c a box.

"I procured one 50c box of Pyramid Pile Cure of my druggist, with the intention of buying a larger box later, but was happily surprised when I found that I was cured, and still have six 'pyramids' left out of the first and only box. I have not had the least sign of piles since I used this one box, which has been about two months, previous to using Pyramid Pile Cure I had the worst kind of bleeding and protruding piles for over thirty-one years, and no one knows except those who have had the piles, the pain and misery I suffered.

"I am a poor man but have often said I would give a fortune, if I had it, to be cured of the piles, and now I have been cured for 50c. I should be very ungrateful if I did not thank you and give you every privilege to use my name and/this letter, when I know there are so many who suffer as I did."—J. A. Weismiller, 1100 Bladensburg Road, Washington, D.C.

TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

Doing good is the only certainly happy action of a man's life.

COLONIAL PREFERENCE

No Part of the Program Yet Says Colonial Secretary Lyttleton.

He Appeals to the Members of the Commons Not to Commit Themselves Upon the Question, Nor to Furnish Themselves Food For Regret By Excluding Wholly a Closer Link and Material Tie.

London, Feb. 12.—(C. A. P.)—Free Food Unionists held a private meeting in the committee room of the House of Commons yesterday under the presidency of the Duke of Devonshire. The attendance was forty, including several peers. An agreement was arrived at to await further speeches from the Treasury bench before coming to any resolution.

The Government's position was further complicated yesterday by the speech of Alfred Lyttleton in the House of Commons. Sir John Gorst ended his speech by declaring that he would oppose any attempt to establish a colonial preference or a general protective system.

Better Than Nothing.

Mr. Chaplin said the Government's policy of retaliation offered no prospect of the recovery of lost foreign markets nor of any new markets. Where could we look but to the colonies, who already gave us a preference over foreign countries? He had not heard a single reasonable objection against going to the colonies for new markets, which policy could be carried out by imposing a trifling corn duty. Retaliation was better than nothing, and he supported the Government.

Support Protectionists.

Prof. James Bryce asked Mr. Lyttleton whether the Government would fight protection candidates and cease to give aid to the protectionist party. Would they declare themselves opposed to the principle of a colonial preference which meant protection and taxes on food? Was the preference to be extended to colonial manufactured goods?

He declared that there was nothing the colonies cared for more than their fiscal freedom, and in every bargain made between them and the Motherland the question would be whether the bargain was not too good for us and too bad for them. The system of a commercial treaty on the plan of the Birmingham platform would retard federation.

Not Part of Program.

Mr. Lyttleton replied that the colonial preference was not a part at present of the Government program, but he begged the House not to commit itself against the colonial preference or shut the door against Mr. Chamberlain's splendid colonial ideal. (Cries of hear, hear.) "The future of colonial preference and details require further cautious discretion before being embarked," he said. "My predecessor endeavored to knit closer bonds between us and the colonies, and since I have been in the present office I have done everything to foster that sentiment and obtain greater co-operation in Imperial defence, mutual knowledge and Imperial counsel; and since we have got so much closer in our connection with the colonies by these means, will you not regret if you say that in the great sphere of commerce alone a closer link and material tie shall be wholly excluded?"

Canada Will Do More.

Canada was prepared to give more than a 33⅓ per cent. preference. South Africa had carried out proposals for a customs union with New Zealand, and passed a statute giving Great Britain a considerable preference, and the Australian Commonwealth favored Mr. Chamberlain's policy. He repudiated the attempts made to define the issue before the country as exclusively between protection and free trade. If the low duty of 5 per cent. imposed for revenue purposes were used to further the colonial preference, could that make it a protective duty?

In reply to Sir John Gorst, he declared the Government would support Unionist members who supported honestly the Ministerial fiscal program if they were advocates of the colonial preference.

The vote on Mr. Morley's amendment will be taken on Monday.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

Montreal, Feb. 11.—About 250 head of cattle, 30 calves, 10 sheep and 25 milch cows were offered for sale at the East End Abattoir to-day. A lot of cattle, calves and sheep which were loaded on the Grand Trunk cars at Huntingdon, 60 miles from the city, on Tuesday, did not reach the city in time for to-day's market. There were no prime beeves on the market today. A few large fat cows sold at 4¼c to 4½c per pound; ordinary mediums at 3¾c to 4¼c and the common stock at 2¾c to 3½c per pound. A lot of 16 small bulls were bought by canners at 2¼c per pound. Four good milch cows were sold for $200; other sales were made at from $25 to $45 each. Six good calves were sold at $8 each, or 5c per pound; common calves sold at 4c to 4½c per pound. Fat hogs have a downward tendency; good lots sold at 5¾c per pound.

TORTURING DISFIGURING

Skin, Scalp and Blood Humours

From Pimples to Scrofula From Infancy to Age

Speedily Cured by Cuticura When All Else Fails.

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in Eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurements, as in acne and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants, and anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter and salt rheum,—all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent are such stands proven beyond all doubt. No statement is made regarding them that is not justified by the strongest evidence. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy, have made them the standard skin cures, blood purifiers and humour remedies of the civilized world.

Bathe the affected parts with hot water and Cuticura Soap, to cleanse the surface of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle. Dry, without rubbing, and apply Cuticura Ointment freely, to allay itching, irritation and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and, lastly, take Cuticura Resolvent, to cool and cleanse the blood. This complete local and constitutional treatment affords instant relief, permits rest and sleep in the severest forms of eczema and other itching, burning and scaly humours of the skin, scalp and blood, and points to a speedy, permanent and economical cure when all else fails.

Cuticura Resolvent, liquid and in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Australia, R. Towns & Co., Sydney; Boston, 137 Columbus Ave. Potter Drug & Chemical Corp., Sole Proprietors.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

A long portage makes a heavy canoe.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes; "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Signed, JEAN VALCOURT,
Wotton, P.Q. General Merchant

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

The Flagging Energies Revived.—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be not relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These comes from stomachic troubles. The want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare powder, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression, and reviving the flagging energies.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints.

BAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

A GIFT OF 500 ACRES

Would be no temptation to Mr. Beemer in exchange for Dr. Agnew's Ointment. Itching Piles of seven years standing took to themselves wings after a few applications.

Mr. M. Beemer, of Knotnaul, Mich., says in a letter of recent date:—"I have had Itching Piles for seven years. I have tried most everything that was ever recommended as a cure but never got the least bit of relief until I used Dr. Agnew's Ointment, and I haven't words to express the thankfulness I feel for the great cure. I would rather have the wonderful cure than 500 acres of land." 81

Irrecoverable Waste.

The utilization of what formerly were considered waste products and the resurrection of materials from a used up state to a new condition of serviceableness have in recent times been developed to such a degree of completeness that we are scarcely prepared to admit that anything is ever irrecoverably lost. In this respect we believe in the conservation of material just as we have long been taught to believe in the law of conservation of energy. From a purely practical point of view, however, some things certainly may be so completely lost to further use that their loss may well be considered absolute, and one of these is the metal lost in the wear of railway rolling stock brasses. For the speculator in copper values, the promoter of a copper "corner," to use the broker's cant, the copper which has gone into railway brasses need have no terror. It is not likely ever to be available again in full measure. It is dissipated so completely, in part at least, that its practical recovery is not likely to receive much serious consideration. From the best available deductions on the subject it appears that 5 per cent of the annual copper production of the world disappears in this way every year.

Flat Wheels.

"Flat wheel," growled the old retired conductor as the trolley car in which he sat went thumping along at twelve miles an hour, shaking the passengers uncomfortably at every revolution of the wheels.

"What makes flat wheels?" asked the man sitting next to the conductor.

"Fools," said the conductor. "It's this way: If a man doesn't know how to stop his car he makes a flat wheel. On the steam roads some brakemen flatten a wheel every time they put on a brake. When the wheel suddenly stops revolving and the momentum of the train carries it along the wheel slides along the track, and a flat is started. Next stop makes it worse, and so it goes until the wheel is no good. If a brakeman knows his business he need never make a flat wheel unless he has to suddenly avoid an accident. If he keeps his wheels turning slowly they don't flatten. Now, these fellows on the trolleys take no care at all, and every other car in some places has a flat wheel."

The Khyengs' First Woman.

The Khyengs of Burma are probably the only race or tribe of people that have any tradition of the origin of the human race that do not have a man or male human being in some way connected with that important event. The Khyeng genesis opens in this wise: "In the beginning of the world, after the sun, moon and stars had appeared, the earth by its own inherent power of productiveness brought forth a female creature, which was called Hleeneu. She laid 100 eggs and hatched them in cotton wool, and from them sprang 100 human beings, the progenitors of the different races." The least that can be said of this curious belief is that it is a fine illustration of the multiple theory as applied to the origin of the human race.

Tools of the Ancients.

An investigator who lived during two years in a tomb at Gizeh collected evidence to prove that the tools used in working stone 4,000 years ago had jeweled cutting edges like modern tools. He says that the builders of the pyramids used solid and tubular tools, straight and circular saws and many other tools supposed to be modern. In some specimens of granite a drill had sunk one-tenth of an inch at each revolution, indicating that the pressure was at least two tons. Nothing is known of the material of the tools. As the diamond was scarce then, it is probable that corundum was used.

Two Expensive Banquets.

The costliest meal ever served, according to history, was a supper given by Ælius Verus, one of the most lavish of all the Romans of the latter days, to a dozen guests. The cost was 6,000 sestertia, which would amount to $242,500. A celebrated feast given by Vitellius, a Roman emperor of those days, to his brother Lucius cost a little more than $200,000. Suetonius says that the banquet consisted of 2,000 different dishes of fish and 7,000 different fowls besides other courses.

Shifting Eyes.

No matter of what color, beware of the eyes that have no desire to look you full in the face. There is something wrong behind the shifting, uneasy glance, and the owner of such optics will prove to be unworthy of trust. Read well the signs, for if actions speak louder than words eyes speak even louder than actions, and to be forewarned is to be forearmed.

Reversing the Adage.

They found the bride in tears.

"I cook pies and things that are something fierce, but George will not eat them," she sobbed miserably.

"Ah, you must first make him love you. The way to a man's stomach is through his heart," they said, for they were worldly wise.

Be Cheerful.

You find yourself refreshed by the presence of cheerful people; why not make earnest efforts to confer that pleasure on others? You will find that half the battle is gained if you will never allow yourself to say anything gloomy.

Getting Back at Him.

"I'm afraid," said the actor when a cabbage came within an inch of his nose, "that somebody in the audience has lost his head."

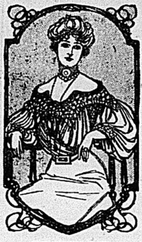
The selfish, loving only themselves, are loved by no one, so selfishness is moral suicide.—De Gaston.

STYLES OF THE MOMENT.

Loose Hanging Boleros—Ribbon and Taffeta Ruchings.

The three-quarter coat, according to the leading fashion authorities, is going out of style, and they are showing jaunty little jackets and blouses ending at the waist line and so designed as to simulate waists and give to the whole costume the air of a gown.

The wide, even the very wide, belt is a feature of nearly all the new dresses. So is the loose hanging bolero effect with wide three-quarter length sleeves which allow a glimpse of an inner blouse of mull and embroidery having exaggerated sleeve puffs of the same creamy material.



PINK CHIFFON WAIST.

Ribbon and taffeta ruchings of all widths are very smart on otherwise plain gowns. A net frock much admired on a debutante recently was trimmed with a cape arrangement over the shoulders edged with three rows of this narrow ruching. The skirt was likewise banded. Skirts, by the way, are becoming fuller and fuller, so that they hang in folds all around.

The ingenuity of the tailor is again shown in the manipulation of cloths for woman's use. English tweeds, Scotch and Irish friezes, etc., have a soft finish. The higher authorities in the sartorial world no longer care for the harsh makes of stuff except in the creation of the riding habit.

With elderly women chiffon velours and panne still continue the favorite evening fabrics, and indeed for day wear as well velvet of every possible make is used.

The cut shows a pink chiffon waist trimmed with venetian lace and narrow sable bands.

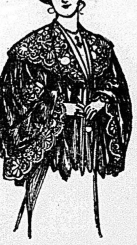
JUDIC CHOLLET.

FURS AND CHIFFONS.

Combinations of Expensive Skins and Rich Laces Are the Fashion.

Fur coats are now being made very fancy, and many of them boast expensive lace trimmings or wide lace sleeves which are plainly visible beneath the three-quarter length baggy open sleeves of fur. Sometimes also these fur coats have yoke pieces of rich lace.

Hip yokes are seen on very many tailor mades, and these retain the slenderness of the figure where it would ordinarily be lost sight of in the fullness of the rest of the skirt.



A NEW FUR BOLERO.

Gowns of black chiffon dotted here and there either with chenille or with net are very effective for evening wear.

Dinner blouses of chiffon are used with skirts that harmonize in shade for less dressy occasions, but these are seen mostly in black or in white.

There has been a determined effort to bring corduroy to the front for dressy street costumes, but this has not been a great success owing to the superiority of the lustrous chiffon velvets and pannes.

Velvet, velveteen and corduroy are the leading materials for the nursery folk. The belt is to form a very important item in the attire of the small people. For little boys up to six the Russian blouse will be the correct thing, in as wide a striped corduroy as may be obtained. The only difference as regards these garments from those of their sisters is the addition of leather trimmings, which form the collar, belt, side band and cuffs.

Ingenious Swindle in Curios.

The craze for antiques and curios is responsible for some ingenious swindles, but it is doubtful if many could surpass that which victimized an American woman traveling abroad who while in Holland purchased some alleged Dutch pottery which proved on close examination to be common granite ware made in America in odd shapes and decorated in Dutch fashion to be sold in Holland as antique cooking utensils.

American enterprise is frequently encountered in various ways in Europe, as, for instance, the experience of an American gentleman in London who bought a pair of rubber overshoes in a London shoe shop which were unusually satisfactory. On examining them preparatory to buying another pair he made the discovery that they were manufactured in Providence, R. I., by an American firm, although they were sold as English rubbers or "gums."

The fact is well known that there is a considerable industry in the manufacture of so called Egyptian scarabs in America which are sent to Egypt to be sold to unsuspecting tourists as genuine antiques.

Mistletoe and Holly.

Hanging rooms with holly wreaths and bunches of mistletoe is a time honored custom which can be traced to the days of the Roman saturnalia and even early Persian customs. Our own custom of decorating our rooms at Christmas comes more immediately from ancient Germany, where evergreens were hung in honor of the midwinter festival.

The Druids used to cut the mistletoe from their sacred oaks with elaborate ceremony. A golden knife was used to sever the parasite from the tree. During the ceremony two white bulls were sacrificed, and music and processional formed part of the rite. The groves of Mona, once the favorite retreat of the British Druids, were cut down by the all conquering Romans and have passed from the popular memory, but the mistletoe, which the old Druids called "all healing," is still an object of veneration. In some parts of England a berry is plucked from the mistletoe for every kiss that is given under it, and when there are no more berries left no more kisses are allowed.

About Heads.

The head of the true Rhinelander is wide at the temples. If the hat is the exact length in nine cases out of ten it has to be stretched sideways in order to make it fit. English heads are wide, but not so pronounced as those of Germans. There is more of a "sliding scale" with them as to the relative length and breadth. The Celtic head is almost invariably round or oval and is without pronounced phrenological bumps.

For general smoothness of the cranial protuberance the Italian comes next to the Celts, either of the two besting the classic Greeks in that respect. Odd as it may seem, anatomists declare that the Turkish skull is almost identical in shape, size, etc., with that of the enlightened inhabitant of the United States.

Rattan Comes From Singapore.

Strange as it may seem many people imagine that rattan and willow furniture are the same. Rattan is the Chinese importation, brought direct from Singapore, and is reed susceptible of bending double without even cracking. It possesses, besides this, great firmness and strength, and a chair of rattan could be thrown from an express train and picked up intact. Rattan is therefore used for such articles as baskets and lighter ornamental furniture. Each has its use, the rattan, however, being better adapted for working up into intricate designs.

Summer Ice.

The peasants of Pongibaud, in the mountains of Auvergne, are acquainted with a singular summer formation of ice, presumably due to evaporation of underground moisture and consequent fall in temperature. Of this phenomenon they have for many years taken advantage to cool and harden their cheeses, which are deposited in certain caverns where this ice is found to be present, and thus keep good during the hottest summer months.

The Cause of It.

"What's all this fuss about?" asked the policeman, stepping between the two young men.

The one that had got the worst of it and was wiping the blood from his nose pointed to the other fellow. "He can tell you her name if he wants to," he said. "I won't."

A Careful Student.

A good story is told in the London papers of an Oxford freshman who was asked early in the beginning of the term whether he had proved a certain proposition in Euclid. "Well, sir," he replied, "proved is a strong word. I rendered it highly probable."

The Doctor's Orders.

Postgraduate Course.

Mrs. Richmond—Is your daughter going back to the cooking school this year?

Mrs. Bronxborough—No; I'm going to keep her home until she learns to cook some dishes that we can afford to eat. —Judge.

The Fierce Caterpillar.

A more harmless, inoffensive creature does not crawl than the common garden caterpillar, yet this small worm will put up an appearance so fierce upon occasion as to frighten its enemies away. Soft and pulpy, with no defensive or offensive weapons, this destroyer of cabbages and lettuces will bluff itself into a veritable armored cruiser and frighten many more formidable insects into ungovernable flight. Its method of procedure is like this: Immediately anything approaches, the slow moving, fat caterpillar raises its hairy body, wags a formidable looking head and looks the essence of strength and defiance, so much so that it requires a bird of a particularly valiant disposition to attack it.

When Doctors Were Slaves.

Romans of means had physicians in their own houses. These men were slaves, for, odd as it seems, many Roman slaves were accomplished in literature, art and science. At one time the selling price of a slave doctor was about the equivalent of $300 in our money.

After the time of Julius Cæsar, who encouraged physicians, the art began to "lift its head" in Rome, and later men of character and position, though generally foreigners, entered the profession. Some of them accumulated large fortunes, and one made the equivalent of at least $500,000 in a few years.

To Lose Flesh.

To reduce the flesh one must have the fortitude to give up a number of the pleasant things of life, for a time at least, and many of them for good and all. One must, first of all, become an early riser and not sleep longer than seven hours. Before finishing the morning toilet exercise for twenty minutes with Indian clubs, dumbbells or wands. For breakfast take no cereal, coffee or milk, but tea, not too strong, fruit and toast. Sugar is a fat producer; so also are bread and all farinaceous dishes. Not more than half a glass of liquid should be taken at any meal. For luncheon partake of stewed or raw fruit, a salad dressed with vinegar and oil, green vegetables and a chop. For dinner the bill of fare can comprise fish, mutton, lamb, lean beef, vegetables, especially tomatoes and beans, stale bread and a light dessert.

A Real London Fog.

A recent example of London fog was the cause of some queer blunders. A Bayswater bus got nearly as far as Camden Town when the driver thought he was headed for Portland Station. Horses knew their way better.

A wagon drawn by two horses belonging to a firm of grocers in Coventry was left by the man in charge just outside Rugby, ten miles from their destination. The animals started off and were quickly lost to sight in the fog. They reached home without mishap, although the fog was so thick that objects could not be distinguished a few yards away. The driver, who had to find his way on foot, did not arrive until five hours later.

That Terrible Child.

The small son of a certain university professor, whose parents are deservedly popular for their tact and courteous speech, appeared at the home of a fellow professor and hesitatingly asked Mrs. —— if he might look at the parlor rug. Permission was of course granted, and Mrs. —— felt some surprise to see the little fellow stoop over the rug and stare silently for some half minute. He straightened himself up and, meeting her wondering expression, said triumphantly:

"It doesn't make me sick!"

Work For the Stomach.

For the average healthy man I think there is something to be said in favor of a good meal even if a trifle heavy now and then. I believe it is a fact that the human stomach, although it is not a gizzard, like that of a goose, still does its work better when slightly stretched, just as the lungs work better with deep inhalations induced by bodily exercise in the open air.—London Telegraph.

HOW IT SPREADS.

The first package of Hem-Roid (the infallible Pile cure) that was put out went to a small town in the State of Nebraska.

It made the cure of a case of Piles that was considered hopeless.

The news spread and although this was only two years ago the demand prompted Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, of Lincoln, Neb., the discoverer, to prepare it for general use. Now it is being sent to all parts of the world.

It will cure any case of Piles. There is a month's treatment in each box.

Sold for $1.00, with absolute guarantee.

It is for sale by druggists.

Sold in Belleville by J. S. McKeown.

Sarcastic.

In a volume of memoirs it is told that on the first council day after Lord Derby's elevation to the premiership Greville showed his disapproval by not appearing in his place as clerk. Some busybody asked Lord Derby whether he had noticed Greville's absence, and Lord Derby replied, with a face of benevolent apology: "No, really! You know, I am the most inattentive fellow in the world about these things. I never notice, when I ring the bell, whether John or Thomas answers it."

Boon Island.

Probably Boon island would be but little known outside of New Hampshire, Maine and Massachusetts if it were not for the fact that the island is the terminal of the Cape Ann trial course. Perhaps it would be more proper to call the island the northern terminal, but at any rate Boon island gains a mention in this way every time a new battleship or cruiser is tried off this coast, as all those not built on the Pacific always are.

Artists and Poets.

Artists and poets are like stars—they belong to no land. A strictly national painter or a strictly national poet is bound to be parochial, a kind of village pump. And you may write inscriptions all over him and build monuments above him, but he remains a pump by a local spring.

His Ideal.

Critic—Simply this: She does not dance, sing or play, but she can sharpen a lead pencil, drive a nail and keep a secret.

The Most Beautiful Eyes.

A Naples correspondent writes to the Paris Messenger: Have you ever heard the name of Lina Cavalieri? No. Eh bien, she was only a short time ago a music-hall singer, but such a lovely creature, that she attracted every eye, wherever she went; men threw themselves at her feet, and a Russian Prince would have married her, but she refused! Instead, she took to studying singing in earnest, with one of the most celebrated teachers of the day, and now she is creating a furore at San Carlo in "La Boheme." People have come from Rome to see and hear her, and all are surprised, for she really sings well and has great dramatic talent. It is not for her wondrous beauty alone, therefore, that she is applauded, encored, and called before the curtain.

She has the most beautiful eyes I ever saw in my life. There should be a great future in store for her!

A Chance for Investors.

The Cherry Creek Copper King Mines, Ltd., owns and operates the O.K. group of six mineral claims situated about four and a half miles south-west of Kamloops, B.C.

The property has exceptional advantages and is exceedingly valuable, and as the surface indications on this vein are identical with those at the workings on the Iron Mask, a property owned by the B.C. Exploring Syndicate, and adjoining it on the west. The following extracts from the Chairman's address to the shareholders at their general meeting held in London, Eng., on the 18th Sept. last, will give an idea as to the prospective value of the O.K. group:

"On the Iron Mask at Kamloops we have expended £26,000 and I think we may allow that this item is splendidly represented by the mine we have in process of development at Kamloops, and I believe you will credit us with having given you twenty shillings for every pound expended on that mine. * * * * *

"If it is true that we have as we believe we have, a practically unlimited body of 5 per cent. ore in our mine at the Iron Mask, then in the words of one of the most eminent smelting millionaires in America, whom I had the pleasure of meeting at Salt Lake City, 'You have got millions.' * * * * "Kamloops is an absolutely ideal position for the erection of a smelter and the working of a mine. The railway, the water, the fuel and the grade of the earth surface, and the self fluxing nature of the ore all seem about as desirable as they could be. * * *

These extracts are from an address by a hard-headed London financier to equally hard-headed business men, who are developing their property with a view to large profits, under the direction of an expert mining engineer.

Owing to the proximity of the mine to the railway, a short line of aerial tramway would be easy of construction and would enable the company to transport their ore to the railway at a cost not exceeding ten cents per ton. Freight and treatment charges for the class of ore obtained are exceedingly favorable and are quoted by the Trail and Granby smelters at $6.25 per ton, so that the entire cost of mining, freighting and smelting would not exceed $5.00 per ton. The ore is a high grade copper gold assaying from 10 per cent. to 24 per cent. copper and from $6 to $22 gold per ton, and is in great demand at the smelter owing to its fluxing qualities.

The near future will see the erection of a large copper smelting plant to treat the ores of this district, both the B.C. Exploring Syndicate and the Inland Smelter Company having already selected and purchased sites. The completion of these enterprises will insure the lowest possible rates for reduction of local ores. The company has secured a clear title to the property on the most favorable terms, the former owners showing their confidence in the mine by accepting the entire purchase price in fully paid up shares of the company.

After paying all the expenses in connection with the incorporation, the amounts due on options secured by the company and the purchase price of the O.K. group, there remains in the treasury two hundred thousand shares, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be applied to the development of the properties, now owned or to be hereafter acquired by the company. There is absolutely no promoters stock, and the issue advertised in another column is the first opportunity offered the public to invest in the shares of

Y. M. C. A. AUXILIARY BIRTHDAY PARTY.

PUZZLE—HOW MANY CENTS DID THE LADIES TAKE IN THEIR LITTLE BAGS?

For some time the Ladies' Auxiliary in connection with the Y.M.C.A. have been making preparations for their birthday party, which took place yesterday (Thursday) afternoon in their parlors.

The President, Mrs. W. W. Chown, occupied the chair.

A large number of ladies were present to celebrate their birthday, bringing a cent for each year in a dainty little bag provided for the occasion.

After the usual business had been attended to the following programme was carried out:

Vocal solo—Miss Watson.
Reading—"Work for Boys"—Mrs. S. S. Campbell.
Vocal solo—Miss Grills.
Reading—"Foreign Mission Work of Y.M.C.A."—Miss M. A. Northcote.
Duet—Mesdames Sprague and Nicholson.
Piano solo—Miss Moynes.

The monthly report of the Secretary, Mr. Wilkie, was most encouraging.

Refreshments were then served and a most enjoyable social hour was spent.

The success of the afternoon was largely due to the President, Mrs. Chown, who is untiring in her efforts to make this part of the work in connection with the Y.M.C.A. the success that it is.

The collection amounted to over $30.00.

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

Toronto Telegram: Some fair gazelle, who radiates about under the name of "Grace," and who is evidently a hockey crank, writes from Gravenhurst, Ont., asking if it is true that the members of the Belleville team are all deaf mutes. Well, no, they're not, in fact you would glean from hearing them on the ice that the Belleville team was an auxiliary from a boiler factory.

There was a T.V.L. game in Port Hope on Tuesday night, and this is the bouquet the Guide hands the teams:

"If last night's exhibition of hockey is a sample of Trent Valley League games, excuse us. It was a trip, slash and cross-check, anything to get the puck, and it kept Referee Geo. Brown busy throughout the entire match, putting offenders on the fence. Both teams indulged in this work, and what might have been a good game was turned into shinny."

The Toronto Star says a hockey player up there "trains on good strong smoking tobacco." That's better than cigarettes, anyhow.

There were exactly 125 paid admissions at the Brockville-Smith's Falls game in Brockville on Wednesday night. Another trip abroad and a game at home like that and the Brockville club would have been in Bradstreet's. It's pretty tough on the local club, just the same, who have had no game for two weeks now.

Toronto Telegram: Some good hockey is in sight, in the intermediate finals. Such teams as Stratford, Belleville and a few others put just as much science in their play as do the seniors, and play for every ounce in their make-up, too. Keep an eye on them.

Strike, of the former Picton intermediate team, is now in Montreal again, and has struck a job with his old team in that city.

Peterboro Review: When the "green" player gets out to indulge in a game of so-called hockey, as has been the case frequently this winter and gets winded before he has hit the puck twice, nearly kills himself every time he falls, can't shoot the puck within twenty feet of the goal, and feels like a cripple for the next two weeks after the conflict he feels in a far more sympathetic and appreciative frame of mind when he goes to see a regular hockey match any time afterwards.

Has the Review man been playing himself? It looks like it.

The local hockeyists have had a long rest, but, judging by appearances, they will be busy enough in the near future. On Monday evening next either the Marlboros or Georgetown will be here, the return match to be played on Wednesday. It looks as though the "Dukes" will visit us, as they have a lead of five goals over Georgetown, piled up, however, on the Mutual St. rink. It is just possible, you know, the lead may be pulled down by the Georgetown boys. We have a recollection of something of that kind happening the Marlboros once before.

Stratford intermediates must be strong. They shut the St. George's of Toronto out last night by 10 to 0. We pick Stratford and Belleville for the finals.

FANCY SKATING.

Small Audience at the Rink Last Night.

Owing to the severe cold weather and counter attractions the attendance at the skating rink last evening was not large. The exhibition of fancy and trick skating given by Miss Fannie and Mr. John Davidson gave satisfaction to the spectators. Both are clever artists, executing their various feats upon the ice with skill and grace. An interesting feat they perform together is the ice waltz, which for ease and grace seems almost to excel the drawing room dance. They have a perfect command of balance, the complicated whirls and spins are as easy to them as skating straight ahead. During the evening Mr. Davidson jumped with skates a height of 4 feet 2 inches, which feat was loudly applauded. The exhibition throughout was thoroughly enjoyed. The I.O.O.F. Band were in attendance, enlivening the proceedings with their sweet strains.

CATARRH OF THE HEAD

Is very common, but awfully dangerous, because it causes deafness and leads to consumption. Cure is as certain to follow the use of Catarrhozone as day is to follow night. You simply breathe the fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which spreads through the nasal passages, throat and lungs, driving out every vestige of catarrh. "I was cured of chronic catarrh of the nose and throat," writes Ernest M. Wilkinson, of Laurencoton, "after many years of misery by Catarrhozone, which is a splendid remedy to free the air passages from mucus. Catarrhozone relieved quickly and my cure has been permanent." Price $1 for two months' treatment; trial size 25c.

ANOTHER BIG FIRE IN PETERBOROUGH.

American Cereal Company's Works Burned This Morning — Loss About $150,000.

Employes Had Just Started Work When Fire Was Discovered—No Lives Lost.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Peterboro, Ont., Feb. 12. — Fire broke out in the sixth story of the American Cereal Company's mill shortly after 7 this morning, and for a time threatened the destruction of the entire plant.

Owing to the water in the river being extremely low, the firemen were practically helpless and unable to fight the flames until the engine was gotten to work, about 9 o'clock. By this time the whole upper storey was completely enveloped in flames, which burned fiercely.

The fire is still burning, but is under control.

In the upper storey there is a machine for hulling oats, which consists of two plates moving in opposite directions with a speed of 2000 revolutions per minute. This machine is supposed to have gotten out of plumb, causing friction and setting fire to the oat hulls, which exploded. It is difficult to estimate the loss, but conservative estimates place it at $150,000, the insurance being all carried by U. S. companies, chiefly Lloyd's.

About 700 employees will be temporarily thrown out of work by the fire.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE, DRAFTS AND NOTES.

MR. J. W. JOHNSON'S LUCID AND INSTRUCTIVE LECTURE AT THE Y.M.C.A.

Another large audience, that overflowed from the lecture room to the recreation room of the Y.M.C.A. showed the desire for that "knowledge which is power," which evidently possesses the young men and young ladies of Belleville, both those permanently resident here and those whom we are pleased to welcome in our midst during the months of attending at our various colleges. Mr. J. W. Johnson, F.C.A., principal of Ontario Business College, continued and rounded out the subject of his lecture of last week, and for more than an hour held the attention and filled the minds of his auditors with a very substantial and accurate resume of that portion of our wonderful commercial machinery which relates to negotiable paper and the various incidents thereof. Home and foreign bills of exchange and the various methods of accepting and endorsing, discounting and renewing the same were explained, and the principles and theories underlying all negotiable paper and the relationship and varying liabilities of the parties thereto were thoroughly discussed. An admirable point about the lecturer is that he will not leave his subject until he sees that his hearers thoroughly understand the business message he has to deliver, and he illustrates his points by actual examples drawn from the experience of himself, of bankers and of shippers. Mr. Johnson showed how draft counter balancing draft had facilitated trade and international commerce. Every bank clerk in the city should have heard him deal with the law and practise in connection with banking papers, cheques, bills of lading and letters of credit, and business men were given an insight into the "why and wherefore" of many apparently arbitrary customs and forms which are founded upon the wise custom of merchants, which has ripened into general law. The advantage of such lectures as that given last night and the others which have been given and are to be given in the admirable course of the Y.M.C.A. will be apparent when any thoughtful man asks himself as to whether he could pass a successful examination upon the topics just mentioned. A very interesting few minutes followed the lecture in connection with a vote of thanks, moved by Mr. Osborne, seconded by Colonel Ponton, who pointed out some of the difficulties which banks — those necessary factors in the prosperous life of a community—had to meet, and the far reaching results of war, such as that now begun in the East, upon contracts and the power to contract. The motion was carried enthusiastically, and the appreciation of the audience was gracefully expressed by the chairman of the evening, Mr. Wilkie.

A SERENELY HAPPY MAN

Is Mr. Thos. McGlashan, of North Pelham, who was cured of muscular rheumatism by Nerviline, the most powerful rheumatic remedy in the world. "I suffered all manner of pain for years," he writes, "and Nerviline was the only thing that did me any good. I can heartily recommend Nerviline for all forms of rheumatism; it goes to the very core of the pain and brings lasting relief. Let every sufferer from lame back, aching joints and swelled limbs use Nerviline. It's sure to cure and costs 25c for a large bottle.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

A DELIGHTFUL CONCERT.

The City Hall contained a large audience last night, who had gathered to listen to a concert by local talent, assisted by Mr. Paul Hahn, 'cellist, of Toronto, the entertainment being under the direction of Prof. Hunt. Perhaps it was partly owing to the fact that musical entertainments have been rare this winter that people appreciated the programme better, but it is quite certain that the concert was enjoyed, on the whole, more than any entertainment of a similar character has been for years. The names of two performers on the programme, who, though local people, were making their first local appearance in secular concert, added the zest of curiosity to the desire to be entertained. As before stated, it was a delightful evening, and there was not a weak number on the lengthy programme, the good things being fairly "pressed down and running over," quite usual, it may be remarked, in entertainments gotten up by that enthusiastic gentleman, Prof. Hunt.

The 'cello virtuoso, Mr. Paul Hahn, showed all the points but one of a great player—he lacks magnetism—but perhaps Mr. Hahn had a touch of the grip—that would play the deuce with anybody's magnetism. He has superb technique and method, and, can fairly be classed as an artist, though not yet a great artist. He played all sorts of music with equal facility, but seemed most at home in the Bruch number. As an encore on one occasion Mr. Hahn played "Robin Adair," his double stopping being productive of the most delightful harmony.

Mrs. A. G. Burrows, violinist, played in a charmingly sympathetic and finished manner. Seldom, indeed, does one hear a lady violinist who is possessed of the confident grasp displayed by Mrs. Burrows. She played the showy Musin Concert Mazurka in a manner which left nothing to be desired, and in all her work showed marked sympathy, excellent technique and method.

Miss Mabel Vermilyea, fair to gaze upon, sang De Koven's dainty song, "When Sylvia Saunters By," with charming archness and to the evident delight of the audience. Miss Vermilyea seems to improve with each successive appearance.

Miss Laura La Vole, pianist, played a Franz Liszt number in a highly finished way, displaying brilliant technique and a more than ordinarily smooth legato.

And last, but not least, Mr. Dan. A. Cameron, baritone vocalist, sang nine numbers, and in doing so sang himself into the hearts of all who had not heard him before. An excellent, pleasing and finished vocalist, with absolutely no nonsense about him, that's the way Mr. Cameron strikes one. He sang Schumann's "Two Grenadiers" in thrilling style, and showed that, besides being a good singer, he has sense enough to prefer a good old song to an indifferent new one. Every "popular" vocalist has not that much sense. Mr. Cameron's best number was probably Godard's "Berceuse," from "Jocelyn."

The duet by Miss Vermilyea and Mr. Cameron was highly enjoyable, as were also the instrumental trios by Mrs. Burrows, Messrs. Hahn and Hunt.

Prof. Hunt was a sympathetic and almost unobtrusive accompanist.

Taken altogether, the concert was one of the most delightful entertainments ever given in Belleville.

THE GREAT GROSSMITH.

George Grossmith has been giving his humorous and musical recitals in New York and Boston during the past week, and continues in Boston all this week. The New York papers speak in high terms of the amusing character of his new programme. His original German song appears to have pleased the musical critics greatly. Mr. Grossmith informed the audience that as he knew only six German words, which it had taken him six months to learn, he would sing a song in German. He then gave a mock lied, which he entitled "Ich Liebe Dich Hoch Helmer." At the Carman opera house Tuesday, Feb. 16.

MOVING PICTURES.

The Rochester Post Express has the following to say of the moving pictures to be exhibited at the Carman opera house Monday evening, Feb. 15: "A capacity house at the Baker theatre last evening enjoyed the best exhibition of moving pictures seen in this city for a long time in England's Moving Pictures, under the management of Wallace-Gilmore Co. A feature of the pictures was the illustrating of the arrival and unloading of one of our large circuses in a city, and the interior of the main tent with the performance at its height. Henry Roberts entertained with illustrated pictures and the entertainment was pleasing to everyone.

DEATH OF FREQUENT VISITOR TO THIS CITY.

MR. R. H. HOLLAND, OF MONTREAL, FATHER OF MRS. (REV.) W. B. HEENEY, PASSED AWAY YESTERDAY.

The death took place in Montreal yesterday morning, after an illness of only a week, of Mr. R. Henry Holland, late of the firm of Barnard and Holland, commission merchants and importers, of St. James street, who was a native of that city and a man well known in business circles.

The deceased was only taken ill last week, with a complication of ailments, which proved fatal, and his death is mourned by a large circle of relatives and friends.

Mr. Holland is survived by a widow, two married daughters, Mrs. J. W. Ross and Mrs. Heeney, wife of the Rev. Mr. Heeney, Rector of Christ Church, this city, and three sons, Mr. Newman Holland, of Boston; Mr. Richard Holland, Jr., of Montreal, and Mr. Rupert Holland, of Chicago. Also by his brothers, Mr. Alfred Holland, Mr. C. C. Holland, Mr. Fred Holland, and a sister, Mrs. T. J. Dawson.

The late Mr. Holland was a member of Dominion Square Methodist Church, and one of the trustees. He also took a great interest in the work of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Mrs. Heeney had been for some days at her father's bedside. Rev. Mr. Heeney went to Montreal this morning.

The Success of a Prescription

Depends upon the quality of drugs used. There is as much difference in drugs as there is in other goods. Drugs which have been gathered at the wrong season of the year, or that have stood on a shelf for several years are hardly the best kind to use in a prescription. Ainu Women.

When Ainu, especially Ainu women, meet after a separation that has lasted some time they have a pretty way of telling each other their experiences in a sort of chant, and in the pleasant sound of their singularly sweet voices one forgets their wild and unkempt looks. The Japanese women are equally remarkable for the sweetness of their voices, but have the advantage over their Ainu sisters of delicate and dainty ways, the charm of which the most stolid globe trotter is constrained to own. If the women of Ainu-moshiri, as the Ainu call their land, are the drudges of the men in their youth and middle age their opportunity for revenge comes with the lapse of years.

The curses of an angry old woman excite the utmost terror in the bravest bear hunter. He flies, panic struck, from such names as shunumaash (mangy deer), tontoneppo (bald pated boar) or, worst of all, rai-guru (corpse) or inao-sak-guru (godless fellow). After death her ghost is regarded with even deeper dread.

A Bird Friendship.

The rector of Woolstone, Mr. Gilbert Coventry, told me of a wild rock dove which one of his stable boys had reared from the nest. It slept in the open, however, and had full liberty. Soon the good things on the rector's table attracted it, and it would appear through the open window at mealtimes, take hot soup with much zest and even sip sherry from a wineglass. At night it often slipped in and slept in the rector's bed on its back under the coverlet. One Sunday morning during the reading of the lesson the dove flew swiftly through an open window into the church and settled on the rector's head. Broad smiles spread over the faces of the elders and audible titters came from the youngsters. A gentle touch sent the bird down to the edge of the clerk's desk below, where it sat undisturbed.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Art of Making Hay.

How and when men first learned to make hay will probably never be known, for haymaking is a "process," and the product is not simply sun dried grass, but grass which has been partly fermented, and is as much the work of men's hands as flour or cider. Probably its discovery was due to accident, but possibly man learned it from the pikas, the "calling hares" of the steppes, which cut and stack hay for the winter. That idea would fit in nicely with the theory that central Asia was the "home of the Aryan race" if we were still allowed to believe it, and haymaking is certainly an art mainly practiced in cold countries for winter forage.—London Spectator.

Myrtle.

The creeping plant we call myrtle is not a myrtle at all, but should be called by its proper name, periwinkle. Botanically it is Vinca minor. Long ago it used to be called "the ivy of the ground." Chaucer mentions it as "fresh pervincke, rich of hew." The large blue flowers are very pretty. In Tuscany it is known as "the death flower" on account of its being so often planted upon graves, a custom which is beginning to prevail in this country. There is a pretty variegated leaved variety and also a sport with white flowers not so pretty as the blue.

McINTOSH BROS.

MIKADO MAKES RED WAR

Japan's Army and Navy Commanded to Carry on Hostilities.

Aim of Japanese Was Pacific Progress and the Establishment of Such a State of Things as Would Maintain Enduring Peace in the Far East—Great Britain and the United States Make Proclamations of Neutrality.

Tokio, Feb. 12.—The existence of a state of war with Russia was formally announced by an Imperial proclamation. The following is the text of the Imperial rescript declaring war against Russia, which was issued in Japan Wednesday:

"We, by the grace of Heaven, Emperor of Japan, seated on the throne occupied by the same dynasty since time immemorial, hereby making proclamation to all our loyal and brave subjects, as first:

"We hereby declare war against Russia, and we command our army and navy to carry on hostilities against her, in obedience to their duty, with all their strength, and we also command all our competent authorities to make every effort, in pursuance of their duties, to attain the national aim with all the means within the limits of the law of nations.

Pacific Progress Aim of Empire.

"We have always deemed it essential in international relations, and have made it our constant aim, to promote the pacific progress of our Empire in civilization, to strengthen our friendly ties with other states and to establish a state of things which would maintain enduring peace in the Far East, and assure the future security of our dominion without injury to the rights or interests of other powers. Our competent authorities have also performed their duties in obedience to our will, so that our relations with all the powers had been steadily growing in cordiality. It was thus entirely against our expectation that we have unhappily come to open hostilities against Russia. The integrity of Corea is a matter of the gravest concern to this Empire, not only because of our traditional relations with that country; but, because the separate existence of Corea is essential to the safety of our realm.

Russia Disregarded Treaty.

"Nevertheless, Russia, in disregard to her solemn treaty pledges to China and her repeated assurances to other powers, is still in occupation of Manchuria, has consolidated and strengthened her hold in those provinces, and is bent upon their final annexation. And, since the absorption of Manchuria by Russia would render it impossible to maintain the integrity of China, and would, in addition, compel the abandonment of all hope of peace in the Far East, we were determined in those circumstances to settle the question by negotiations and to secure thereby permanent peace. With that object in view our competent authorities, by our orders, made proposals to Russia and frequent conferences were held during the last six months.

Russia's Delays Wanton.

"Russia, however, never met such proposals in a spirit of conciliation, but by wanton delays, put off a settlement of the serious questions, and by ostensibly advocating peace on one hand, while on the other extending her naval and military preparations sought to accomplish her own selfish designs.

"We cannot in the least admit Russia had from the first any serious and genuine desire for peace. She rejected the proposals of our Government. The guarantees for the future which we failed to secure by peaceful negotiations can now only be obtained by an appeal to arms.

"It is our earnest wish that by the loyalty and valor of our faithful subjects, peace soon may be permanently restored and the glory of our Empire preserved."

NEUTRALITY PROCLAIMED.

Great Britain Covers All the British Dominions With It.

London, Feb. 12.—King Edward, at a council held at Buckingham Palace yesterday afternoon, signed a proclamation declaring Great Britain's neutrality during the war between Russia and Japan.

The British proclamation of neutrality is a lengthy document on the usual lines, and covers all the British dominions.

Canadians to Remain Neutral.

Ottawa, Feb. 12.—An extra of The Canada Gazette was issued yesterday afternoon with a notice from the State Department notifying all Canadians to remain neutral and take no part for either side in the war between Japan and Russia, and stating that a proclamation to this effect will follow.

UNCLE SAM'S PROCLAMATION.

Enjoins Citizens of Republic to Neutralize in Russo-Jap War.

Washington, Feb. 12.—President Roosevelt yesterday issued a proclamation declaring the neutrality of the United States in the Russo-Japanese war. It sets out that under the neutrality law passed in 1818 the following acts are forbidden to be done:

Accepting a commission to serve either belligerent.

Enlisting in the service of either belligerent.

Hiring any person to enlist, or hiring any person to go beyond the jurisdiction of the United States to enlist or with intent to be forced into service; but the act is not to be construed to extend to a citizen of either belligerent, who, being transiently within the United States, shall, on board of any vessel of war of either belligerent, enlist or retain another subject of the same belligerent to enlist, if such vessel entered a United States port in time of peace.

Fitting out any vessel for the service of either belligerent, or issuing a commission for any ship to the intent that she may be so employed, or increasing the force of any ship of war.

From Feb. 15 to the end of the war no ship of war or privateer shall be permitted to make use of any port of the United States from which a vessel of either belligerent shall have departed until 24 hours from the departure of such vessels, and if any ship or privateer of either belligerent enters a port of the United States, it shall be required to put to sea within 24 hours, except in case of stress of weather or of her requiring provisions or repairs; and no such vessel shall be permitted to take in supplies except what is requisite for the sustenance of her crew and coal sufficient to carry her to the nearest port of her own country.

The proclamation declares that under the convention of 1854 the following principles were recognized:

That free ships make free goods—that is to say, that the effects or goods belonging to subjects or citizens of a power or state at war, are free from capture and confiscation when found on board of neutral vessels, with the exception of articles of contraband of war.

That property of neutrals on board an enemy's vessel is not subject to confiscation, unless the same be contraband of war.

Italy's Neutrality.

Rome, Feb. 12.—The Official Gazette to-day publishes the Italian statement of neutrality regarding the Russo-Japanese war.

LIBERAL BREAKS AWAY.

Can't Support Sir Wilfrid Because Protection Is Needed.

Montreal, Que., Feb. 12.—"I have supported Sir Wilfrid Laurier since 1896, but I now see that the Premier and his colleagues do not intend to adequately protect the Canadian industries. Therefore, I have come to the conclusion to throw in my lot with Mr. Bergeron, the protectionist candidate."

These words coming from a Liberal manufacturer, J. M. Fortier, will throw consternation amongst the Liberals of St. James' division. Mr. Fortier took the chair last evening at a great rally held in the east end in favor of Mr. Bergeron. He made a speech as well. He had supported Sir Wilfrid because he was a compatriot. He could do this no longer, and would in future look after his own interests as well as those of his employes and the people generally.

Hon. Wm. Paterson at Teeswater.

Teeswater, Feb. 12.—An enthusiastic meeting was held here last night in the interest of the Liberal candidate, A. W. Robb. D. Ferguson, Reeve, was in the chair. The meeting was addressed by Hon. William Paterson, Minister of Customs, Dr. McDonald, M.P., of Wingham; R. D. Cameron of Lucknow, and the Liberal candidate.

Mr. Borden in London.

London, Feb. 12.—R. L. Borden, Conservative leader, arrived here yesterday and was welcomed by leading members of the party. He was entertained at the London Club and a large meeting was afterwards held at the Conservative Club rooms.

THE BUDGET DEBATE.

Chance For Orators Who Didn't Have a Speech on the Address.

Toronto, Feb. 12.—The budget debate goes on. A session of the Legislature was held last night, so that the array of speaking talent who had arguments prepared might give them to the House and an anxious province before the week-end rest. The program is that several who wanted to speak on the debate on the address and who did not get the chance will be heard this time, and it is likely that the two Government days next week will be wholly taken up with set addresses. Those who spoke yesterday were Pense of Kingston, Kidd of Carleton, Hislop of East Huron, Barr of Dufferin and Stock of South Perth.

Mr. Hendrie of Hamilton moved the adjournment. The speakers in order on Tuesday next are expected to be Russell, Dunlop, Sam. Clarke, Powell and Pettypiece.

BIG ROBBERY.

Mail Bag From Ottawa Opened Near Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Feb. 12.—Another big mail robbery has just occurred, and the authorities are at their wit's ends to locate the culprits. On the mail car that reached this city on Sunday evening was a bag sent from Ottawa, containing hundreds of checks and valuables. The checks were for the civil servants, principally in the Territories. Evidences were discovered that prove that the bag was tampered with east of Winnipeg. The authorities decline to give any information as to the extent of the loss or who is suspected.

O'Neil Sent For Trial.

Toronto, Feb. 12.—Michael J. O'Neil was committed for trial yesterday on the charge of accepting a bribe to "fix" the coroner's jury. T. C. Robinette appeared for him and urged that as the affair grew out of a remark by O'Neil to Walker, which arrayed the force and wiles of the Attorney-General's Department against his client, to get a case. Detective Rogers deserved indictment, too. The sleuth said his instructions were that O'Neil was looking for a bribe and for him to catch him.

Premier Defeated in Old Riding.

Cape Town, Cape Colony, Feb. 12.—Sir John Gordon Sprigg, the Premier, has been defeated in the Parliamentary election at East London, which he had represented for nearly thirty years.

NO MAN OR WOMAN CAN HAVE DYSPEPSIA

And Still be Agreeable, Attractive and Popular—A Certain Cure in Reach of All.

There is nothing that will put you to the front so rapidly in business or social world as a cheerful disposition and a pleasant appearance. Other things being equal people will go out of their way to give the fellow a lift who always wears a cheerful countenance. The man or woman with a cranky disposition and a sour face will always meet with an indifferent if not a chilly reception. The commercial traveller, who is the recognized business barometer, appreciates better than anyone the value of this rule and governs his actions accordingly.

Dyspepsia destroys all the agreeable qualities that enter into a man or woman's make-up. It is almost a human impossibility for anyone with a severe case of dyspepsia to look pleasant. The continuous, miserable, cast-down feeling is bound to make itself shown in the appearance and conversation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the sufferer's certain cure. They are so recognized all over the world. The cures they have brought about and the happiness they have caused and the suffering they have relieved has made their name a house-hold word in all the English speaking world.

The reason that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a certain cure is that they are a natural cure. There is nothing to prevent them curing. They contain the essential ingredients of the digestive fluids of the stomach and simply do the identical work of the stomach, relieving that weakened organ and permitting it to rest and recuperate. Could anything be more simple or natural? They are bound to cure. They cannot help themselves. It is just like putting a new stomach into a man — if that were possible—and letting the old one go off on a vacation. Rest is what it needs. Nature will do her own work of restoration, never fear.

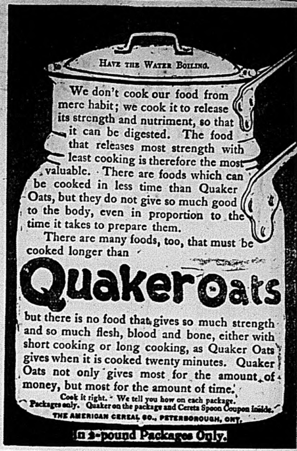
All druggists means all druggists. They have become so necessary to the people that the druggist simply has to keep them anyway. There are other remedies that he can make much more money on if he could sell them, but he can't. He will not take chances on losing his customers by not always having on hand a supply of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.



HAVE THE WATER BOILING.

We don't cook our food from mere habit; we cook it to release its strength and nutriment, so that it can be digested. The food that releases most strength with least cooking is therefore the most valuable. There are foods which can be cooked in less time than Quaker Oats, but they do not give so much good to the body, even in proportion to the time it takes to prepare them.

There are many foods, too, that must be cooked longer than

but there is no food that gives so much strength and so much flesh, blood and bone, either with short cooking or long cooking, as Quaker Oats gives when it is cooked twenty minutes. Quaker Oats not only gives most for the amount of money, but most for the amount of time.

FIRE AT PETERBORO.

Employes of Cereal Mills Escaped Death By Fire Through Chutes.

Peterboro, Feb. 13.—About 6.30 yesterday morning a fire started in the immense mills of the American Cereal Company here, and before it could be controlled damage to the extent of $100,000 was done. Spontaneous combustion in the dust accumulation in the sixth storey of the building started the fire. Some of the employes who were working near narrowly escaped being burned to death, a number of them having their clothes burned, and only escaped by sliding through chutes to the raged furiously. The company has lower floors. The fire for four hours employed at present about 450 hands, the majority of whom will be thrown out of employment while the rehabilitation of the plant is being carried on.

Nine Months For Bigamy.

Windsor, Feb. 13.—Joseph Cedar of this city was yesterday sentenced to nine months in the Central Prison, on a charge of bigamy. Cedar married two Windsor girls—Nellie Bastien and Cerrie Westbrooke—in eight months. Cedar is a simple, illiterate fellow, and did not realize the enormity of his crime, pleading that as his first marriage was unhappy, he thought himself at liberty to wed again to have a home.

Will Stand Loss Alone.

Baltimore, Feb. 13.—No call will be made for outside assistance to relieve the distressed situation induced by the fire. If it is found necessary later the municipality will float a loan to meet all needs.

WILL GREAT BRITAIN BE DRAWN INTO IT?

Uncle Sam Annoyed Because of Manchuria Reservation.

Col. Lawley's Mission to Canada—Two Hours' Interview With Minister of Agriculture—Studying Situation With Respect to Remounts—Black Sea Complications Feared—What Can the Elba Do With Her Russians?

St. Petersburg, Feb. 13.—Russia is evidently not prepared at this time to give an answer to the United States to Secretary Hay's note on the subject of neutrality of China. As previously stated in these despatches hostilities have begun, the military authorities must be consulted, and the Czar doubtless will refer the matter to Viceroy Alexieff if he has not already done so. Russia has already learned of the position taken by several powers regarding Secretary Hay's note.

Germany and Great Britain, it is understood, both express sympathy with its purpose, but with an important reservation concerning Manchuria, which is now the theatre of war. Germany's views in this respect were anticipated, but Great Britain's failure to give Secretary Hay unqualified support has caused surprise here.

Col. Lawley's Mission to Canada.

Ottawa, Feb. 13.—Is Great Britain making preparations for eventualities in the Far East? This construction is placed upon the visit to Canada of Col. Lawley, who is on a mission for the War Office. The Colonel's mission had to do with the purchase of horses. He does not say so himself. On the contrary, he asserts that he is merely here to study the situation in Canada with respect to remounts for the Imperial army.

When it was suggested that the War Office was preparing for possible trouble in the near future the Colonel hastened to assure the reporter that there was nothing in that. Nevertheless, the opinion prevails that the War Office does not intend to be caught napping as in the case of the South African war. Col. Lawley, who is staying with the Governor-General, had a two-hours' interview with the Minister of Agriculture yesterday morning. Afterwards Dr. Rutherford, chief veterinary inspector, was called in. The Hon. Mr. Fisher was asked subsequently whether there was anything for publication, but said the interview had reference to a War Office matter which he did not feel disposed to make public. Col. Lawley states that he will make a tour of Canada.

Fear Black Sea Complications.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 13.—The report that Russia is negotiating for permission to bring her Black Sea fleet through the Dardanelles cannot be confirmed here. In diplomatic circles, while it is not believed, the Porte would offer objections to this, the impression is that such an attempt would precipitate grave complications with the powers signatory to the Dardanelles convention.

What Can He Do?

Rome, Feb. 13.—The Government has received a message from the commander of the Italian cruiser Elba, which is at Chemulpo, Corea, saying that several Russian sailors from the warship sunk there by the Japanese in the recent engagement took refuge aboard the Elba, where they were kindly received. The commander says further that he cannot deliver these men to the Japanese because they would be made prisoners, and that he cannot return them to Russia, as this action might be interpreted as a breach of neutrality.

Answers of the Powers.

Washington, Feb. 13.—"To Russia and Japan the Washington Government suggests the propriety of limiting hostilities within as small an area as possible and of respecting the neutrality and administrative entity of China, that China may be free from disturbances and foreign interests there from menace."

Great Britain was heard from, expressing adherence to the principle laid down in the note, but withholding formal acceptance pending an answer to an enquiry whether the "administrative entity" of China involved Manchuria.

Japan was heard from quickly with the answer that she would act readily on the suggestion of the United States if a similar promise could be obtained from Russia.

Italy, Austro-Hungary and the Netherlands expressed sympathy with the plea, and promised an answer after consulting with other powers. There is reason to believe that Spain and Belgium will accept the invitation. Russia thus far has been silent, and the attitude of France is one of hesitation.

This was the situation last night. Meantime it is learned that Germany is addressing the combatants with a note in substance the same as that of Secretary Hay.

Sweden Fears Complications.

Berlin, Feb. 13.—Count Tombe, the Swedish Minister here, has had several conferences with Baron von Richtrefen. It is understood the Swedes fear Anglo-Russian complications and foresee the possibility of England seizing the Baltic Island of Gosland, as a coaling base, which the Swedes would surrender after a show of resistance. Then Russia would declare Sweden had violated neutrality. King Oscar may postpone his projected trip to Abbazia, and the mobilization of the Swedish army is not impossible.

Hill's Beef to Be Seized.

New York, Feb. 13.—Several hundred tons of beef on the American steamship Corea, owned by James J. Hill's, and which sailed from Honolulu on February 8th, for the Russian port of Vladivostock, will be seized by the Japanese as contraband of war. This is a matter vitally affecting this country.

Carried Coffin 4 Miles By Hand.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 13.—The funeral of M. K. Michaelovsky, the celebrated critic and publisher, who died Feb. 10, took place here yesterday and was one of the largest that has been seen in St. Petersburg in many years. The church where the services were held could not be approached because of the dense crowd surrounding it, and fully 5,000 persons walked to the Bolkoy Cemetery, four miles away, singing funeral dirges. The coffin was borne by hand the entire distance.

Holds Strike Benefit Illegal.

Boston, Feb. 13.—A temporary injunction against the International Pressmen's and Assistants' Union was issued yesterday. The defendants are restrained from bringing on a sympathetic strike among pressmen in the prevailing contest of the job compositors against members of the United Typothea of America, in this city, for a new wage schedule. The court also ruled that the compositors unions must not pay strike benefits to those who already have left for other reasons than their own benefit, holding that such a step would be illegal. This order, stopping the strike benefit, is said to be without precedent in the state, if not in the country.

To Buy Lincoln's Birthplace.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 13.—In the House yesterday a bill was introduced appropriating $11,000 for the purchase of the old Lincoln Homestead, the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln, and for converting it into a public park.

Now Col. Fisher.

Brockville, Feb. 13.—A. A. Fisher was Thursday night chosen lieutenant-colonel of the 41st Battalion, succeeding Lieut.-Col. Sparham. Captain John Power was appointed major.

Brother's Gruesome Find.

Toronto, Feb. 13.—The body of Francis Niblett, aged 63, of 14 Foxley street, was discovered by his brother, James, hanging from a beam in the woodshed, in rear of the house. When found the body was quite cold, and had apparently been there for several hours. The legs were touching the ground. Deceased lived alone and was in comfortable circumstances, but suffered from despondency since the death of his wife, a few months ago. Coroner McConnell is investigating.

Found Dynamite Hidden.

Liverpool, Feb. 13.—The customs officials yesterday morning found 18 pounds of dynamite and 3,000 detonators in the possession of an Austrian emigrant on board the White Star Line steamer Majestic.

The Austrian's trunk had a false bottom, in which the dynamite was concealed. The man, who gave the name of Ivan Sjnbeanoje, was arrested and remanded until Feb. 20.

Blind Woman Burned to Death.

St. Catharines, Feb. 13.—A fatal accident occurred yesterday morning at the home of Stephen Anstee, section foreman on the N. St. C. and T. Ry., the victim being Miss Jane Stewart, sister of Mrs. Anstee. Her clothing became ignited from the stove, and she was so badly burned that she died during the afternoon. She was blind.

M. Borden at Watford.

Watford, Feb. 13.—About 1,000 people heard R. L. Borden yesterday. The audience was about evenly divided, Liberals and Conservatives. On the platform with him were Col. Beattie, of London, James Clancy, M.P., John Farrell and Dr. Gibson, president of the association.

By Acclamation.

Quebec, Feb. 13.—Nominations for the House of Commons took place in Kamouraska yesterday. Mr. Lapointe, Liberal, a barrister of Fraserville, was elected by acclamation.

UNIVERSAL BIBLE SUNDAY ON MARCH 6.

The arrangements for the observance of Bible Sunday on March 6—the last day of the British and Foreign Bible Society's century—are now practically complete, and in nothing is the universality of the Bible Society more emphasized than in the remarkable way it has been able to enlist the sympathies of all Protestant churches in the organization of this world-wide thanksgiving.

Considering the controversial trend of the times, it would have been sufficiently noteworthy to arouse comment had the united demonstration been limited to the various christian communions in our own land. But its unique feature is the drawing together of the churches of other lands, no less than those of our own, in one great celebration, all minor differences of race, language and sect being submerged in the great bond of our common heritage—the charter of salvation as contained in the Word of God.

In England, their Majesties, King Edward VII and Queen Alexandra, will be present at divine service at St. Paul's Cathedral on Bible Sunday, when the Lord Mayor, the Sheriffs and the Corporation will attend in State. The sermon will be preached by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Among the earliest to endorse the suggestion that March 6th should be observed as Bible Sunday were the Archbishops of Canterbury and York; while the Bishops have, with hardly an exception, written letters commending it to the clergy in their respective dioceses. Cordial resolutions in favor of the observance have also been received from every nonconformist assembly and conference which met last year, including the Baptists, the Congregationalists, the Society of Friends, all denominations of Methodists, the Moravians, and the Presbyterians. In Scotland, both the Established Church and the United Free Church are co-operating in the celebration.

In the British colonies the idea was greeted with universal approval. The Metropolitan of Rupert's Land and Primate of all Canada, the Archbishop of Sydney, the Archbishop of the West Indies, and the Archbishop of Capetown, and nearly fifty Colonial and Missionary Bishops of the Anglican Communion, have written cordially endorsing the observance of Bible Sunday. The chief representatives of non-Episcopal churches in the colonies have responded with equal readiness, and the proposal has received the hearty sanction of the Synod of the Dutch Reformed Church in South Africa.

In the United States of America both the chief Presbyterian Churches, the two Methodist Episcopal Churches and the presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church have cordially agreed to observe Bible Sunday in their various churches throughout the States.

All the great missionary societies without exception, have joined hands to observe this day of common thanksgiving, many of them having generously arranged to forego their own sermons or meetings on March 6th, in favor of Bible Sunday. That the suggestion would meet with enthusiastic support in the mission field throughout the world was a foregone conclusion. Both to the missionary and to the native church, God's Book often stands for more than we can possibly realize. To the preacher, cut off from most that is helpful and invigorating in the Christian life, the written word takes on an added worth as a source of strength and inspiration; while to the converts, the book itself—even apart from its message—acquires a preciousness from the fact it is frequently the first, and sometimes the only, volume produced in their own language.

But the most significant item in this huge programme is the bringing into line of the Protestant churches on the continent of Europe, and establishing a link between those that may be most widely sundered on minor points. Bible Sunday will be kept by hundreds of congratulations, representing Lutheran, Reformed, and Waldensian churches. The Archbishop of Upsala has written, in the name of the Bishops of Sweden, promising the co-operation of all their clergy. A meeting of the Danish Bishops in Copenhagen passed an unanimous resolution in the same terms; while similar resolutions have been passed by the Consistory of the Protestant State Church in Saxony, and the Conventus of both the Lutheran Church and the Calvinistic Church in Hungary. Thus, throughout the world, thanksgiving will be made to Almighty God in all tongues and by all people on this memorable day.

It is obvious that such a festival as this could only be organized by an institution absolutely catholic in its aims, world-wide in its work, and unrestricted by any merely national interest. From the very outset the Bible Society has been able to unify Christians of all denominations in the God-appointed task of seeking to place the Gospel in the hands of the whole human race. And this universal thanksgiving exemplifies most forcibly one of the Society's ideals which was voiced by Lord Bexley, its second President, in the following words: "If we cannot reconcile all opinions, let us unite all hearts."

It is to be hoped that the Bible Sunday idea, which has been very favorably received in all other places, will be equally so in Belleville.

MOVING PICTURES ON MONDAY.

The Rochester Democrat and Chronicle has this to say of the great English moving pictures, which appear at the opera house on Monday night, with Tuesday matinee: "A crowd that filled gallery, balcony, and the lower floor of the Baker Theatre last night found much to amuse and interest in the exhibition of England's moving pictures. A reproduction of one of the big circuses under canvas, that are a familiar feature of summer life, is shown from the time that the first "razor back" drives a stake in the lot until the "big top" is up and the performance going on. Every detail of the moving pictures are clearly brought out and the result is highly satisfactory to those witnessing them."

GROSSMITH AS A SPELLBINDER.

When Mr. George Grossmith made his last appearance in Toronto, Canada, an incident occurred showing the hold he secures over his audience. The Toronto Globe relates it:

"In his sketch, 'Somebodies and Nobodies,' he was delineating a peculiarity of college students, and addressing the imaginary student, asked him to bring up a chair to the piano. Upon his repeating the request, a tall, middle-aged gentleman in the second or third row from the front rose and was going to do his best to oblige Mr. Grossmith, when a near-by friend induced him to sit down. The audience, had, however, 'caught on,' and the laughter was so general that the entertainer had to stop, and he leaned over the piano to enjoy the joke himself."

Our Glasses are always "becoming" to the wearer, for we make it our business to have them so.

CHAPTER I.

THE MAN WITH THE STRANGE EYES.

Being more or less of a dutiful son it is with no little compunction that I begin this narrative, for it nearly concerns my father, and I fear he will come none too well out of the ordeal. Yet what I have to relate is so remarkable that for its singularity alone I may hope to be pardoned any lack of filial piety. And perhaps, when all is said and done, my father, though he may not cut an irreproachable figure, may appear not quite a contemptible one. It must not be forgotten that I only knew the wreck of him; the stout ship that had battled with so many tempests in so many seas was to me practically unknown. Yet, from what I have since heard, there was a time when the name of Captain Bob Kingston was respected in very strange company—when his mere entrance into a public place caused men to nudge each other and whisper low, when from Hakodate down to the Torres strait his name was common property. But that was long ago, long before the Terror had seized him.

My personal knowledge of him up to my seventeenth year was extremely slight, for, with rare intervals, he spent the whole of that period at sea. Sometimes he was away for two or three years together, and once he staid abroad for five years at a stretch. To me his absence meant little or nothing. Had it not been for my mother's talk of him I should have forgotten his very existence. To my imagination he seemed almost a myth, a sort of Flying Dutchman, who was forever battling with stormy seas. But to her, of course, he was still the man to whom she had plighted her troth, and often had I caught her poring over her album, in which were at least a dozen portraits of him. And though at first I did not know what her hasty closing of the book meant, I have still a vivid recollection of her great, sad eyes as she turned them up to me—eyes full of a pitiful, inquiring pathos. Sometimes I thought the scrutiny satisfied her, at others she turned away with a sigh which I failed to read. Perhaps in those days I did not try very hard—for what has a boy to do with the inner thoughts of women?—but it all comes back now, and I read the meaning of those looks as I would a written page.

But, boy as I was, I soon knew that his long absences preyed upon her mind. Never once did I hear her murmur a word against him, and whenever she spoke of him it was always with a glowing satisfaction, just as one sees a face light up at the resurrection of a pleasant memory. But it was a faroff memory and one charged with ineffable sadness.

It was mainly through my Uncle Jim, my mother's brother, that I first learned to suspect my father of not being the best of husbands. But when I broached the subject to her she declared quite angrily that it would become Uncle Jim better if he were to mind his own business. And yet this I know he continued to believe was his business, for he loved his sister very dearly, and so that he might be near her he had lately taken a cottage on the Maidenhead road, a little the other side of Slough.

We lived between Slough and Windsor, a bit back from the road that branches off to Datchett. Here father had brought my mother shortly after their marriage, and there I was born. There I lived during the whole of my young life, and it was there my father spent the few weeks he could spare from the sea. I have but slight recollection of him at that time, for on the occasion of his last visit to us I was only 8 years old. I know he brought mother some laces and silks and me some queer eastern toys—dolls from Japan, idols and the like from Burma and Siam and a wonderful kite from China which was the envy and admiration of every boy in the neighborhood. Then I thought my mother's face changed, and she looked young and pretty again. Not that she could ever have been anything but pretty with her wonderful brown eyes, her masses of black hair and her soft, sweet face, but I suppose the inward happiness heightened the effect of the mere physical beauty.

Then came the parting, and for days before a melancholy fell upon the house, while for days after she would move about like one in a dream.

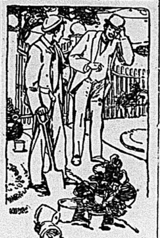
At first the letters came with commendable regularity, and with a glad face she used to read extracts to me. Now he was in Japan, now in Java and now at Thursday island. It seems he had a boat of his own and used to trade between the China seas and the northern coasts of Australia. That he was a shrewd business man as well as a capable sailor I had no doubt, for, though we did not live in luxury, we had never a monetary trouble. No, it was not the want of money that gradually paled my mother's cheek and gave her that wistful, faroff look; it was not for money that she watched the postman come down the road week in and week out.

As the years slipped on the letters came at rarer intervals. Once we did not hear from him for ten months, and then it was only a short note to say that he had just returned from a long voyage in the Pacific and that he was about to undertake a mission in the interior of China. We were not to expect to hear from him for a long time, and sure enough he kept us waiting for 18 months. Then came a letter inclosing a draft for a very large sum of money and the intimation that we might hope to see him shortly. But his next communication, received some months later, informed us that he had changed his mind and that he was about to set out on a voyage to Fiji. Then at varied intervals came short notes from the most unexpected places. He seemed to have become a man with no fixed trading route, but bobbed about hither and thither, a victim to a most fantastical caprice. Uncle Jim growled. He saw the gray sorrow saddening his sister's face.

And so the long months ran into years—long months for her who watched, but for me months of youth and health and general contentment. I went to a capital school, at which it was rumored that I succeeded famously with my studies, but I regret to say that I grew so accustomed to the sad faced woman who watched the postman go by morning and evening that I failed to notice those signs which an older eye would surely have observed. Moreover, pale or not, she was just the sweetest, dearest woman in the world.

About this time we saw a lot of my Uncle Jim, and I think I lavished on him all that love which should have been given to my father. He was my mother's only brother and in his soft, kind way was as like her as it was possible for a man to be like a woman. He had reached the age of 40 and was still a bachelor, a love trouble in early life having caused him to eschew the sex. Mother told me all about it one day, and, loving her brother as she did, you may be sure she did not spare the girl who had trifled with his affections. It was the old, old story. The girl threw him over and married a brewer. Jim hated beer ever after and tried hard to persuade himself that he loathed the sex.

I never exactly knew what he was beyond the fact that, like many thousands of his countrymen, he was "in the city." I rather imagine he had something to do with promoting companies, he used to talk so much about directors, prospectuses and that sort of thing, and I have seen him laugh heartily as he read out the names on the front page of a prospectus and grin consumedly at the gullibility of the public. All the same, I am inclined to think that he had done his share of the gulling and that the smart dogcart he drove and the hunter he rode had come out of the capacious pocket of the public. Be this as it may, he had been wise in his time and retired before Nemesis overtook him. He used proudly to proclaim that he had bidden adieu to all worry and strife and that the future opened before him a long, smiling vista in which there was no shadow of a cloud. He foresaw nothing but a peaceful, uneventful life. He thanked heaven that he had no wife to worry him, no selfish children to darken his few remaining years. That is what the professed cynic used to say, what he hoped for, no doubt, but what he was not fated to enjoy. Sundry incidents were about to happen which would knock all the smiling self complacency out of Mr. James Davie and plunge him into a very sea of trouble.



I noticed that he had strange, dark eyes.

For fully seven years I had not seen my father in the flesh, and I was now a big boy of 15, somewhat tall for my age, but giving promise of doing well in the future. And it was in this year that my troubles began, and I remember now, as distinctly as though it had only happened yesterday, that first meeting with the yellow man.

I was home for the holidays at the time and was doing a little work in our front garden when I heard the gate click. Looking up, I saw a man slowly push it open, carefully close it and then, with a very deferential air, advance toward me. As he raised his hat to speak I noticed that he had coal black hair, that his skin was very dark and foreign looking and that he had strange, dark eyes.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "does Captain Kingston live here?"

Though the English was remarkably pure, there was just a suspicion of foreign intonation in his voice.

"Yes," said I.

"And is the captain at home?"

"No, sir; he is in China."

The strange eyes peered up from under the strange lids, lids of which the skin seemed to be drawn up in the corners in some peculiar manner. I noticed that the man had scarcely any eyebrows and no eyelashes.

"That is very strange," he said. "I thought he would have been home long before this."

He seemed to doubt me somewhat, though he did it in a quiet way with which I could not quarrel. After all, the man would naturally be a little disappointed. It is poor fun to travel a good 20 miles to see a man and then not find him at home. And yet where could he have seen my father and how did he know he was coming home?

The man, looking at me very hard, said, "Pardon me, but are you Captain Kingston's son?"

"Yes, sir."

"His only son?"

"His only child."

"You are not much like your father."

"You know him well then?"

"Very intimately. Indeed, we were great friends in Australia."

"But you are not an Australian?" I knew well he wasn't, but his nationality puzzled me, and I hoped that he might vouchsafe the information.

"No, but I sometimes have business there."

He regarded me intently, measuring me from head to foot, his strange eyes seeming to take in every particular of my face and dress. And this he did without speaking, a proceeding with which I was not at all pleased, which, moreover, was beginning to render me extremely uncomfortable.

"I am sorry my father is not here," I said, "but if you will leave your name I will tell my mother to mention you the next time she writes."

"You have no idea when your father will return?"

"None," I said shortly, a little annoyed at the way he ignored the suggestion that he should tell me his name.

"Ah, that's a pity! Perhaps your mother knows?"

"That is scarcely possible."

"Is she in?"

"I think so."

In fact, I knew so, but the man's questioning was not at all to my liking, and I felt suspicious, I hardly knew why. But he seemed to ignore my restraint and with a calm survey of the garden and the house remarked that we had a very pretty place, and he wondered why Captain Kingston preferred to roam so much abroad. That, I was nearly saying, was my father's business, but at that moment my mother appeared at the door and called to me.

I at once advanced toward her, the stranger following.

"This gentleman has just called to see father," I explained, pointing to the stranger, who raised his hat and bowed very low.

Nerve Force restored

HOW IT'S DONE.

It's from the stomach the blood is fed and the nerves controlled.

Undigested food ferments for lack of gastric juice. The fermentation and putrefaction in the stomach and alimentary canal are the main causes of disease.

It upsets the nerves.

It poisons the system.

Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill increases the necessary supply of gastric juice in quantity and quality to insure perfect stomach action. It has similar action on bile formation. Anyone can prove this for himself by addressing WILSON-FYLE Co., Niagara Falls, Ont., for free sample.

My mother honored him with an uncommonly sharp scrutiny, and then I thought her lips tightened and she grew a shade paler.

"I am sorry to say Captain Kingston is still abroad," she answered, and her voice was cold and distant and startlingly unlike her usual tone.

"I regret it exceedingly," said the man. "I expected to find him here."

She did not answer, but stared at him in a way which I failed utterly to comprehend. So I chipped in with:

"This gentleman met father in Australia."

"Australia!" she echoed, her eyes growing wider.

I may have been mistaken, but I thought the echo was more like a gasp.

"Yes," he said, a curiously familiar smile playing round the corners of his mouth. "We were good friends out there. He gave me his address when he knew I was coming to England. I quite understood from what he said that he would have arrived by this."

He spoke easily and with the same meaning smile, but his strange eyes played all over my mother, and I saw how deeply they affected her.

"I am sorry," she said hastily, giving me the impression of a woman exceedingly embarrassed, and backing toward the door at the same time. "Who shall I say called?"

"Oh, it is immaterial," he replied. "I am sure to meet him when he returns."

With that he raised his hat once more, bowed very politely in a distinctly foreign fashion and sauntered down the pathway.

My mother and I immediately entered the house and shut the door. That done, she sprang through the hall into the dining room and across to the window, I at her heels. The stranger had just shut the gate and was taking a final survey of the house. Seeing us, he raised his hat once more, smiled and then disappeared down the road.

CHAPTER II.

THE SIGN OF THE HIDDEN MEANING.

For a full five minutes after the man had disappeared she stood stock still against the window peering intently through the curtain. Then she threw herself back into the nearest armchair, with a sigh, and as I looked at her I saw that she was very pale and evidently greatly agitated.

"Why, you are going to faint," I said. "What is the matter with you?"

"Nothing, nothing," she gasped. Then: "Davie, Davie, has he gone?"

"Of course," I answered, "long ago. Why?"

But she seemed plunged in thought and did not answer. Presently she looked up at me and said, "Did I betray myself?"

I had to admit that she had acted in a way that was strange to her. It was the first time I had ever seen any one come to our door who had been treated with such scant courtesy. Usually the most hospitable of women, she seemed suddenly to have lost that polite consideration for others which I had always associated with her. And the more surprising was it in this instance, as the man came as a friend of her husband. Upon my mentioning this she suddenly burst out with: "But he is no friend, Davie. Be sure of that."

Surprised, I questioned her, and after some hesitation she drew a letter from her breast and favored me with a curious, confiding look.

"This letter I received from your father this morning," she said. "Read it and tell me what you think of it. You are big enough now to understand."

Her looks and her manner of speaking impressed me so strangely that it was with a feeling of trepidation I began a perusal of the letter. It bore neither address nor date, but the stamp on the envelope showed it had been posted in Ballarat. What he, a sailor man, was doing at that inland town of Australia he did not explain. And, truth to tell, so strange a man was he that a letter from him dated from the north pole or the mountains of the moon would have astonished us but little.

An Ideal Preparation.

Everybody knows that Cod Liver Oil and Iron are the greatest system builders known to medical science.

Nearly everybody knows, too, that most people, especially those who most need building up, find it very difficult, sometimes impossible, to take and digest Cod Liver Oil and Iron. This difficulty has been entirely removed by the introduction of which combines the Oil and Iron, together with just sufficient Phosphorus, in an emulsion pleasant to take and so easy to assimilate that Infants like it and digest it without difficulty.

FERROL

After expressing regret at his unavoidable absence and telling in no uncertain language the intense longing he had to behold his wife and child once more, he became mystic, vague and hinted at certain misfortunes which dogged the steps of the most deserving, from which I gathered he and fate were not on the best of terms. Then from vague generalities he descended to particulars and informed us that he had quarreled with some former friends who had become his bitterest enemies and who had sworn to be revenged on him. He did not fear them himself, but he begged my mother to treat with suspicion any one who said he came from him. After warning her in words which I but vaguely understood he concluded: "Guard yourself well until I come. It will not be long now, as I have finished my last voyage. Be careful whom you entertain, with whom you travel. Suspect your own shadow."

This was sufficiently vague to be alarming. As I handed the letter back to her I saw more clearly the fear in her face, but the questioning look she gave me remained unanswered. What could I say; what advice could a boy of 15 give? To be sure it was plain enough that my father had made enemies, but I had no doubt whatever that he was capable of taking care of himself. How his quarrel could personally affect me or my mother I was at a loss to comprehend. Therefore I returned her inquiring look with one equally uncompromising.

"Perhaps you can understand now why the sudden appearance of this stranger upset me. What if he is your father's enemy, what if he is seeking to do him an injury? Heaven knows," she continued, "what it all means, but your father would not write in this strain unless the matter was one of the utmost importance."

And yet I cannot say that I was unduly impressed, for a few ideas began to buzz confusedly in my brain, and I tried to grasp them and set them in proper order. With this end in view I took up my hat and went out, hoping that I might have another glimpse of the man. My mother made me promise that I would not go off the road, a promise to which I laughingly assented, but I followed the road right into Slough and round to the railway station, yet never saw a sign of the man with the strange eyes.

If I were to say that my father's warning made me very frightened I fear I should hardly be confining myself to the truth. I think my mother's serious face caused me the greater alarm. Once away from it the warning did not seem fraught with much significance, or, if it were, I could not grasp it. Uncle Jim would probably be over that afternoon. We should hear what he had to say. Jim was a man of nerve and practical common sense and as such always knocked the bottom out of my silly, sentimental fancies.

As I returned along the road I saw his well known trap standing before our gate, the big bay stamping impatiently and tossing the flies from his ears. High up on the driver's cushion sat Saunders, the boy, a diminutive rascal with a wizen face. He greeted me with a formal salute and an extensive grin and favored me with the superfluous bit of information that the guv'nor was up at the 'ouse. Then, after asking him sundry questions concerning his rats, his dogs and the chase generally, I turned to open the gate, when I was attracted by something which I saw on one of the posts.

At first I thought that the village urchins had, in accordance with their usual custom, been endeavoring to deface our paint, and mentally expressing the pious wish that I had only caught them at the game I stepped up closer to inspect their handiwork. The gate and the posts were grained so as to represent a light oak, and as the work had only been completed some three months previously I was exceedingly proud of its smart appearance. To my surprise, however, I found that the destroyers had confined themselves to one particular design. This was an elliptical or egg shaped ring drawn with a red pencil. The design was very accurate, the steadiness of the lines proclaiming the adept. That it was meant for an egg there could be no doubt. A little filling in would have made the drawing perfect.

Afraid to attempt a cleansing of the post for fear of making a smudge, I turned toward the house, meaning later on to obliterate the mark with a wet cloth; but as I entered the hall I heard the voice of my Uncle Jim in the adjacent sitting room, and I forthwith forgot all about the sign.

At the time of which I write my uncle was a man just verging on to 40, a well set up, powerful creature, with a good natured face, rather inclined to ruddiness. He was a man who seemed to enjoy every hour of his life, and I don't believe I ever saw him when his blue eyes had not a merry twinkle in them. Therefore the serious look with which he now greeted me was just a little disconcerting. My mother's troubled face also added a chilliness to the reception.

"Well, Davie, lad," said he, "what is all this that has been troubling your mother?"

I told him all I knew, repeating word for word that which had passed between me and the stranger.

"I have heard as much," said he, when I had finished, "and upon my word I can't see any cause for this uneasiness. Your mother has got a fright, my boy, and nothing I can say will convince her of her folly."

"You may call it folly if you like," she replied, "and I wish I could think so, but I feel sure my husband would not have written in this strain without good cause."

Jim shook his head. Out of respect to her feelings he did not say what was on the tip of his tongue. He had not his sister's admiration for my father.

"A man who can leave his wife and child for seven years is capable of writing anything," he growled.

"Ah, but you don't understand," she replied. "You don't know the dangers and vicissitudes of a seafaring life. If he has not come, you may be sure it was for very good reasons."

"Humph!" grunted Jim, but perhaps even he loved her all the better for her loyalty. No doubt it was foolish, but it is that foolishness which endears women to us. I thought she looked her best and her prettiest just then, and if Jim hadn't been there to poke fun at me I would have given her a good kiss.

"Still," said he as he slowly began to fill his pipe, "I consider vague, terrifying scrawls no excuse for such an absence, and if I were you I should try to think that they were written after—I mean under—much mental depression, the result of a systematic squaring of the elbow."

She shook her head.

"I believe it to be nothing of the kind. Do you imagine that the coming of this stranger right on the top of Bob's letter was all a matter of chance? No; he knew my husband was leaving Australia, and he meant to see him. For what reason? Ah, let me know that and I shall know everything. But, tell me, does it not strike you as being very curious that I should receive Bob's letter on the very day that the stranger arrives here?"

"Well, no. The man could easily have come in the same ship as the letter. Probably he was to meet Bob in London and, disappointed in not finding him there, came on here."

"But don't you see if Bob came in the ship with that letter he would not be here yet (unless he came overland from Brindisi) for another eight or nine days. I do not hesitate to say that the last thing he would think of would be to come overland, but those who do not know him so well might reasonably suspect otherwise."

"Well?" said Jim, his blue eyes looking more puzzled than ever.

"Well," said my mother slowly and very impressively, I thought, "what I make out of it is this: That man did not come by the ship which brought the letter from Australia; otherwise he would have known that Bob was not here. But he believed him to be on the ship and, speculating on the chances of his coming overland, gave him time to get home."

"But why should he believe that Bob was on the ship and of what importance was it whether he was or not?"

A MOTHER'S PRAISE.

"From the time my baby was born," says Mrs. Robt. Price, of Combermere, Ont., "he was always sickly and costive until I began giving him Baby's Own Tablets. He is now well, strong and growing nicely, and I can hardly say how thankful I am for my baby's cure." In every home where there are young children this medicine should always be kept on hand. The troubles of little one come when least expected, and a dose of the tablets promptly given may save a precious little life. Baby's Own Tablets cure all the minor ills of little ones, and an occasional dose will prevent sickness. They are guaranteed to contain no opiate or harmful drug. The tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or sent post paid at 25c a box by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WANT CLEAN DECLARATION

Unionist Free Traders Make Determined Effort to Get It—Premier's Policy to Be Read Monday.

London, Feb. 13.—(C.A.P.)—The Duke of Devonshire, addressing the secretary of the Liberal-Unionist Association, says that grave misunderstanding exists between himself and Mr. Chamberlain respecting the suggestions made by the Duke regarding the conditions for the continuation of the association.

To remove any misunderstanding on Mr. Chamberlain's return the Unionist free traders made a determined attempt yesterday in the House of Commons to obtain a clear declaration of the fiscal policy of the Government. Sir Edgar Vincent, Hon. F. W. Lambton and E. W. Beckitt, M.P.'s, all delivered strong free trade speeches. Sir Edward Vincent wanted to know whether the policy of retaliation the Government proposed was a clear definite issue in itself or merely one instalment of a large and more extensive policy to come.

The assuring speech of Right Hon. Gerald Balfour had been largely impaired by other speeches from the treasury bench. The fact of the Government losing 25 bye-elections out of 26 showed that the people would not sanction the taxation of food. England owed her prosperity to unrestricted free trade. Was the Conservative party prepared to go into the wilderness for 20 years in hope that the electorate would in the end be induced to accept protectionist principles? Hon. F. W. Lambton declared he would vote for John Morley's amendment, because in his opinion the Premier's policy of retaliation was a mere preliminary to the destruction of free trade.

Ernest Beckett, speaking on behalf of bankers, said that not a single banker had been captured by Mr. Chamberlain for his sitting committee of political blacksmiths who were engaged in forging fetters for British industry. Retaliation was on the lips of the Government, but protection was in their hearts. He would not vote for the Government.

Henry E. Duke, M. P., said the rank and file of the Conservative party went breast high for Mr. Chamberlain, in whose policy lay more than the interests of party—indeed the necessities for the future of the Empire. It was a national misfortune that Mr. Ritchie, when Chancellor of the Exchequer, refused to use the corn duty in order to give Canada the small preference she had long been asking for. The constant cry of the colonies had been to try preferential trade. Canada had given us a preference, although it had cost her considerable. It has been a relief to hear Mr. Lyttelton's speech that the Government had not repented.

Right Hon. A. Akers-Douglas, Home Secretary, will on Monday read a statement of the policy of the Premier. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman will then speak in opposition.

TIMELY TOPICS.

SOME VALENTINES.

To-morrow being St. Valentine's day, we are compelled to publish our usual valentines a day ahead of time:

To the Mayor.

This awful winter, we firmly declare
Was not caused by our having a prohibition Mayor.

To the Council.

Many miles of new sidewalks, that sounds grand,
But what about the water on Zwick's island?

To the Chairman of Executive.

On other committees you've been all right
Now try to make the tax rate light.

To the Chairman of Gas.

The price of gas we hope, D. V.,
To see reduced considerably.

To the Chairman of Pub. Works.

Behold! The Melancholy Dane
Keeps watchful eye on street and drain.

To the Chairman of Light.

Now, Donald, man, keep your eye peeled bright
And see that we get our dues in light.

To the Chairman of Fire.

After many years spent in the A.L.I.,
You should keep on the firemen a watchful eye

To the Chairman of Water.

Tell those who dread to use its that
Drinking city water has made you fat.

To the Chairman of Industries.

If a couple of new factories you can secure
We'll build you a fine big monument, sure.

To the Chairman of Parks.

Look after your old friend, E. Magrath,
Say, how do you stand on the public bath?

To the Market Chairman.

Some time we'd like—now, don't get a shock—
A little more light in the city clock.

To the Board of Trade.

Wake up, dear friends, immediately
Or Rip Van Winkles you soon will be.

To the Vocalists.

Sing loud, sing soft, sing high or low,
But shun the awful vibrato.

To the Girls.

Let Cupid bring a message of cheer
Remember this is glad leap year.

To the Doctors.

They're friends in need, you can't give 'em the slip
Call in the doctor when you get the grip.

To the Hockey Men.

Stick to it, boys, and we'll venture to say
The intermediate championship will come this way.

To the Grits.

Knock off the Barnacles on your ship
Or your finish is coming at a Lou Dillon clip.

To the Tories.

Borden and Whitney, clever and strong
Will win by right and not by wrong.

To the Japs.

Good luck attend the Mikado's men
May they wallop the Bear back into his den.

To the Russians.

May your hopes of conquest be rudely dashed
And the present year see you soundly thrashed.

To Sir M. B.

Good luck to our own K.C.M.G.,
Now over the water in Gay Paree.

To the Weather Man.

A break in the weather is here bespoke
Before the coal men have all of us broke.

HUMOR

MAKING IT EASY FOR HER.

An Experiment In Domestic Economy That Failed.

"There can be no doubt about it; she's a treasure."

Witherby folded up his napkin with that air of satisfaction that a man has when he has just finished a good dinner.

"I hope," he continued, "that you can keep her. A cook like that ought to be jollied along at any sacrifice."

"That's what troubles me," said Mrs. Witherby. "She certainly is fine, and I hardly dare look at her or say a word to her for fear she will get up and leave. I am so afraid"—

She did not finish the sentence, but looked anxiously into the distance.

"Of what?" asked Witherby. "You don't mean to say that there are any preliminary signs of her going, do you?"

"Well," replied Mrs. Witherby, "not exactly that. But you know, my dear, the work we have in this house is not easy. Every cook we have had has complained of it. I am almost afraid she will think it too much."

Witherby puffed his cigar somewhat concernedly. He had dined well and felt correspondingly munificent.

"This," he said, "is no time for foolish economy. We've got a good cook, and in these days they are as scarce as hens' teeth. Keep her by all means. Make it as easy for her as you can. Your peace of mind and my stomach are both worth something. Get some one to help her if you want to."

"That's what I was thinking of," said Mrs. Witherby. "You see, she has all the washing and ironing to do, besides cleaning up the dining room. I'll get some one to come in once a week and do this for her. Then I am sure she will be perfectly contented."

"Good!" said Witherby. "Just the thing. I can now look forward to a life of true ease."

One week later as Witherby came home from his business by some subtle instinct that husbands acquire he knew merely by looking at the outside of his house that something was up. He entered and made his way rapidly to the kitchen, where his wife was bending over the stove, with a very red face and a careless air.

"Has she gone?" said Witherby. "Has the finest cook we ever had left us?"

"She has," said Mrs. Witherby, her tears mingling with the chicken broth.

"What was the matter? What excuse did she give?"

"She said," replied Mrs. Witherby feebly, "that she had too little to do."—Philadelphia Ledger.

His Fatal Oversight.

With a steely glitter in her eye the young woman met him at the door.

"Mr. Spoonamore," she said, "did you send me this poem?"

Hereupon she handed him a sheet of tinted paper containing some lines beginning thus:

Beautiful one, with eyes so blue,
Oh, how my fond heart longs for you!
Sweet maiden, listen to me now,
Hear once again my ardent vow!

"Why, yes, Miss Birdie," he stammered. "I—I wrote it. Is anything the"—

"Your 'ardent vow!'" she exclaimed contemptuously. "Read the first letters of those four lines downward, and you will see what your vow and your poetry amount to, Mr. Spoonamore!"

He glanced at the lines again.

Then, with a wild cry, he rushed forth into the night.

"Curses on my fatal gift of poesy!" he howled. "I ought to have edited the stuff before I sent it in!"—Chicago Tribune.

Why Terence Grieved.

The miser was dying. Through a long life he had lived for one purpose only—to amass wealth—and now he lay dying, attended only by his lifelong retainer, Terence.

"My one regret is that I cannot take my fortune with me into the next world," he sighed.

"Sure, it's too bad, son," acquiesced Terence, "for ye do have money to burn!"—Princeton Tiger.

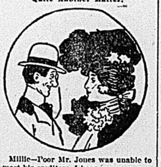
The Boston Girl.

Kitty—I believe you think just as much of Minnie Hawha as you do of me.

George—Why, I actually abominate her.

Kitty—George, you are such a dear.—Boston Transcript.

Quite Another Matter.



Millie—Poor Mr. Jones was unable to meet his creditors, I hear.

Jack—Oh, no; that's quite wrong. His difficulty was to dodge 'em.

A Case In Point.

"I wonder what is meant by the statement that 'nature equalizes things?'"

"Well, if nature endows a woman with small feet it gives her a big head."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Rheumatism

Ought to be called by its right name—Kidney Disease. Uric Acid gets in the blood, because the Kidneys are too weak to filter it out. "Blood purifiers"—"salts"—only relieve temporarily. Strengthen the kidneys to do their work, and there will be no more excruciating rheumatic pains. And until you do cure the kidneys you will suffer with Rheumatism.

GIN PILLS

cure Uric Acid Rheumatism by curing the Kidneys. They clean and purify the Kidneys—make them strong enough to do nature's work as it should be done.

We have such implicit confidence in the remarkable virtues of GIN PILLS that we authorize druggists to refund the money if they fail to cure.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

A long portage makes a heavy canoe.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes; "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given [illegible] for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Signed, JEAN VALCOURT

The Flagging Energies Revived.—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be not relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These come from stomachic troubles. The want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare power, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression and reviving the flagging energies.

Mrs. Ellen Butler, 37 Collahie Street, Toronto, suffered so from Indigestion that for years to put a bit of solid food in her stomach meant agony for hours. The Way of Whistler.

His manservant entered the studio. "Well?" said Whistler. "Lady Somebody, sir," said the servant (she was one of the great ladies of the British peerage). "Where is she?" "In her carriage at the door, sir." Whistler took no further notice of his servitor, but resumed the reading of his proof sheets to me, and the puzzled footman, who was standing behind his master's back and facing me, shook his head slowly up and down and, like Longfellow's Arabs, "silently stole away." Thus the reading went on for quite ten minutes longer, and the reader's sole auditor fidgeted more and more till, realizing how deadly cold it was on that March day, I called out to him, "I beg your pardon, Mr. Whistler, but I think I overheard your servant telling you that a lady was waiting to see you." "Oh," said he, "let her wait; let her wait! I'm mobbed with these people!" Then he went on reading for fully fifteen minutes more, and after that (his voice was getting tired, I dare say) he condescended to go downstairs and receive her shivering ladyship.—F. Keppel in The Reader.

Swearing Spoils Horses.

The horse does not like a nervous, fidgety, fussy or irritable man. He is too nervous and irritable himself, says Country Life In America.

"Why is it," one teamster was heard to ask another, "that Phin's horses are always gaunt? Phin feeds well." "Yes," was the reply, "but he's like a wasp around a horse."

A well known owner of race horses, not at all a sentimental person, recently made an order forbidding his employees to talk in loud tones or to swear in the stable. "I have never yet seen a good mannered horse," he says, "that was being sworn at all the time. It hurts the feelings of a sensitive horse, and I'll keep my word good to discharge any man in my employ if I catch him swearing within the hearing of any horse in this stable."

Brides Priced.

To us it seems a curious whim on the part of our ancestors of the eighteenth century that in their marriage announcements they should so often choose and with such seeming complacency to enlighten the world with regard to the amount of fortune received with the brides. Here are two cases in point: "Mr. James Coutts of Jeffry's Sq., merchant, to Miss Peagrum of Knightsbridge, £30,000." "W. Smith, gentleman, of the 2d Troop of Horse Guards, to Mrs. Ann Gardiner, a maiden lady, aged, 'tis said, near 70, with a fortune of £20,000."

Webster's Tiresome Habit.

Senator Hoar in his "Reminiscences" says that Daniel Webster had a tiresome habit in his public speeches of groping after the most suitable word after this fashion: "Why is it, Mr. Chairman, that there has gathered, congregated; this great number of inhabitants, dwellers, here; that these roads, avenues, routes of travel, highways, converge, meet, come together here?" When the speech was printed all the synonyms but the best one would be left out.

The Streets of Amsterdam.

Amsterdam, in Holland, a city of ten miles in circumference, is mostly built on piles driven into the sandy subsoil, but the flowing of the tide and the debris of the Amstel river have made ninety islands, and the city has more canals than streets. The watery ways are traversed by over 300 bridges, so that Amsterdam has earned the designation of the Venice of the North.

The Woman Must Speak.

Mr. Skrap—There's just this about it. It is impossible for us to live together and not quarrel.

Mrs. Skrap—There is no possibility of our quarreling if neither of us speaks.

Mr. Skrap—Of course; but, as I say, it isn't possible for us to live together and not quarrel.—Philadelphia Press.

His Problematic Tour.

"Did you ever appear in a problem play?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes. "Last season I was doing sums with hotel bills, time tables and box office statements all the time I was out."

A Matter of Opinion.

"Pardon me, sir, but isn't there another artist in this building?"

"Well, that is a matter of opinion. There is another fellow who paints."

A Little Mixed.

Patient—Look here, doctor. I'm not going to starve to death for the sake of living a little longer.

Moslem and Paper.

A Moslem in the east will never pass or trample under foot a scrap of paper lest thereon might be written the name of Allah. He will pick it up and stuff it into the crevice of a wall or even carry it for days until he finds out from somebody who can read whether it contains the holy name.

The Cardiff Giant.

The Cardiff giant, the famous stone man hoax of years ago, was 10 feet 2½ inches in length, had a nose 6 inches long, a mouth 4 inches wide and a foot 15½ inches from toe to heel.

Dog Exercisers.

There are people in London who earn quite respectable livings solely by exercising dogs, and some of those who so live are ladies. In every suburb and in every London park these exercisers of dogs may be seen each day, and one gentleman alone pays 15 shillings a week for the walking out of his valuable bulldog.

FOR EVENING WEAR.

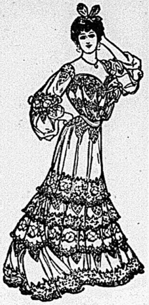
Gowns, and Wraps and How They Are Made.

Combinations of white chiffon and black lace or even of white lace and of black lace make handsome and effective evening gowns.

While elbow sleeves are still used, they are immensely full and frilly at the elbow, and a good way of renovating an old sleeve is to cut it off at the elbow, slash it and fill it in with closely gathered lace.

The loose hanging jacket effect is all the rage for gowns of lace or veiling. The little jacket is edged with narrow lace fringe, taffeta or satin ruching or chiffon applique. Accompanying it is always the wide swather belt of lustrous silk or velvet.

Accordion plaited waists and skirts are very smart for the slender woman, but no one else should attempt them. The accordion plaited skirts are especially pretty in crepe de chine or veiling with a nicely fitted hip yoke of lace.



CREPE DE CHINE DRESS.

Shirred skirts of the new chiffon voile have a pretty fullness broken by horizontal lines of embroidery done on bands of white taffeta or louisine. The girdle is formed of this, and it also appears on the fluffy waist in the shape of detached motifs.

The very latest thing in furs is a wide shawl-like scarf of ermine with long ends edged with chiffon, the whole being clasped in front by a jeweled slide. A hat recently seen with this kind of scarf was also of ermine trimmed with two large drooping silver tassels.

The illustration shows an evening dress of figured crepe de chine trimmed with chantilly lace and chiffon roses.

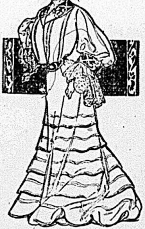
JUDIC CHOLLET.

DRESS TRIMMINGS.

Tassels, Cords, Braid, Lace Fringe and Ruchings All Popular.

Cloth gowns are almost invariably combined with beautiful embroideries of the same shade, particularly if the gown is of pale colored cloth and intended for dressy occasions. These embroideries are a feature of the princess gown in cloth. This gown very often in reality has its waist and skirt separate, but so draped and arranged that they appear as one.

Cords and tassels and all sorts of braids are favorite trimmings, and very few gowns are evolved by the best dressmakers without the addition of some of these fussy, dangling little ornaments.



CLOTH AND MOLESKIN GOWN.

Dyed lace and beautiful wide fringe constitute the trimming of many crepe de chine gowns. One of these seen recently was of pale blue crepe de chine trimmed with wide straight bands of cluny lace dyed to match. The tucked square yoke was edged with a wide fringe.

Moleskin is used to trim many gowns, especially those of gray cloth. The illustration shows a costume of this description, but in this case the moleskin bands are crossed with black and white braid. The very full skirt is trimmed with horizontal tucks.

SAM RICHARDSON DEAD.

Wm. Barrett, Known as Toronto's "Potato King." Also Passes Away.

Toronto, Feb. 13.—Two prominent lodge men have passed away. Samuel Richardson died yesterday morning. As the proprietor of the Richardson House, he was one of the best known residents of the West End. As an Orangeman and an Army Veteran, he was well-known all over the city. He was 62 years of age and was born in Ireland. About 35 years ago he came to this country with the 13th Hussars, bought himself out and went into the hotel business. He was a prominent Mason, a widely-known Orangeman and a Veteran of '66.

William Barrett, known throughout the city as the "Potato King," and who carried on business as a commission merchant on Colborne-street, will be buried this afternoon. He was born in Cavan County, Ireland, in 1828, and came to Canada in 1859; was for ten years a resident of Montreal, and then came to Toronto. Mr. Barrett was a prominent Orangeman, a Mason and a Veteran of '66.

Calling the Doctor.

It is a popular delusion that doctors are compelled to attend to any and every call made upon them. Nothing of the kind; but medical men very rarely refuse, although in many cases the chance of receiving a fee is remote. Street accidents or people suddenly taken ill (sometimes a malingerer) will make a kind hearted onlooker run to the nearest doctor for assistance, quite oblivious as to who is responsible for payment. As a matter of fact, the one who calls the doctor is liable.—London Tit-Bits.

Artists.

"I see that those New York society women have discovered a method of hiding their blushes."

"What is it?"

"They paint them over."

Let those who complain of having to work undertake to do nothing. If this does not convert them, nothing will.

Points About Sheep Raising.

To realize the greatest profit the sheep raiser must produce the kinds that are in demand. To this end he needs to study the market. Those breeds that meet with the readiest sale and command the highest prices are to be kept to the exclusion of all others. Even of these, only the best developed, longest and healthiest should be kept as breeders. Lambs come early in the year, some in January, and success with them depends on the capacity of the mothers to supply milk. If they are fed with proper variety of foods instead of too much dry straw, they will be in good condition. The best foods are sliced turnips, sugar beets and carrots.

The results I feel as if I could never be sufficiently thankful for, first to the Great Giver of all good and to you. "THE RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR"

EVANGELIST SHIELD'S SUBJECT FOR SUNDAY EVENING—LAST EVENING'S ADDRESS.

The services have been steadily increasing in power and interest during the week, and that of last evening was one of the most impressive that has been held. The theme of Mr. Shield's address was "Mind Your Own Business," and the text Lamentations 1.12. The words of the text expressed the sorrow of the prophet over the destruction of Jerusalem, and the desolation of the temple. They had a prophetic as well as a historic significance, and referred to the sorrow of Jesus when the temple of his body was destroyed. The sufferings of Jesus were incomparable to all others. He had endured all the suffering of a damned soul, and the fact that he was God as well as man, gave him a capacity for grief that enabled him to atone for the sin of the whole world. Mr. Shields announced that his subject for Sunday evening would be the "Russo-Japanese War."

CATARRH OF THE HEAD

Is very common, but awfully dangerous, because it causes deafness and leads to consumption. Cure is as certain to follow the use of Catarrhozone as day is to follow night. You simply breathe the fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which spreads through the nasal passages, throat and lungs, driving out every vestige of catarrh. "I was cured of chronic catarrh of the nose and throat," writes Ernest M. Wilkinson, of Laurencetown, "after many years of misery by Catarrhozone, which is a splendid remedy to free the air passages from mucous. Catarrhozone relieved quickly and my cure has been permanent." Price $1 for two months' treatment; trial size 25c.

THE QUESTION OF BALDNESS.

This is a vital question with hundreds of men or partially so. How to overcome the disfigurement lent by baldness is a simple matter when you consider the perfection of modern art in the making of Wigs and Toupees. The visit of Prof. Dorenwend, of Toronto, to Belleville on Friday, Feb. 19th, when he will be at the Hotel Quinte, renders it possible for anyone who wish to consult him to do so at his private apartments retained at Hotel Quinte for this purpose. Demonstration given to show the perfect naturalness of Wigs and Toupees. Do not miss this opportunity. Remember the days and dates, Friday, Feb. 19th. 1w-1d

DEATHS

ADAMS.—In Belleville, on Friday, Feb. 12, 1904, W. H. Adams, aged 53 years.

The funeral will take place (under the auspices of the A. F. and A. M.) from his late residence, McDonald Ave., on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Services at the house at 2.30.

A SERENELY HAPPY MAN

Is Mr. Thos. McGlashan, of North Pelham, who was cured of muscular rheumatism by Nerviline, the most powerful rheumatic remedy in the world. "I suffered all manner of pain for years," he writes, "and Nerviline was the only thing that did me any good. I can heartily recommend Nerviline for all forms of rheumatism; it goes to the very core of the pain and brings lasting relief. Let every sufferer from lame back, aching joints and swelled limbs use Nerviline. It's sure to cure and costs 25c for a large bottle.

So Many People Ask

Why on earth are you selling Wall Papers at HALF PRICE this time of the year.

WELL its just like this—We still have about 3,000 rolls of 1903 Wall Papers left and with our reputation for carrying the very newest in Wall Papers it would not pay us to put this small balance in with our 1904, and call them new.

We don't do that kind of business. We prefer giving our customers who are not so particular about having the very latest, these goods at bargains. So we are selling all 1903 papers this month at HALF of the regular prices, so as to start March with nothing but 1904 papers which are now flooding our warehouse.

All Fancy Goods and China—not Staple—for the balance of the month of February at Half regular price—this makes home beautifying doubly cheap.

Yours In Decorations

During the winter months our workmen have been kept unusually busy decorating some of the best homes of the city.

TO SAY THAT our decorative work is a success—is putting the matter mildly—you have just to witness this for yourself in observing any one of the many city homes we have given decorative attention during the past two years.

Our success is because of a knowledge of the decorative trade begot of study and experience both in wall hangings and the decorative art—the two go hand in hand—the one without the other is absolutely lost.

NO better time for you than the present for selecting new wall hangings now arriving.

No better time to have your work done than during the later winter months and the earlier spring.

We are prepared—with a liberal staff of experienced workmen—the best obtainable in their several branches and our prices will meet with your approval every time.
